INTRODUCTION.

Now that the fifth century since the death of Chaucer is almost completed, it seems high time that a serious attempt should be made to present to readers an edition of his Minor Poems in something like a reasonable spelling and with a sufficient quantity of illustration in the form of notes. Mr. Sweet has given us a few extracts from these, in his Second Middle-English Primer, but confesses that he has 'not attempted to forestall the inevitable German, who, it is to be hoped, will some day give us a critical edition of Chaucer.' Though I am perhaps to some extent disqualified, as being merely a native of London, in which city Chaucer himself was born, I hope I may be pardoned the temerity of attempting something in this direction. At the same time, it is only right to say that we owe something to Dr. John Koch, who produced 'A Critical Edition of some of Chaucer's Minor Poems,' published at Berlin in 1883. The only fault of this edition is that it contains so very little; the number of short poems in it is only ten, extending in all to 483 lines. It does not seem to be at all well known in England, and perhaps I should never have heard of it, but for the kindness of Dr. Koch himself, to whom I beg leave to return my best thanks, at the same time acknowledging my indebtedness to his researches. The present edition is of a fuller character, as it includes all of Chaucer's genuine poetical works with the exception of the three of most importance, that is to say, the Canterbury Tales, Troilus and Cressida, and the Legend of Good Women.

Just half an hour after writing the above sentences I received from Dr. Willert his edition of 'The House of Fame,' too late, unfortunately, to be of much assistance to me. See further below, with respect to that poem.

The first question that arises is, naturally, which of the Minor Poems are genuine? The list here given partly coincides with that adopted by Dr. Furnivall in the publications of the Chaucer Society. I have, however, added five, here numbered vi, xv, xxi, xxii, and xxiii; my reasons for doing so are given below, where each poem is discussed separately. At the same time, I have omitted the poem entitled 'The Mother of God,' by the advice of Dr. Furnivall himself; for although he once told us that 'no one can suppose that poor Hoccleve had the power of writing his Master's Mother of God,' there is clear evidence that it was written by the pupil, and not by the master. The only known copy of it is in a MS. now in the library of the late Sir Thomas Phillipps, which contains sixteen poems, all of which are by the same hand, viz. that of Hoccleve. After all, it is only a translation; still, it is well and carefully written, and the imitation of Chaucer's style is good. It was not, however, included among the poems from the same MS., in the edition of some of 'Occeleve's Poems' by G. Mason, in 1796. Among the unprinted poems, according to the editor's preface, is a similar hymn to the Virgin, beginning 'Modir of lyf!'

First, we must consider the external evidence generally.

TESTIMONY OF CHAUCER REGARDING HIS WORKS.

The most important evidence is that afforded by the poet himself. In an Introduction prefixed to the Man of Law's Prologue (printed in my edition of the Prioresses Tale, at p. 3), he says—

'In youth he made of Ceys and Alcioun'— a story which is preserved at the beginning of the Book of the Duchesse.

In the Prologue to the Legend of Good Women, he refers to his translation of the Romance of the Rose, and to his Troilus; and, according to MS. Fairfax 16, ll. 417-423, he says—

'He made the book that hight the Hous of Fame,
And eke the deeth of Blaunche the Duchesse,
And the Parlement of Foules, as I gesse,

¹ I note by the way that, in one of these poems, addressed to Sir J. Oldcastle, occurs the line—'Right as a spectacle helpeth feeble sighte'; an early reference to the use of spectacles. A 'Ballad' begins with—'Go litil pamfilet, and streight thee dresse'; giving an early spelling of pamphlet.

And al the love of Palamon and Arcite
 Of Thebes, thogh the story ys knowen lyte,
 And many an ympne for your halydayes
 That highten Balades, Roundels, Virelayes,' &c.

The rest of the passage does not immediately concern us, excepting ll. 427, 428, where we find—

' He made also, goon ys a grete while,
Origenes vpon the Maudeleyne.'

In the copy of the same Prologue, as extant in MS. Gg. 4. 27, in the Cambridge University Library, there are two additional lines, doubtless genuine, to this effect—

' And of the wrechede engendrynge of mankynde,
 As man may in pope Innocent I-fynde.'

There is also a remarkable passage at the end of his Persones Tale, the genuineness of which has been doubted by some, but it appears in the MSS., and I do not know of any sound reason for rejecting it. According to the Ellesmere MS., he here mentions—'the book of Troilus, the book also of Fame, the book of the xxv. Ladies¹, the book of the Duchesse, the book of seint Valentynes day of the parlement of briddes . . . the book of the Leoun . . . and many a song,' &c.

Besides this, in the House of Fame, l. 729, he mentions his own name, viz. 'Geffrey.' We thus may be quite certain as to the genuineness of this poem, the longest and most important of all the Minor Poems, and we may at once add to the list the Book of the Duchesse, the next in order of length, and the Parliament of Foules, which is the third in the same order.

We also learn that he composed some poems which have not come down to us, concerning which a few words may be useful.

1. 'Origenes vpon the Maudeleyne' must have been a translation from a piece attributed to Origen. In consequence, probably, of this remark of the poet, the old editions insert a piece called the 'Lamentacion of Marie Magdaleine,' which has no pretence to be considered Chaucer's, and may be summarily dismissed. It is sufficient to notice that it contains a considerable number of rimes such as are never found in his genuine works, as, for example, the dissyllabic *dy-e*¹ riming with why (st. 13); the plural adjective ken-e riming with y-ën, i. e. eyes, which would, with this Chaucerian pronunciation, be no rime at all (st. 19); and thirdly, disgised riming with rived, which is a mere assonance, and saves us from the trouble of further investigation (st. 25). See below, p. xxvi.

2. 'The wrechede engendrynge of mankynde' is obviously meant to describe a translation or imitation of the treatise by Pope Innocent III, entitled De Miseria Conditionis Humanae. The same treatise is referred to by Richard Rolle de Hampole, in his Pricke of Conscience, l. 498.

3. 'The book of the Leoun,' i. e. of the lion, was probably a translation of the poem called Le Dit du Lion by Machault; see the note to l. 1024 of the Book of the Duchesse in the present volume.

LYDGATE'S LIST OF CHAUCER'S POEMS.

The next piece of evidence is that given in what is known as 'Lydgate's list.' This is contained in a long passage in the prologue to his poem known as the 'Fall of Princes,' translated from the French version (by Laurens de Premierfait) of the Latin book by Boccaccio, entitled 'De Casibus Virorum Illustrium'². In this Lydgate commends his 'maister Chaucer,' and mentions many of his works, as, e. g. Troilus and Creseide, the translation of Boethius' De Consolatione Philosophiae, the treatise on the Astrolabe addressed to his 'sonne that called was Lowys,' the Legend of Good Women, and the Canterbury Tales. The whole passage is given in Morris's edition of Chaucer, vol. i. pp. 79-81; but I shall only cite so much of it as refers to the Minor Poems, and I take the opportunity of doing so directly, from an undated black-letter edition published by John Wayland.

² See the excellent treatise by Dr. E. Köppel entitled 'Laurens de Premierfait und John Lydgates Bearbeitungen von Boccaccios De Casibus Virorum Illustrium'; München, 1885.

- ' He wrote also full many a day agone
Dant in English, him-selfe doth so expresse,
 The piteous story of Ceix and Alcion :
 And the death also of Blaunche the duches :
 And notably [he] did his businesse
 By great auise his wittes to dispose,
 To translate the Romaynt of the Rose.
- ' Thus in vertue he set all his entent,
 Idelnes and vyces for to fle :
 Of fowles also he wrote the parliament,
 Therein remembring of royall Eagles thre,
 Howe in their choyse they felt aduersitye,
 To-fore nature profered the battayle,
 Eche for his partye, if it woulde auayle.
- ' He did also his diligence and payne
 In our vulgare to translate and endite
Orygene vpon the Maudelayn :
 And of the Lyon a boke he did write.
Of Annelida and of false Arcite
 He made a complaynt dolefull and piteous ;
 And of the broche which that Uulcanus
- ' At Thebes wrought, ful diuers of nature.
 Ouide¹ writeth : who-so thereof had a syght,
 For high desire, he shoulde not endure
 But he it had, neuer be glad ne light :
 And if he had it once in his myght,
 Like as my master sayth & writeth in dede,
 It to conserue he shoulde euer liue in dred.'

It is clear to me that Lydgate is, at first, simply repeating the information which we have already had upon Chaucer's own authority ; he begins by merely following Chaucer's own language in the extracts above cited. Possibly he knew no more than we do of 'Orygene vpon the Maudelayn,' and of the 'boke of the Lyon.' At any rate, he tells us no more about them. Naturally, in speaking of the Minor Poems, we should expect to find him following, as regards the three chief poems, the order of length ; that is, we should expect to find here a notice of (1) the House of Fame ; (2) the Book of the Duchesse ; and (3) the Parliament of Foules. We are naturally disposed to exclaim with Ten Brink (Studien, p. 152)—‘Why did he leave out the House of Fame?’ But we need not say with him, that ‘to this question I know of no answer.’ For it is perfectly clear to me, though I cannot find that any one else seems to have thought of it, that ‘Dante in English’ and ‘The House of Fame’ are one and the same poem, described in the same position and connexion. If anything about the House of Fame is clear at all, it is that (as Ten Brink so clearly points out, in his Studien, p. 89) the influence of Dante is more obvious in this poem than in any other. I would even go further and say that it is the only poem which owes its chief inspiration to Dante in the whole of English literature during, at least, the Middle-English period. There is absolutely nothing else to which such a name as ‘Dante in English’ can with any fitness be applied. The only thing at all odd about it, is that Lydgate should say—‘himselfe doth so expresse’; which seems somewhat too explicit. Perhaps he refers to the lines which really relate only to the description of hell, viz.—

‘Which who-so willeth for to knowe,
He moste rede many a rowe
On Virgile or on Claudian,
Or Daunte, that hit telle can’; ll. 447-450.

Or I should be quite willing to believe that Chaucer did, on some occasion, allude to his poem by the somewhat humorous title of ‘Dante in English,’ as confessing his indebtedness; and that Lydgate has preserved for us a record of the remark. That Chaucer expresses himself like Dante, may be all that is meant by the phrase ‘him-selfe doth so expresse.’ In any case, I refuse to take any other view until some competent critic will undertake to tell me, what poem of Chaucer’s, other than the House of Fame, can possibly be intended.

To which argument I have to add a second, viz. that Lydgate mentions the House of Fame in yet another way; for he refers to it at least three times, in clear terms, in other passages of the same poem, i. e. of the Fall of Princes.

‘Fame in her palice hath trumpes mo than one,
Some of golde, that geneth a freshe soun’; &c.
Book I. cap. 14.

‘Within my house called the house of Fame
The golden trumpet with blastes of good name

Enhaunceth on to ful hie parties,
Wher Iupiter sytteth among the heuently skies.

'Another trumpet of sownes full vengeable
Which bloweth vp at feastes funerall,
Nothing bright, but of colour sable'; &c.

Prol. to Book VI.

'The golden trumpe of the house of Fame¹
Through the world blew abroad his name.'

Book VI. cap. 15.

Lydgate describes the Parliament of Foules in terms which clearly shew that he had read it. He also enables us to add to our list the Complaint of Anelida and the Complaint of Mars; for it is the latter poem which contains the story of the broche of Thebes; see p. 70. We have, accordingly, complete authority for the genuineness of the five longest of the Minor Poems, which, as arranged in order of length, are these: The House of Fame (2158 lines); Book of the Duchesse (1334 lines); Parliament of Foules (699 lines); Anelida and Arcite (357 lines); and Complaint of Mars (298 lines). This gives us a total of 4846 lines, furnishing a very fair standard of comparison whereby to consider the claims to genuineness of other poems. Lydgate further tells us that Chaucer

'Made and compiled many a freshe dittie,
Complaynts, ballades, rounzels, vyrelaies.'

TESTIMONY OF JOHN SHIRLEY.

The next best evidence is that afforded by notes in the existing MSS.; and here, in particular, we should first consider the remarks by Chaucer's great admirer, John Shirley, who took considerable pains to copy out and preserve his poems, and is said by Stowe to have died Oct. 21, 1456, at the great age of ninety, so that he was born more than 30 years before Chaucer died. On his authority, we may attribute to Chaucer the A. B. C.; the Complaint to Pity (see p. 229); the Complaint of Mars (according to a heading in MS. T.); the Complaint of

Anelida (according to a heading in MS. Addit. 16165); the Lines to Adam, called in MS. T. 'Chauciers Wordes a. Geffrey vn-to Adam his owen scryveyne' (see p. 117); Fortune (see p. 374); Truth (see p. 380); Gentillesse (see p. 383); Lak of Stedfastnesse (see p. 386); the Compleint of Venus (see p. 392); and the Compleint to his Empty Purse (see p. 396). The MSS. due to Shirley are the Sion College MS., Trin. Coll. Cam. R. 3. 20, Addit. 16165, Ashmole 59, Harl. 78, Harl. 2251, and Harl. 7333.

TESTIMONY OF SCRIBES OF THE MSS.

The Fairfax MS. 16, a very fair MS. of the fifteenth century, contains several of the Minor Poems; and in this the name of Chaucer is written at the end of the poem on Truth (see p. 194) and of the Compleint to his Purse (see p. 211); it also appears in the title of Lenvoy de Chaucer a Scogon (see p. 201); in that of Lenvoy de Chaucer a Bukton (see p. 204); in that of the Compleint of Chaucer to his empty Purse (p. 210), and in that of 'Proverbe of Chaucer' (p. 398).

Again, the Pepys MS. no. 2006 attributes to Chaucer the A. B. C., the title there given being 'Pryer a nostre Dame, per Chaucer'; as well as the Compleint to his Purse, the title being 'La Compleint de Chaucer a sa Bourse Voide' (see p. 210). It also has the title 'Lenvoy de Chaucer a Scogon.'

The 'Former Age' is entitled 'Chawcer vp-on this fyfte metur of the second book' in the Cambridge MS. li. 3. 21; and at the end of the same poem is written 'Finit etas prima. Chaucers' in the Cambridge MS. Hh. 4. 12 (see p. 188). The poem on Fortune is also marked 'Causer' in the former of these MSS.; and in fact these two poems practically belong to Chaucer's translation of Boethius, though probably written at a somewhat later period.

The Cambridge MS. Gg. 4. 27, which contains an excellent copy of the Canterbury Tales, attributes to Chaucer the Parliament of Foules (see p. 99); and gives us the title 'Litera directa de Scogon per G. C.' (see p. 201). Of course 'G. C.' is Geoffrey Chaucer.

From Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 13, we learn that there is a verse translation of De Deguileville's Pèlerinage de la Vie Humaine, attributed to Lydgate, in MS. Cotton, Vitellius C.

XIII. (leaf 256), in which the 'A. B. C.' is distinctly attributed to Chaucer¹.

TESTIMONY OF CAXTON.

At p. 116 of the same Trial Forewords is a description by Mr. Bradshaw of a very rare edition by Caxton of some of Chaucer's Minor Poems. It contains: (1) Parliament of Foules; (2) a treatise by Scogan, in which Chaucer's 'Gentillesse' is introduced; (3) a single stanza of 7 lines, beginning—'Wyth empty honde men may no hawkes lure'; (4) Chaucer's 'Truth,' entitled—'The good counceyl of Chawcer'; (5) the poem on 'Fortune'; and (6) part of Lenvoy to Scogan, viz. the first three stanzas. The volume is imperfect at the end. As to the article No. 3, it was probably included because the first line of it is quoted from l. 415 of the Wyf of Bathes Prologue (Cant. Ta. 5997).

At p. 118 of the same is another description, also by Mr. Bradshaw, of a small quarto volume printed by Caxton, consisting of only ten leaves. It contains: (1) Anelida and Arcite, ll. 1-210; (2) The Compleint of Anelida, being the continuation of the former, ll. 211-350, where the poem ends; (3) The Compleint of Chaucer vnto his empty purse, with an Envoy headed—'Thenuoye of Chaucer vnto the kynge'; (4) Three² couplets, beginning—'Whan feyth failleth in prestes sawes,' and ending—'Be brought to grete confusiozn'; (5) Two couplets, beginning—'Hit falleth for euery gentilman,' and ending—'And the soth in his presence'; (6) Two couplets, beginning—'Hit cometh by kynde of gentil b'ode,' and ending—'The werk of wisdom berith witnes'; followed by—'Et sic est finis.' The last three articles only make fourteen lines in all, and are of little importance³.

EARLY EDITIONS OF CHAUCER'S WORKS.

The first collected edition of Chaucer's Works is that edited by W. Thynne in 1532, but there were earlier editions of his separate poems. The best account of these is that which I

¹ Hoccleve's poem entitled 'Moder of God' is erroneously attributed to Chaucer in two Scottish copies (Arch. Seld. B 24, and Edinb. 18. 2. 8).

² Printed 'Six couplets'; clearly a slip of the pen.

³ They are printed in full below, on p. xxxiv.

here copy from a note on p. 70 of Furnivall's edition of F. Thynne's 'Animaduersions vpon the Annotacions and Correc-tions of some imperfections of impressones of Chaucer's Workes'; published for the Chaucer Society in 1875.

Only one edition of Chaucer's Works had been published before the date of Thynne's, 1532, and that was Pynson's in 1526, without a general title, but containing three parts, with separate signatures, and seemingly intended to sell separately; 1. the boke of Canterbury tales; 2. the boke of Fame . . . with dyuers other of his workes [i. e. Assemble of Foules¹, La Belle Dame², Morall Prouerbes]; 3. the boke of Troylus and Cryseyde. But of separate works of Chaucer before 1532, the following had been published:—

Canterbury Tales. 1. Caxton, about 1477-8, from a poor MS.;

2. Caxton, ab. 1483, from a better MS.; 3. Pynson, ab. 1493; 4. Wynkyn de Worde, 1498; 5. Pynson, 1526.

Book of Fame. 1. Caxton, ab. 1483; 2. Pynson, 1526.

Troylus. 1. Caxton, ab. 1483; 2. Wynkyn de Worde, 1517; 3. Pynson, 1526.

*Parliament of Foules*³. 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8; 2. Pynson, 1526; 3. Wynkyn de Worde, 1530.

*Gentilnesse*³ (in Scogan's poem). 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8.

*Truth*³. (The good counceyl of chawcer). 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8.

*Fortune*³. (Balade of the vilage (sic) without peynting). 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8.

*Envoy to Skogan*³. 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8 (all lost, after the third stanza).

*Anelida and Arcyte*⁴. 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8.

² La Belle Dame sans Merci, a poem translated from the French originally written by 'Maister Aleyn,' chief secretary to the King of France. Certainly not by Chaucer; for Alain Chartier, the author of the original French poem, was only fourteen years old when Chaucer died.

³ All in Caxton's edition of the Minor Poems, described above, p. xv.

After Thynne's first edition of the Works in 1532 (printed by Thomas Godfray), came his second in 1542 (for John Reynes and Wyllyam Bonham), to which he added 'The Plowman's Tale' after the Parson's Tale.

Then came a reprint for the booksellers (Wm. Bonham, R. Kele, T. Petit, Robert Toye), about 1550, which put the Plowman's Tale before the Parson's. This was followed by an edition in 1561 for the booksellers (Ihon Kyngston, Henry Bradsha, citizen and grocer of London, &c.), to which, when more than half printed, Stowe contributed some fresh pieces, the spurious Court of Love, Lydgate's Sege of Thebes, and other poems. Next came Speght's edition of 1598—on which William Thynne comments in his Animadversions—which added the spurious 'Dreme,' and 'Flower and Leaf.' This was followed by Speght's second edition, in 1602, in which Francis Thynne helped him, and to which were added Chaucer's 'A. B. C.', and the spurious 'Jack Upland'.¹ Jack Upland had been before printed, with Chaucer's name on the title-page, about 1536-40 (London, J. Gough, no date, 8vo).

In an Appendix to the Preface to Tyrwhitt's edition of the Canterbury Tales, there is a similar account of the early editions of Chaucer, to which the reader may refer. He quotes the whole of Caxton's preface to his second edition of the Canterbury Tales, shewing how Caxton reprinted the book because he had meanwhile come upon a more correct MS. than that which he had first followed.

If we now briefly consider all the earlier editions, we find that they may be thus tabulated.

COLLECTED WORKS. Pynson's edition of 1526, containing only a portion, as above; La Belle Dame being spurious. Also the following:—

1. Ed. by Wm. Thynne; London, 1532. Folio. Pr. by Godfray.
2. Reprinted, with additional matter; London, 1542. Folio. The chief addition is the spurious Plowman's Tale.
3. Reprinted, with the matter rearranged; London, no date, about 1550. Folio.

4. Reprinted, with large additions by John Stowe. London, 1561. Folio. (See further below.)

5. Reprinted, with additions and alterations by Thomas Speght; London, 1598. Folio.

Here, for the first time, appear 'Chaucer's Dream' and 'The Flower and the Leaf'; both are spurious.

6. Reprinted, with further additions and alterations by Thomas Speght; London, 1602. Folio.

Here, for the first time, appear the spurious Jack Upland¹, and the genuine A. B. C.

7. Reprinted, with slight additions; London, 1687. Folio.

8. Reprinted, with additions and great alterations in spelling, by John Urry; London, 1721. Folio.

This edition is the worst that has appeared. It is not necessary for our purpose to enumerate the numerous later editions. An entirely new edition of the Canterbury Tales was produced by Thomas Tyrwhitt in 1775-8, in 5 vols., 8vo.; to which all later editions have been much indebted².

The manner in which these editions were copied one from the other renders it no very difficult task to describe the whole contents of them accurately. The only important addition in the editions of 1542 and 1550 is the spurious Plowman's Tale, which in no way concerns us. Again, the only important additional poems after 1561 are the spurious Chaucer's Dream, The Flower and the Leaf, and the genuine A. B. C. The two representative editions are really those of 1532 and 1561. Now the edition of 1561 consists of two parts; the former consists of a reprint from former editions, and so differs but little from the edition of 1532; whilst the latter part consists of additional matter furnished by John Stowe. Hence a careful examination of the edition of 1561 is, practically, sufficient to give us all the information which we need. I shall therefore give a complete table of the contents of this edition.

² I have often made use of a handy edition with the following title-page: 'The Poetical Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, with an Essay on his Language and Versification and an Introductory Discourse, together with Notes and a Glossary. By Thomas Tyrwhitt. London, Edward Moxon, Dover Street, 1855.' I cannot but think that this title-page may have misled others, as it for a long time misled myself. As a fact, Tyrwhitt never edited anything beyond the Canterbury Tales, though he has left us some useful notes upon the Minor Poems, and his Glossary covers the whole ground. The Minor Poems in this edition are merely reprinted from the black-letter editions.

PART I. REPRINTED MATTER.

1. Caunterburie Tales. (The Prologue begins on a page with the signature A 2, the first quire of six leaves not being numbered; the Knightes Tale begins on a page with the signature B ii., and marked Fol. i. The spurious Plowman's Tale precedes the Parson's Tale).

2. *The Romaunt of the Rose*². Fol. cxvi.

3. Troilus and Creseide. Fol. cli., back.

4. The testament of Creseide. [By Robert Henryson.] Fol. cxci. Followed by its continuation, called The Complaint of Creseide; by the same.

5. The Legende of Good Women. Fol. cxcvij.

6. A goodlie balade of Chaucer; beginning—'Mother of norture, best beloued of all.' Fol. ccx.

7. Boecius de Consolatione Philosophie. Fol. ccx., back.

8. The dreame of Chaucer. [The Book of the Duchesse.] Fol. ccxliij.

9. Begins—'My master. &c. When of Christ our kyng?' [Lenvoy to Buckton.] Fol. ccxliiii.

10. The assemble of Foules. [Parlement of Foules.] Fol. ccxliiii., back.

11. The Floure of Curtesie, made by Ihon lidgate. Fol. ccxlvij. Followed by a Balade, which forms part of it.

12. How pyte is deed, etc. [Complaint vnto Pite.] Fol. ccxlix., back.

¹ Probably copies slightly differ. The book described by me is a copy in my own possession, somewhat torn at the beginning, and imperfect at the end. But the three missing leaves only refer to Lydgate's Storie of Thebes.

² I print in italics the names of the pieces which I reject as spurious.

13. La belle Dame sans Mercy. [By Sir R. Ros.] Fol. ccl.
14. Of Quene Annelida and false Arcite. Fol. cclv.
15. The assemble of ladies. Fol. ccxlvij.
16. The conclusions of the Astrolabie. Fol. cclxi.
17. The complaint of the blacke Knight. [By Lydgate; see p. xlv.] Fol. cclxx.
18. A praise of Women. Begins—'Al tho the lyste of women euill to speke.' Fol. cclxxiii.¹, back.
19. The House of Fame. Fol. cclxxiiij., back.
20. The Testament of Loue (in prose). Fol. cclxxxiiij., back.
21. The lamentacion of Marie Magdaleine. Fol. cccxviiij.
22. The remedie of Loue. Fol. cccxxj., back.
- 23, 24. The complaint of Mars and Venus. Fol. cccxxiiij., back. (Printed as one poem; but there is a new title—The complaint of Venus—at the beginning of the latter).
25. The letter of Cupide. [By Hoccleve; dated 1402.] Fol. cccxxvj., back.
26. A Ballade in commendacion of our Ladie. Fol. cccxxix.
27. Ihon Gower vnto the noble King Henry the .iiij. Fol. cccxxx, back.
28. A sayng of dan Ihon. [By Lydgate.] Fol. cccxxxii., back. [Nos. 28, 29, 30 were first printed in 1561.]
29. Yet of the same. [By Lydgate.] On the same page.
30. Balade de bon consail. Begins—If it be fall that God the list visite. (Only 7 lines.) On the same page.
31. Of the Cuckowe and the Nightingale. Fol. cccxxxiiij.
32. Balade with Envoy (no title). Begins—'O leude booke with thy foule rudenesse.' Fol. cccxxxiiij., back.
33. Scogan, vnto the Lordes and Gentilmen of the Kinges house. (This poem, by H. Scogan, quotes Chaucer's 'Gentillesse' in full). Fol. cccxxxiiij., back.
34. Begins—'Somtyme the worlde so stedfast was and stable.' [Lak of Stedfastnesse]. Fol. cccxxxv., back.
35. Good counsail of Chaucer. [Truth.] Same page.
36. Balade of the village (sic) without paintyng. [Fortune.] Fol. cccxxxvj.
37. Begins—'Tobroken been the statutes hie in heauen'; headed Lenuoye. [Lenvoy to Scogan.] Fol. cccxxxvj., back.

38. Poem in two stanzas of seven lines each. Begins—'Go forth the kyng, rule thee by Sapience.' Same page.

39. Chaucer to his emptie purse. Same page.

40. A balade of good counseile translated out of Latin verses in-to Englishe, by Dan Ihon lidgat cleped the monke of Buri. Begins—'CONsyder well euery circumstaunce.' Fol. cccxxxvij.

41. A balade in the Praise and commendacion of master Geffray Chauser for his golden eloquence. (Only 7 lines.) Same leaf, back. [See p. xliv.]

PART II. ADDITIONS BY JOHN STOWE.

At the top of fol. cccxl. is the following remark :—

¶ Here foloweth certaine woorkes of Geffray Chauser, whiche hath not heretofore been printed, and are gathered and added to this booke by Ihon Stowe. [He also added nos. 28–30.]

42. A balade made by Chaucer, teching what is gentilnes¹. [Gentillesse.] Fol. cccxl.

43. A Prouerbe [read Prouerbs] agaynst couitise and negligence. [Proverbs.] Same page.

44. A balade which Chaucer made agaynst women vnconstaunt. Same page.

45. A balade which Chaucer made in the praise or rather dispraise, of women for ther doublenes. [By Lydgate.] Begins—'This world is full of variaunce.' Same page.

46. This werke folowinge was compiled by Chaucer, and is caled the craft of louers. Fol. cccxli.

47. A Balade. Begins—'Of their nature they greatly them delite.' Fol. cccxli., back.

48. The .x. Commaundementes of Loue. Fol. cccxliij.

49. The .ix. Ladies worthie. Fol. cccxliij., back.

50. [Virelai; no title.] Begins—'Alone walkyng.' Fol. cccxliij.

51. A Ballade. Begins—'In the season of Feuerere when it was full colde.' Same page.

52. A Ballade. Begins—'O Mercifull and o merciabile.' Fol. cccxliij., back. [See p. xlvi.]

53. Here foloweth how Mercurie with Pallas, Venus and

¹ Stowe did not observe that this occurs already, in the midst of poem no. 33.

Minarua, appered to Paris of Troie, he slepyng by a fountain.
Fol. cccxliij.

54. A balade pleasaunte. Begins—'I haue a Ladie where so she bee.' Same page. At the end—'Explicit the discruyng of a faire Ladie.'

55. An other Balade. Begins—'O Mossie Quince, hangyng by your stalke.' Fol. cccxliij., back.

56. A balade, warnyng men to beware of deceitpfull women (sic). Begins—'LOke well aboute ye that louers bee.' Same page.

57. These verses next folowing were compiled by Geffray Chauser, and in the writen copies foloweth at the ende of the complainte of petee. Begins—'THE long nyghtes when eury [c]reature.' [See p. 213.] Fol. cccxlv¹.

58. A balade declaring that wemens chastite Doeth moche excel all treasure worldly. Begins—'IN womanhede as auc-tours al write.' Back of same leaf.

59. The Court of Loue. Begins—'With temerous herte, and trembling hand of drede.' Fol. cccxlvij.

60. Chaucers woordes vnto his owne Scriuener². (See p. 117.) Fol. ccclv., back. At the end—Thus endeth the workes of Geffray Chaucer. (This is followed by 34 Latin verses, entitled Epitaphium Galfridi Chaucer, &c.)

61. The Storie of Thebes. [By Lydgate.] Fol. ccclvj.

DISCUSSION OF THE POEMS IN PART I. OF ED. 1561.

Of the 41 pieces in Part I. of the above, we must of course accept as Chaucer's the three poems entitled Canterbury Tales, Troilus, and the Legend of Good Women; also the prose translation of Boethius, and the prose treatise on the Astrolabie. The remaining number of Minor Poems (including the Romaunt of the Rose) is 36; out of which number I accept the 14 numbered above with the numbers 8, 9, 10, 12, 14, 19, 23, 24, 33 (so far as it quotes Chaucer), 34, 35, 36, 37, and 39. Every one of these has already been shewn to be genuine on sufficient external evidence, and it is not likely that their genuineness will be doubted. In the present volume they appear, respectively, as nos. III, XVII, V, II, VII, IX, IV, XVIII, XIII, XIV, XII, XI, XVI, and XIX. Of the remaining 22, several may be dismissed in a few words. No. 4 is well known to have been written by Robert Henryson. Nos. 11, 28, 29, and 40 are distinctly claimed for Lydgate in all the editions; and no. 27 is similarly claimed for Gower. No. 25 was written by Hoccleve¹; and the last line gives the date—'A thousande, foure hundred and seconde,' i. e. 1402, or two years after Chaucer's death. No. 13 is translated from Alain Chartier, who was fourteen years old when Chaucer died; see p. xvi., note 2. Tyrwhitt remarks that, in MS. Harl. 372, this poem is expressly attributed to a Sir Richard Ros². No one can suppose that no. 41 is by Chaucer, seeing that the first line is—'Maister Geffray Chauser, that now lithe in graue.' Mr. Bradshaw once assured me that no. 17 is ascribed, on MS. authority, to Lydgate; and no one who reads it with care can doubt that this is correct³. It is, in a measure, an imitation of the Book of the Duchesse; and it contains some interesting references to Chaucer, as in the lines—'Of Arcite, or of him Palemoun,' and 'Of Thebes eke the false Arcite.' No. 20, i. e. the Testament of Love, is in prose, and does not concern us; still it is worth pointing out that it contains a passage (near the end) such as we cannot suppose that Chaucer would have written concerning himself⁴.

¹ Miscalled Fol. cccxxxix. Also, the next folio is called cccxlvij, after which follows cccclix, and so on.

³ I have found the reference. It is Shirley who says so, in a poetical 'introduction'; see MS. Addit. 16165, fol. 3.

After thus removing from consideration nos. 4, 11, 13, 17, 20, 25, 27, 28, 29, 40, and 41, half of the remaining 22 pieces have been considered. The only ones left over for consideration are nos. 2, 6, 15, 18, 21, 22, 26, 30, 31, 32, 38. As to nos. 2 and 6, there is some external evidence in their favour, which will be considered separately; but as to the rest, there is absolutely nothing to connect them with Chaucer beyond their almost accidental appearance in an edition by Wm. Thynne, published in 1532, i. e. one hundred and thirty-two years after Chaucer's death; and it has just been demonstrated that Thynne is obviously wrong in at least eleven instances, and that he wittingly and purposely chose to throw into his edition poems which he knew to have been written by Lydgate or by Gower! It is ridiculous to attach much importance to such testimony as this. And now let me discuss, as briefly as I can, the above-named poems separately.

2. The Romaunt of the Rose. Chaucer himself tells us that he translated the Romaunt of the Rose from the original French, but there is nothing to prove that the two fragments of the existing English translation form any part of Chaucer's work. The first fragment, which I shall call A, consists of 5810 lines, and the second fragment B, of 1888 lines (see note on p. 245); the two fragments being separated by a gap of more than 5000 lines. Even if this were really all Chaucer's work, it would be excluded from this volume as not being one of the minor, but of the major, poems; but there is a great deal to be said against its genuineness, which I need not here repeat, having already printed a long note on this subject at the end of the preface to my edition of the Prioresses Tale. I will, however, take the opportunity of remarking that, in a painstaking article which appeared in Englische Studien, xi. 163, Lindner has made it appear to be highly probable that the fragments A and B are by different hands; so that those who support the claims of Chaucer to this work will have, in future, to elect which fragment it will please them to assign to him. Lindner leaves this an open question for the present, but hints pretty clearly that he is inclined to associate Chaucer with fragment A, apparently on the ground that it is the more correctly translated. Unfortunately, it is precisely from fragment A that all the most damaging arguments against Chaucer's association with the work can be drawn. It is there that we meet with the riming of -y with yē, with the use of assonant rimes, with the use of such strange rimes as joynt and queynt, doun and tourne, &c., with such a use of the final -e as is inconsistent with Chaucer's practice, and with the Northumbrian present participles sittand and doand at the end of lines! Neither is it at all a sound argument to rely upon, that Chaucer's translation was necessarily correct; in his A. B. C., l. 100, he translates tirelire by 'melodye' when it means a money-box, and in his Boethius he translates the Latin clavus by keye, and compendium (gain) by abreggyng; see Morris's preface, p. xv. [But Kaluza has shewn that the Romaunt really consists of three fragments, of which A (ll. 1-1705) is genuine; B (ll. 1706-5810) is spurious; and C (ll. 5811-7698) is doubtful. I cannot as yet concede that fragment C is genuine.]

6. A goodlie balade of Chaucer; begins—'Mother of norture, best beloued of all'; printed in Morris's edition, vi. 275; and in Bell's edition, iii. 413. I have little to say against this poem; yet the rime of supposeth with riseth (st. 8) is somewhat startling. It is clearly addressed to a lady named *Margaret*¹, as appears from her being likened to the daisy, and called the sun's daughter. I suspect it was merely attributed to Chaucer by association with the opening lines of the Legend of Good Women. The suggestion, in Bell's Chaucer, that it possibly refers to the Countess of Pembroke, is one of those bad guesses which are discreditable. Tyrwhitt shews, in note n to his 'Appendix to the Preface,' that she must have died not later than 1370, whereas this Balade must be much later than that date; and I agree with him in supposing that le Dit de la fleur de lis et de la Marguerite, by Guillaume de Machault (printed in Tarbé's edition, 1849, p. 123), and the Dittié de la flour de la Margherite, by Froissart, may furnish us with the true key to those mystical compliments which Chaucer and others were accustomed to pay to the daisy.

I wish to add that I am convinced that one stanza, probably the sixth, is missing. It ought to form a triple Balade, i. e. three Balades of 21 lines each, each with its own refrain; but the second is imperfect. There seems to be some affectation about the letters beginning the stanzas which I cannot solve; these are M, M, M (probably for Margaret) in the first Balade; D, D in the second; and J, C, Q in the third. The poet goes out of his way to bring in these letters. The result looks like Margaret de Jacques.

15. The assemble of Ladies. This poem Tyrwhitt decisively rejects. There is absolutely nothing to connect it with Chaucer. It purports to have been written by 'a gentlewoman'; and perhaps it was. It ends with the rime of done, pp., with some (soon); which in Chaucer are spelt doon and son-e respectively, and never rime. Most of the later editions omit this poem. It is conveniently printed in Chalmers' English Poets, vol. i. p. 526; and consists of 108 7-line stanzas.

18. A praise of Women. In no way connected with Chaucer. Rejected by Tyrwhitt. Printed in Bell's edition, iv. 416, and in Chalmers' English Poets, vol. i. p. 344. In 25 7-line stanzas. The rime of lie (to tell a lie) with sie (I saw), in st. 20, is suspicious; Chaucer has ly-e, sy. The rime of queen-e (dissyllabic in Chaucer) with beene (miswritten for been, they be, st. 23) is likewise suspicious. It contains the adjective sere, i.e. various (st. 11), which Chaucer never uses.

21. The lamentacion of Marie Magdaleine. Printed in Bell's Chaucer, iv. 395; and in Chalmers, i. 532. Tyrwhitt's remarks are admirable. He says, in his Glossary, s.v. Origenes:—'In the list of Chaucer's Works, in Legend of Good Women, l. 427, he says of himself:—

"He made also, gon is a grete while, Origenes upon the Maudeleine"— meaning, I suppose, a translation, into prose or verse, of the Homily de Maria Magdalena, which has been commonly, though falsely, attributed to Origen; v. Opp. Origenis, T. ii. p. 291, ed. Paris, 1604. I cannot believe that the poem entitled The Lamentation of Marie Magdaleine, which is in all the [older] editions of Chaucer, is really that work of his. It can hardly be considered as a translation, or even as an imitation, of the Homily; and the composition, in every respect, is infinitely meaner than the worst of his genuine pieces.' To those who are interested in Chaucer's rimes I will merely point out the following: die, why (Ch. dy-e, why); kene, iyen (Ch. ken-e, y-ën); disguised, to-rived, a mere assonance; crie, incessantly

(Ch. cry-ë, incessantly); slaine, paine (Ch. slein, pein-e); y-fet, let (Ch. y-fet, let-te); accept, bewept, (Ch. accept-e, bewept); die, mihi (Ch. dy-e, mihi). To those interested in Chaucer's language, let me point out 'dogges rabiate'—'embesile his presence'—'my souveraine and very gentilman.' See st. 34, 39, 99.

22. The remedie of Loue. Printed in Chalmers' British Poets, i. 539. In 62 7-line stanzas. Rejected by Tyrwhitt. The language is extremely late; it seems to have been written in the 16th century. It contains such words as incongruitie, deduction, allective, can't (for cannot), scribable (fit for writing on), olibane, pant, babé (baby), cokold (which Chaucer spells cokewold), ortographie, ethimologie, ethimologise (verb). The provincial word lait, to search for, is well known to belong to the Northern dialect. Dr. Murray, s.v. allective, dates this piece about A.D. 1560; but it must be somewhat earlier than this, as it was printed in 1532. I should date it about 1530.

26. A Ballade in commendacion of our Ladie. Tyrwhitt remarks that 'a poem with the same beginning is ascribed to Lydgate, under the title of Invocation to our Lady; see Tanner, s.v. Lydgate.' The poem consists of 35 7-line stanzas. It has all the marks of Lydgate's style, and imitates Chaucer's language. Thus the line—'I have none English conuenient and digne' is an echo of the Man of Law's Tale, l. 778—'O Donegild, I ne haue noon English digne.' Some of the lines imitate Chaucer's A.B.C. But the most remarkable thing is his quotation of the first line of Chaucer's Merciless Beauty (see pp. 100, 309). [No. 26 really consists of two Ballads, both by Lydgate.]

30. Balade de bon conseil. Printed in Chalmers, i. 552. Only 7 lines, and here they are, duly edited:—

'If it befall that God thee list visite
With any tourment or aduersitee,
Thank first the Lord, and [fond] thy-self to quite;
Upon suffraunce and humillitee
Fonnd thou thy quarel, what ever that it be;
Mak thy defence, and thou shalt have no losse,
The remembraunce of Christ and of his crosse.'

In l. 1, ed. 1561 has the; 2. aduersite; 3. Thanke; lorde; I supply fond, i.e. endeavour; thy-selfe; 4. (scans ill); 5. Founde; 6. Make.

31. Of the Cuckowe and the Nightingale. Printed in Bell's Chaucer, iv. 334; and in Morris's Chaucer, iv. 75. Not uncommon in MSS.; there is a copy in MS. Ff. 1. 6 in the Cambridge University Library; another in MS. Fairfax 16; another in MS. Bodley 638; another in MS. Tanner 346; and a fifth (imperfect) in MS. Arch. Selden B. 24, in the Bodleian Library. (It is not, as I once said, in MS. Harl. 7333.) From some of these, Morris's better text was constructed; see his edition, pref. p. ix.

That the first two lines are by Chaucer, we cannot doubt, for they are quoted from the Knights Tale, ll. 927, 928. Chaucer often quotes his own lines, but it is not likely that he would take them as the subject of a new poem. On the other hand, this is just what we should expect one of his imitators to do. The present poem is a very fair imitation of Chaucer's style, and follows his peculiarities of metre far more closely than is usually the case with Lydgate. The notion, near the end, of holding a parliament of birds, with the Eagle for lord, is evidently borrowed from Chaucer's Parliament of Fowles. I can see but one known author with whom we can connect this poem, viz. Hoccleve. I believe that it was written at much about the same period as his Letter of Cupid (no. 25 above), i. e. about 1402; and I think it is connected with that poem in a way not hitherto observed. In MS. Bodley 638, the Cuckoo and Nightingale is not called by this name, but is headed 'The boke of Cupide god of loue,' fol. 11, back; whilst the Letter of Cupid is called 'The lettre of Cupide god of loue,' fol. 38, back. The copy in the Fairfax MS. ends with the colophon—Explicit liber Cupidinis. There is at least a presumption that the Book of Cupid and the Letter of Cupid are in some way connected. It so happens that the copy in MS. Ff. 1. 6 attributes the poem to 'Clanvowe.' This was probably Sir Thomas Clanvowe, who was a person of some importance in the time of Henry IV; and Sir John Clanvowe is mentioned in a document which also mentions Hoccleve (Poems, ed. Furnivall, p. x). The rimes are mostly Chaucerian; but the rime of day with the gerund to assay-e in st. 11 is suspicious; so also is that of gren-e with been in st. 13.

One point about this poem is its very peculiar metre; the 5-line stanza, riming aabba, is certainly rare. If the question arises, whence is it copied, the answer is clear, viz. from Chaucer's Envoy to his Complaint to his Purse (see p. 211). This is a further reason for dating it later than 1399.

32. Balade with envoy; 'O leude book,' &c. A Balade in the usual form, viz. 3 7-line stanzas, with a refrain; the refrain is—'For of all good she is the best liuyng.' The envoy consists of only 6 lines, instead of 7, rimed ababcc, and that for a sufficient reason, which has not been hitherto observed. The initial letters of the lines form, in fact, an anagram on the name ALISON; which is therefore the name of the lady to whom the Balade is addressed. There is a copy of this poem in MS. Fairfax 16, and another in MS. Tanner 346. It is therefore as old as the 15th century. But to attribute to Chaucer the fourth line of the Envoy would be too much. It runs thus—'Suspires whiche I effund in silence.'

38. Poem in two 7-line stanzas. There is nothing to connect this with Chaucer; and it is utterly unworthy of him. I now quote the whole poem, just as it stands in the edition of 1561:—

'Go foorthe king, rule thee by Sapience,
Bishoppe, be able to minister doctrine,
Lorde, to true counsale yeue audience,
Womanhode, to chastitie euer encline;
Knight, let thy deedes worship determine;
Be righteous, Iudge, in sauynge thy name;
Rich, do almose, lest thou lese blisse wit^h shame.

'People, obeie your kyng and the lawe;
Age, be ruled by good religion;
True seruaunt, be dredfull & kepe the vnder awe;
And, thou poore, fie on presumpcion;
Inobedience to youth is vtter destruccion;
Remember you, how God hath set you, lo!
And doe your parte, as ye be ordained to.'

Surely it must be Lydgate's.

I have now gone through all the poems published in 1532 and copied into the later editions; and I see no way of augmenting the list of Chaucer's Minor Poems any further from this source.

DISCUSSION OF THE POEMS IN PART II. OF ED. 1561.

It is hardly worth while to discuss at length all the poems which it pleased John Stowe to fling together into the edition of 1561. But a few remarks may be useful.

Nos. 42, 43, and 60 are admittedly genuine; and are printed below, nos. XIII., XX., and VIII. I believe nos. 44 and 57 to be so also; they are discussed below, and are printed as nos. XV. and XXI. No. 61 is, of course, Lydgate's. Besides this, no. 45 is correctly ascribed to Lydgate in the MSS.; there are copies of it in MS. Fairfax 16 and in MS. Ashmole 59. No. 56 is also Lydgate's, and is so marked in MS. Harl. 2251. As to no. 46, called the Craft of Lovers, it is dated by help of two lines in the last stanza, which are thus printed by Stowe:—

‘In the yere of our lorde a .M. by rekeninge
CCCXL. .&. UIII. yere folowing.’

This seems to give the date as 1348; whereas the language is palpably that of the fifteenth century. Whether Stowe or his printer thought fit to alter the date intentionally, I cannot say. Still, the fact is, that in the MS. marked R. 3. 19 in Trinity College Library, at fol. 156, the reading is ‘CCCCXL & VIII yere,’ so that the true date is rather 1448, or nearly half a century after Chaucer's death¹. The same MS., which I suppose belonged to Stowe, contains several other of these pieces, viz. nos. 48, 49, 50, 51, 53, 54, 55, 56, and perhaps others. The language and, in some cases, the ruggedness of the metre, forbid us to suppose that Chaucer can have had anything to do with them, and some are palpably of a much later date; one or more of these considerations at once exclude all the rest of Stowe's additions. It may, however, be noted that no. 47 quotes the line ‘Beware alwaye, the blind eats many a fly,’ which occurs as a refrain in no. 56, and it is therefore later than the time of Lydgate. The author of no. 48 says he is ‘a man vnknowne.’ Many lines in no. 49 are of abnormal length; it begins with—‘Profulgent in preciousnes, O Sinope the queen.’ The same is true of no. 51, which is addressed to a Margaret, and begins with—'In the season of Feuerere when it was full colde.' Of no. 52, Tyrwhitt says that the four first stanzas are found in different parts of an imperfect poem upon the Fall of Man, in MS. Harl. 2251; whilst the 11th stanza makes part of an Envoy, which in the same MS. is annexed to the poem entitled the Craft of Lovers. No. 53 is a poor affair. No. 54, called a Balade Pleasaunte, is very unpleasant and scurrilous, and alludes to the wedding of 'queene lane' as a circumstance that happened many years ago. No. 55 is scurrilous, odious, and stupid. I doubt if no. 58 is good enough for Lydgate. No. 59 belongs to the sixteenth century.

All the poems here rejected were rejected by Tyrwhitt, with two strange exceptions, viz. nos. 50 and 59, the Virelai and the Court of Love. Of both of these, the language is quite late. The Virelai is interesting from a metrical point of view, because such poems are scarce; the only similar poem that I can call to mind is the Balet (or rather Virelai) composed by Lord Rivers during his imprisonment in 1483, and printed by Percy in his Reliques of Ancient English Poetry. Percy says that Lord Rivers copies the Virelai mentioned above, which he assumes to be Chaucer's; but it is quite as likely that the copying was in the other direction, and that Lord Rivers copied some genuine Virelai (either Chaucer's or in French) that is now lost¹. The final rime of end with find is bad enough; but the supposition that the language is of the 14th century is ridiculous. Still the Virelai is good in its way, though it can hardly be older than 1500, and may be still later.

Of all poems that have been falsely ascribed to Chaucer, I know of none more amazing than The Court of Love. The language is palpably that of the 16th century, and there are absolutely no examples of the occurrence in it of a final -e that is fully pronounced, and forms a syllable! Yet there are critics who lose their heads over it, and will not give it up. Tyrwhitt says—'I am induced by the internal evidence (!) to consider it as one of Chaucer's genuine productions.' As if the 'internal evidence' of a poem containing no sonant final -e is not enough to condemn it at once. The original MS. copy exists in MS. R. 3. 19 in Trinity College, and the writing is later than 1500.

The poem itself has all the smoothness of the Tudor period¹; it excels the style of Hawes, and would do credit to Sackville. One reference is too interesting to be passed over. In the second stanza, the poet regrets that he has neither the eloquence of Tully, the power of Virgil, nor the 'craft of Galfride.' Tyrwhitt explains Galfride as 'Geoffrey of Monmouth,' though it is difficult to understand on what ground he could have been here thought of. Bell's 'Chaucer' explains Galfride as 'Geoffrey of Vinsauf,' which is still more curious; for Geoffrey of Vinsauf is the very Gaufride whom Chaucer holds up to eternal ridicule in the Nonne Prestes Tale (l. 526). The Geoffrey really intended is, I suspect, no other than our own immortal poet, whose surname was Chaucer.

POEMS ADDED IN SPEGHT'S EDITIONS OF 1598 AND 1602.

We have now to consider the additions made by Speght in 1598. These were only two, viz. Chaucer's Dream and The Flower and the Leaf.

62. Chaucer's Dream. A long poem of 2206 short lines, in metre similar to that of The House of Fame; accepted by Tyrwhitt, and in all the editions. But there is no early trace of it; and we are not bound to accept as Chaucer's a poem first ascribed to him in 1598, and of which the MS. (at Longleat) was written about 1550. The language is of late date, and the sonant final -e is decidedly scarce. The poem is badly named, and may have been so named by Speght; the proper title is 'The Isle of Ladies.' We find such rimes as be, companie (Ch. be, company-e); know, low, i.e. law (Ch. know-e, law-e); gren, vene, i.e. eyes (Ch. gren-e, y-èn); plesaunce, fesaunce (Ch. plesaunc-e, fesaunts); ywis, kisse (Ch. ywis, kis-se); and when we come to destroied riming with conclude, it is time to stop. The tediousness of this poem is appalling².

63. The Flower and the Leaf. This is rather a pretty poem, in 7-line stanzas. The language is that of the fifteenth century.

² A great peculiarity of this poem is the astonishing length of the sentences. Many of them run to fifty lines or more. As to the MS., see Thynne's Animadversions, ed. Furnivall, 1875, p. 30.

It professes to be written by a gentlewoman, like the Assemble of Ladies; and perhaps it was. Very likely, the same 'gentlewoman' wrote both these poems. If so, the Flower and the Leaf is the better finished, and probably the later of the two. It contains the word henchman, for which the earliest dated quotation which I have yet found is 1415 (Royal Wills, ed. Nichols, p. 220). An interesting reference is given in the lines—

‘Eke there be knightes old of the garter
That in hir time did right worthily.’

The order of the Garter was established in 1349; and we should expect that more than half a century would elapse before it would be natural to refer to the Knights as old knights, who did worthily in their time. Of course the poem cannot be Chaucer's, and it is hardly necessary to look for rimes such as he never uses; yet such may easily be found, such as grew, pt. t. sing., riming with the dissyllabic hew-e, new-e; sid-e with espide, pp. (Ch. espy-ed); ie, eye (Ch. y-ë) with sie, saw (Ch. sy); and *plesure*¹ with desire; after which we may stop.

In 1602, Speght issued another edition, in which, according to Bohn's edition of Lowndes' Bibliographer's Manual, two more pieces were added, viz. the prose treatise against Friars called Jack Upland, and the genuine poem entitled 'A. B. C.' But this is not all; for I find, in a still later edition, that of 1687, which is said to be a 'reimpression of Speght's edition of 1602,' that, at the very end of all the prefatory matter, on what was probably a spare blank leaf, three more poems appear, which, however, had appeared previously, in 1542. But the editors of Chaucer evidently thought that a thing once added must be added for ever, and so these three productions are retained in Bell's Chaucer, and must therefore be noticed with the rest.

64. Jack Upland. An invective against friars, in prose, worth printing, but obviously not Chaucer's.

65. Chaucer's A. B. C. Genuine; here printed as poem no. I.

66. Eight goodly questions with their answers; printed in Bell's Chaucer, vol. iv. p. 421; 9 7-line stanzas. In st. 3, tree rimes with profer; but tree is an obvious misprint for cofer! In st. 5, the gerund to lie (Ch. ly-e) rimes with honestie (Ch.

¹ Plesir may be meant, but Chaucer does not use it; he says ple-saunce.

honestee). This is quite enough to condemn it. But it may be Lydgate's.

67. To the Kings most noble Grace, and to the Lords and Knights of the Garter; pr. as above, p. 424; 8 8-line stanzas. In MS. Phillipps 8151, and written by Hoccleve; it much resembles his poem printed in Anglia, v. 23. The date may be 1416.

68. Sayings. Really three separate pieces. They are all derived from the fly-leaf of the small quarto edition of Caxton, described above, p. xv. When Caxton printed Chaucer's Anelida and Purse on a quire of ten leaves, it so happened that he only filled up nine of them. But, after adding explicit at the bottom of the ninth leaf, to shew that he had come to the end of his Chaucer, he thought it a pity to waste space, and so added three popular sayings on the front of leaf 10, leaving the back of it still blank. Here is what he printed :—

'Whan feyth failleth in prestes sawes
And lordes hestes ar holden for lawes
And robbery is holden purchas
And lechery is holden solas
Than shal the lond of albyon

'Be brought to grete confusioun.

'Hit falleth for euery gentilman
To saye the best that he can
In mannes absence
And the soth in his presence.

'Hit cometh by kynde of gentil blode
To cast away al heuynes
And gadre to-gidre wordes good
The werk of wisdom berith witnes

Et sic est finis * * *.'

The first of these sayings was probably a bit of popular rime, of the character quoted in Shakespeare's King Lear, iii. 2. 81. Shakespeare calls his lines Mertlin's prophecy; and it has pleased the editors of Chaucer to call the first six lines Chaucer's Prophecy¹. They appear in Bell's Chaucer, vol. iii. p. 427, in an 'improved' form, not worth discussing; and the last eight lines are also printed in the same, vol. iv. p. 426. Why they are separated, is mysterious. Those who think them genuine may thank me for giving them Caxton's spelling instead of Speght's.

PIECES ADDED IN MORRIS'S EDITION, 1866.

In Morris's edition are some pieces which either do not appear in previous editions, or were first printed later than 1700.

69. Roundel; pr. in vol. vi. p. 304. The same as Merciless Beaute; here printed as no. VI. It first appeared, however, in Percy's Reliques of English Poetry. See p. lxxvii. below.

70. The Former Age; pr. in vol. vi. p. 300, for the first time. Here printed as no. X. See p. lxxiii.

71. Prosperity; pr. in vol. vi. p. 296, for the first time. This is taken from MS. Arch. Selden B. 24, fol. 119, where it follows Chaucer's Poem on 'Truth.' It has but one stanza of eight lines, and I here give it precisely as it stands in this Scottish MS. :—

' Richt as pouert causith sobirnes,
 And febilnes enforcith contenance,
 Rycht so prosperitee and grete riches
 The moder is of vice and negligence;
 And powere also causith Insolence;
 And honour oftsiss changith gude thewis;
 Thare is no more perilouss pestilence
 Than hie estate geven vnto schrewis.

Quod Chaucere.'

I have no belief in the genuineness of this piece, though it is not ill written. In general, the ascription of a piece to Chaucer in a MS. is valuable. But the scribe of this particular MS. was reckless. It is he who made the mistake of marking Hoccleve's 'Mother of God' with the misleading remark—'Explicit oracio Galfridi Chaucere.' At fol. 119, back, he gives us a poem beginning 'Deuise prowes and eke humylitee' in 7 7-line stanzas, and here again at the end is the absurd remark—'Quod Chaucer quhen he was rycht ausit.' But he was himself quite 'wrongly advised'; for it is plainly not Chaucer's at all. His next feat is to mark Lydgate's Complaynt of the Black Knight by saying—'Here endith the Maying and disporte of Chaucere'; which shews how the editors were misled as to this poem. Nor is this all; for he gives us, at fol. 137, back, another poem in 6 8-line stanzas, beginning 'O hie Emperice and quene celestial'; and here again at the end is his stupid—'Quod Chaucere.' The date of this MS. appears to be 1488; so it is of no high authority; and, unless we make some verbal alteration, we shall have to explain how Chaucer came to write oftsiss in two syllables instead of ofte sithe in four; see his Can. Yem. Tale, Group G, l. 1031. [The stanza is by Walton; Athenæum, Dec. 28, 1895.]

72. Leaulte vault Richesse; pr. in vol. vi. p. 302, for the first time. This is from the same MS., fol. 138, and is as follows:—

'This worldly Ioy is onely fantasy,
Of quhich non erdly wicht can be content;
Quho most has wit, leste suld In It affy,
Quho taistis It most, most sall him repent;
Quhat valis all this richness and this rent,
Sen no man wate quho sall his tresour haue?
Presume nocht gevin that god has done but lent,
Within schort tyme the quhiche he thinkis to craue.
Leaulte vault richness.'

On this poem, I have three remarks to make. The first is that not even the reckless Scottish scribe attributes it to Chaucer. The second is that Chaucer's forms are content and lent without a final e, and repent-e and rent-e with a final -e, so that the poem cannot be his; although content, repent, rent, and lent rime well enough in the Northern dialect. The third is that if I could be sure that the above lines were by a well-known author, I should at once ascribe them to King James I. But it is obviously useless to guess at the real author of a single stanza. It is somewhat of a coincidence that the very MS. here discussed is that in which the unique copy of the Kingis Quair is preserved.

73. Proverbs of Chaucer; printed in vol. vi. p. 303. The first eight lines are genuine. But two 7-line stanzas are added, which are spurious. In MS. Addit. 16165, Shirley tells us that they were 'made by Halsham Esquyer'; but they seem to be Lydgate's, unless he added to them. See Lydgate's Minor Poems (Percy Soc. 1840), pp. 193 and 74. And see pp. xli., xlv.

It thus appears that, of the 73 pieces formerly attributed to Chaucer, not more than 26 can be genuine. These are: Canterbury Tales, Troilus, Legend of Good Women, the first 21 Minor Poems printed in the present volume, and two pieces in prose.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MSS.

After the preceding somewhat tedious, but necessary discussion of the contents of the black-letter and other editions (in many of which poems were as recklessly attributed to Chaucer as medieval proverbs used to be to King Solomon), it is some relief to turn to the manuscripts, which usually afford much better texts, and are altogether more trustworthy.

The following is a list of the MSS. which have been followed. I must here acknowledge my great debt to Dr. Furnivall, whose excellent, careful, and exact reproduction in print of the various MSS. leaves nothing to be desired, and is a great boon to all Chaucer scholars. They are nearly all¹ printed among the Chaucer Society's publications. At the same time, I desire to say that I have myself consulted most of the MSS., and have thus gleaned a few hints which could hardly have been otherwise acquired; it was by this process that I became acquainted with the poems numbered XXII. and XXIII., which are probably genuine. An editor should always look at the MSS. for himself, if he can possibly contrive to do so.

REMARKS ON SOME OF THE MSS.

Some of these MSS. deserve a few special remarks.

MSS. in Scottish spelling are—Ar. Bannatyne. Kk. ; L. shews Northern tendencies.

MSS. AT OXFORD.

F. (Fairfax 16) is a valuable MS. ; not only does it contain as many as seventeen of these Minor Poems, but it is a fairly written MS. of the fifteenth century. The spelling does not very materially differ from that of such an excellent MS. as the Ellesmere MS. of the Canterbury Tales, excepting in the fact that a great number of final e's are added in wrong places, and are dropped where they are required. This is a matter that can be to a large extent rectified, and I have endeavoured to do so, taking it in many instances as the standard text. Next to this misuse of final e's, which is merely due to the fact that it was written out at a time when the true use of them was already lost, its most remarkable characteristic is the scribe's excessive love of the letter y in place of i ; he writes hyt ys instead of hit is, and the like. In a great number of instances I have restored i, where the vowel is short. When the text of the Fairfax MS. is thus restored, it is by no means a bad one. It also contains fair copies of many poems by Hoccleve and Lydgate, such as the former's *Letter of Cupide*¹, and the latter's Complaint of the Black Knight, Temple of Glass, and Balade against Women's Doubleness, being the very piece which is introduced into Stowe's edition, and is numbered 45 above (see p. xxi). We are also enabled, by comparing this MS. with MS. Harl. 7578, to solve another riddle, viz. why it is that Chaucer's Proverbs, as printed in Morris's and Bell's editions, are followed by two 7-line stanzas which have nothing whatever to do with them. In MS. Harl. 7578 these two stanzas immediately follow, and MS. F. immediately precede Chaucer's Proverbs, and therefore were near enough to them to give an excuse for throwing them in together. However, both these stanzas are by Lydgate, and are mere fragments¹. The former of them, beginning 'The worlde so wide, thaire so remuable,' really belongs to a poem of 18 stanzas, printed in Halliwell's edition of Lydgate's Minor Poems (Percy Soc.), p. 193. The latter of them, beginning 'The more I goo, the ferther I am behinde,' belongs to a poem of 11 stanzas, printed in the same, p. 74. Perhaps this will serve as a hint to future editors of Chaucer, from whose works it is high time to exclude poems known to be by some other hand.

In this MS. there is also a curious and rather long poem upon the game of chess; the board is called the cheker, and the pieces are the kyng, the quene or the fers (described on fol. 294), the rokys (duo Roci), the knyghtys, the Awfyrys (duo alfini), and the bovnys (pedini). This is interesting in connection with the Book of the Duchess; see note to l. 654, on p. 255. The author tells us how 'he plaid at the chesse,' and 'was mated of a Ferse.'

B. (Bodley 638) is very closely related to MS. F.; in the case of some of the poems, both must have been drawn from a common source. MS. B. is not a mere copy of F., for it sometimes has the correct reading where F. is wrong; as, e.g. in the case of the reading Bret in the House of Fame, l. 1208, on p. 156. It contains seven of these Minor Poems, as well as The boke of Cupide god of loue (Cuckoo and Nightingale), Hoccleve's Lettre of Cupide god of loue, Lydgate's Temple of Glass (oddly called Temple of Bras (!), a mistake which occurs in MS. F. also), his Ordre of Folyis, printed in Halliwell's Minor Poems of Lydgate, p. 164, and his Complaint of the Black Knight.

A. (Shirley's MS. Ashmole 59) is remarkable for containing a large number of pieces by Lydgate, most of which are marked as his. It corroborates the statement in MS. F. that he wrote the Balade against Women's Doubleness. It contains the whole of Scogan's poem in which Chaucer's Gentilesse is quoted: see the complete print of it, from this MS., in the Chaucer Society's publications.

Another poem in this MS. requires a few words. At the back of leaf 38 is a poem entitled 'The Cronycle made by Chaucier,' with a second title to this effect:—'Here nowe folowe the names of the nyene worshipfullest Ladyes that in alle cronycles and storial bokes haue beo founden of trouthe of constance and vertuous or reproched (sic) womanhode by Chaucier.' The poem consists of nine stanzas of eight lines (in the ordinary heroic metre), and is printed in Furnivall's Odd Text of Chaucer's Minor Poems, Part I. It would be a gross libel to ascribe this poem to Chaucer, as it is very poor, and contains execrable rimes (such as prysoun, bycome; apply-e, pyle; thee, dy-e). But we may easily see that the title is likely to give rise to a misconception. It does not really mean that the poem itself is by Chaucer, but that it gives a brief epitome of the 'Cronicle made by Chaucier' of 'the nyene worshipfullest Ladyes.' And, in fact, it does this. Each stanza briefly describes one of the nine women celebrated in Chaucer's Legend of Good Women. It is sufficient to add that the author makes a ludicrous mistake, which is quite enough to acquit Chaucer of having had any hand in this wholly valueless production; for he actually addresses 'quene Alceste' as sorrowing for 'Seyse her husbande.' Seyse is Chaucer's Ceyx, and Alceste is the author's comic substitution for Alcyone; see Book of the Duchess, l. 220, on p. 20. This is not a fault of the scribe; for Alceste rimes with byheste, whereas Alcione does not. I much suspect that Shirley wrote this poem himself. His verses, in MS. Addit. 16165, are very poor.

Tn. (Tanner 346) is a fair MS. of the 15th century, and contains, besides six of the Minor Poems, the Legend of Good Women, Hoccleve's Letter of Cupid (called litera Cupidinis dei Amoris directa subditis suis Amatoribus), the Cuckoo and Nightingale (called the god of loue), Lydgate's Temple of Glas and Black Knight, &c. One of them is the Ballad no. 32 discussed above (p. xxix.). At fol. 73 is a poem in 13 8-line stanzas, beginning 'As ofte as syghes ben in herte trewe.' One stanza begins with these lines:—

'As ofte tymes as Penelapye
Renewed her werk in the raduore,' &c.

I quote this for the sake of the extremely rare Chaucerian word spelt radevore in the Legend of Good Women, 2341 (or 2352 in Furnivall's prints of the MSS.). The same line occurs in another copy of the same poem in MS. Ff., fol. 12, back.

Ar. (Arch. Seld. B. 24) is a Scottish MS., apparently written in 1488, and contains, amongst other things, the unique copy of the Kingis Quair, by James I. of Scotland. This is the MS. wherein the scribe attributes pieces to Chaucer quite recklessly: see p. xxxv. It is also the authority for the pieces called Prosperity and Leaulte vault Richesse. Here, once more, we find the Letter of Cupid and the Cuckoo and Nightingale; it is remarkable how often these poems occur in the same MS. It also contains Troilus and the Legend of Good Women.

D. (Digby 181) contains, besides two of the Minor Poems, an imperfect copy of Troilus; also the Letter of Cupid and Complaint of the Black Knight. At fol. 52 is a piece entitled 'Here Bochas repreuyth hem that yeue hasti credence to euery reporte or tale'; and it begins—'All-though so be in euery maner age'; in 19 7-line stanzas. This is doubtless a part of chapter 13 of Book I. of Lydgate's Fall of Princes.

CAMBRIDGE MSS.

Ff. (Ff. 1. 6) contains, besides five of the Minor Poems, many other pieces. One is a copy of Pyramus and Thisbe, being part of the Legend of Good Women. There are four extracts from various parts of Gower's Confessio Amantis; the Cuckoo and Nightingale and Letter of Cupid; the Romance of Sir Degrevaunt; La Belle Dame sans Merci. Some pieces from this MS. are printed in Reliquiae Antiquae, i. 23, 169, 202; and two more, called The Parliament of Love and The Seven Deadly Sins, are printed in Political, Religious, and Love Poems, ed. Furnivall (E. E. T. S.), pp. 48, 215. We also find here a copy of Lydgate's Ballad of Good Counsail, printed in the old editions of Chaucer (piece no. 40; see above, p. xxi.).

Gg. (Gg. 4. 27) is the MS. which contains so excellent a copy of the Canterbury Tales, printed as the 'Cambridge MS.' in the Chaucer Society's publications. Four leaves are lost at the beginning. On leaf 5 is Chaucer's A. B. C.; on leaf 7, back, the Envoy to Scogan; and on leaf 8, back, Chaucer's Truth, entitled Balade de bone conseyl. This is followed by a rather pretty poem, in 15 8-line stanzas, which is interesting as quoting from Chaucer's Parliament of Foules. Examples are: 'Qui bien ayne tard oublye' (l. 32; cf. P. F. 679): 'The fesaunt, scornere of the cok Be nihter-tyme in frostis colde' (ll. 49, 50; cf. P. F. 357); 'Than spak the frosty feldefare' (l. 89; cf. P. F. 364). Line 41 runs—'Robert redbrest and the wrenne'; which throws some light on the etymology of robin. This valuable MS. also contains Troilus and the Legend of Good Women, with the unique earlier form of the Prologue; and Lydgate's Temple of Glas. At fol. 467 is a Supplicacio amantis, a long piece of no great value, but the first four lines give pretty clear evidence that the author was well acquainted with Chaucer's Anelida, and aspired to imitate it.

‘Redresse of sorweful, O Cytherea,
That *wit*h the stremys of thy plesaunt hete
Gladist the cuntreis of al Cirrea,
Wher thou hast chosyn thy paleys and thy sete.’

It is, in fact, a continuation of the Temple of Glas, and is therefore Lydgate's. See Schick's edition, l. 701.

Hh. (Camb. Univ. Lib. Hh. 4. 12) contains much of Lydgate, and is fully described in the Catalogue.

Trin. (Trin. Coll. Camb. R. 3. 19) not only contains two of the Minor Poems, but a large number of other pieces, including the Legend of Good Women and many of Lydgate's Poems. In particular, it is the source of most of Stowe's additions to Chaucer: I may mention The Craft of Lovers, dated 1448 in the MS. (fol. 156), but 1348 in Stowe; the Ten Commandments of Love, Nine Ladies worthy, Virelai (fol. 160), Balade beginning In the seson of Feuerer (fol. 160), Goddesses and Paris (fol. 161, back), A balade plesaunte (fol. 205), O Mossie Quince (fol. 205), Balade beginning Loke well aboute (fol. 207); and The Court of Love; see the pieces numbered 46, 48, 49, 50, 51, 53, 54, 55, 56, 59 (p. xxi). The piece numbered 41 also occurs here, at the end of the Parliament of Foules, and is headed ‘Verba translatoris.’ One poem, by G. Ashby, is dated 1463, and I suppose most of the pieces are in a handwriting of a later date, not far from 1500. It is clear that Stowe had no better reason for inserting pieces in his edition of Chaucer than their occurrence in this MS. to which he had access. If he had had access to any other MS. of the same character, the additions in his book would have been different. This is the sort of evidence which some people accept as being quite sufficient to prove that Chaucer learnt the language of a century after his own date in order to qualify himself for writing The Court of Love!

LONDON MSS.

Ad. (MS. Addit. 16165). One of Shirley's MSS., marked with his name in large letters. It contains a copy of Chaucer's Boethius; Trevisa's translation of the gospel of Nichodemus; the Maistre of the game (on hunting); the Complaint of the Black Knight and the Dreme of a Lover, both by Lydgate. The latter is the same poem, I suppose, as The Temple of Glas. It is here we learn from Shirley that the Complaint of the Black Knight is Lydgate's. Not only is it headed, on some pages, as 'The complaynte of a knight made by Lidegate,' but on fol. 3 he refers to the same poem, speaking of it as being a complaint—

'al in balade¹,
That daun Iohan of Bury made,
Lydgate the Munk clothed in blakke.'

Here also we find two separate fragments of *Anelida*²; the two stanzas mentioned above (p. xli, l. 1), called by Shirley 'two verses made in wyse of balade by Halsham, Esquier'; Chaucer's Proverbs; the poem no. 45 above (p. xxi), attributed in this MS. to Lydgate; &c. At fol. 256, back, is the Balade of com-pleynte printed in this volume as poem no. XXIII.

Add. (MS. Addit. 22139). This is a fine folio MS., containing Gower's Confessio Amantis. At fol. 138 are Chaucer's Purse, Gentillesse, Lak of Stedfastnesse, and Truth.

At. (MS. Addit. 10340). Contains Chaucer's Boethius (foll. 1-40); also Truth, with the unique envoy, and the description of the 'Persone,' from the Canterbury Tales, on fol. 41, recto³.

Ct. (MS. Cotton, Cleopatra, D. 7.) The Chaucer poems are all on leaves 188, 189. They are all ballads, viz. Gentillesse, Lak of Stedfastness, Truth, and Against Women Unconstaunt. All four are in the same hand; and we may remark that the last of the four is thus, in a manner, linked with the rest; see p. xlvi.

H. (MS. Harl. 2251.) Shirley's MS. contains a large number of pieces, chiefly by Lydgate. Also Chaucer's Prioresses Tale, ¹ i. e. in the ballad-measure, or 7-line stanzas.

³ This page has been reproduced, in facsimile, for the Chaucer Society.

Fortune (fol. 46), Gentillesse (fol. 48, back), A. B. C. (fol. 49), and Purse (fol. 271). The Craft of Lovers also occurs, and is dated 1459 in this copy. Poem no. 56 (p. xxii.) also occurs here, and is marked as Lydgate's. We also see from this MS. that the first four stanzas of no. 52 (p. xxi.) form part of a poem on the Fall of Man, in which Truth, Mercy, Righteousness, and Peace are introduced as allegorical personages. The four stanzas form part of Mercy's plea, and this is why the word mercy occurs ten times. At fol. 153, back (formerly 158, back), we actually find a copy of Henry Scogan's poem in which Chaucer's Gentillesse is not quoted, the requisite stanzas being entirely omitted. At fol. 249, back, Lydgate quotes the line 'this world is a thurghfare ful of woo,' and says it is from Chaucer's 'tragedyes.' It is from the Knights Tale, l. 1989.

Ha. (Harl. 7578.) Contains Lydgate's Proverbs; Chaucer's Pite (fol. 13, back), Gentillesse and Lak of Stedfastnesse (fol. 17), immediately followed by the Balade against Women unconstaunt, precisely in the place where we should expect to find it; also Chaucer's Proverbs, immediately followed by the wholly unconnected stanzas discussed above; p. xli, l. 1. At fol. 20, back, are six stanzas of Chaucer's A. B. C.

Harl. (MS. Harl. 7333.) This is a fine folio MS., and contains numerous pieces. At fol. 37, recto, begins a copy of the Canterbury Tales, with a short prose Proem by Shirley; this page has been reproduced in facsimile for the Chaucer Society. At fol. 129, back, begins the Parliament of Foules, at the end of which is the stanza which appears as poem no. 41 in Stowe's edition (see p. xxi). Then follow the Broche of Thebes, i. e. the Complaint of Mars, and Anelida. It also contains some of the Gesta Romanorum and of Hoccleve's De Regimine Principum. But the most remarkable thing in this MS. is the occurrence, at fol. 136, of a poem hitherto (as I believe) unprinted, yet obviously (in my opinion) written by Chaucer; see no. XXII. in the present volume. Other copies occur in F. and B.

Sh. (MS. Harl. 78; one of Shirley's MSS.). At fol. 80 begins the Complaint to Pity; on fol. 82 the last stanza of this poem is immediately followed by the poem here printed as no. XXI; the only mark of separation is a star-like mark placed upon the line which is drawn to separate one stanza from another. At the end of fol. 83, back, the last line of the poem occurs at the bottom of the page, and fol. 84 is gone. Hence we cannot tell whether the poem really ended there, or whether there was once some more of it. [There were 10 lines more; see p. 217.]

MS. Harl. 372. This MS. contains many poems by Lydgate. Also a copy of Anelida; followed by La Belle Dame sans mercy, 'translated out of Frenche by Sir Richard Ros,' &c.

MS. Lansdowne 699. This MS. contains numerous poems by Lydgate, such as Guy of Warwick, the Dance of Macabre, the Horse, Sheep, and Goose, &c.; and copies of Chaucer's Fortune and Truth.

I. A. B. C.

This piece was first printed in Speght's edition of 1602, with this title: 'Chaucer's A. B. C. called La Priere de Nostre Dame: made, as some say, at the request of Blanch, Duchesse of Lancaster, as a praier for her priuat vse, being a woman in her religion very deuout.' This is probably a mere guess, founded on the fact that Chaucer wrote the Book of the Duchess. It cannot be literally true, because it is not strictly 'made,' or composed, but only translated. Still, it is just possible that it was translated for her pleasure (rather than use); and if so, must have been written between 1359 and 1369. A probable date is about 1366. In any case, it may well stand first in chronological order, being a translation just of that unambitious character which requires no great experience. Indeed, the translation shews one mark of want of skill; each stanza begins by following the original for a line or two, after which the stanza is completed rather according to the requirements of rime than with an endeavour to render the original at all closely. There are no less than thirteen MS. copies of it; and its genuineness is attested both by Lydgate and Shirley¹. The latter marks it with Chaucer's name in the Sion College MS. Lydgate's testimony is curious, and requires a few words of explanation.

Guillaume De Deguileville, a Cistercian monk in the royal abbey of Chalis², in the year 1330 or 1331³, wrote a long poem entitled Pèlerinage de la Vie humaine. Of this there are two ¹ It is also twice attributed to Chaucer in MS. P.

² I follow the account in Morley's English Writers, 1867, ii. 204; the name is there given as de Guileville; but M. Paul Meyer writes De Deguileville.

³ Morley says 1330; a note in the Camb. MS. Ff. 6. 30 says 1331.

extant English translations, one in prose and one in verse, the latter being attributed to Lydgate. Of the prose translation¹, four copies exist, viz. in the MSS. which I call C., Gl., Jo., and L. In all of these, Chaucer's A. B. C. is inserted, in order to give a verse rendering of a similar prayer in verse in the original. Of Lydgate's verse translation there is a copy in MS. Cotton, Vitell. C. xiii. (see foll. 255, 256); and when he comes to the place where the verse prayer occurs in his original, he says that, instead of translating the prayer himself, he will quote Chaucer's translation, observing—

‘My mayster Chaucer, in hys tyme,
After the Frenchs he dyde yt ryme.’

Curiously enough, he does not do so; a blank space was left in the MS. for the scribe to copy it out, but it was never filled in². However, it places the genuineness of the poem beyond doubt; and the internal evidence confirms it; though it was probably, as was said, quite an early work.

In order to illustrate the poem fully, it is necessary to give the French original, which I copy from the print of it in Furnivall's One-text Print of Chaucer's Minor Poems, Part I. p. 84.

From Guillaume De Deguileville's Pèlerinage de l'Ame, Part I, Le Pèlerinage de la Vie humaine. Edited from the MS. 1645, Fonds Français, in the National Library, Paris (A), and collated with the MSS. 1649 (B), 376 (C), and 377 (D), in the same collection, by Paul Meyer³:—

‘A toy du monde le refui,
Vierge glorieuse, m'en fui
Tout confus, ne puis miex faire;
A toy me tien a toy m'apuy.
Relieve moy, abatu suy:
Vaincu m'a mon aversaire.
Puis qu'en toy ont tous repaire
Bien me doy vers toy retraire
Avant que j'aie plus d'annuy.

It will be observed that Chaucer did not translate the last two stanzas.

MS. C. affords, on the whole, the best text, and is therefore followed, all variations from it being duly noted in the foot-notes, except (occasionally) when i is put for y, or y for i. The scribes are very capricious in the use of these letters, using them indifferently; but it is best to use i when the vowel is short (as a general rule), and y when it is long. Thus, it is is better than yt ys, and wyse than wise, in order to shew that the vowel is long in the latter case. I also use y at the end of a word, as usual; as in lady, my. When the spelling of the MS. is thus slightly amended, it gives a fair text, which can easily be read with the old and true pronunciation. See my edition of the Man of Law's Tale, pref. p. ix.

² The initial C stands for cetera. It was usual to place &c. (= et cetera) at the end of the alphabet.

II. THE COMPLEYNT UNTO PITE.

The word compleynt answers to the O. F. complaint, sb. masc., as distinguished from O. F. complainte, sb. fem., and was the technical name, as it were, for a love-poem of a mournful tone, usually addressed to the un pitying loved one. See Godefroy's Old French Dictionary¹. Dr. Furnivall's account of this poem begins as follows: 'In seventeen 7-line stanzas: 1 of Proem, 7 of Story, and '9 of Complaint, arranged in three Terns [sets of three] of stanzas; first printed by Thynne in 1532 . . . The poem looks not easy to construe; but it is clearly a Complaint to Pity, as 5 MSS. read, and not of Pity, as Shirley reads in MS. Harl. 78. This Pity once lived in the heart of the loved-one of the poet . . . But in his mistress's heart dwells also Pity's rival, Cruelty; and when the poet, after waiting many years², seeks to declare his love, even before he can do so, he finds that Pity for him is dead in his mistress's heart, Cruelty has prevailed, and deprived him of her.' His theory is, that this poem is Chaucer's earliest original work, and relates to his own feelings of hopeless love; also, that Chaucer was not married till 1374, when he married his namesake Philippa Chaucer³. If this be so, a probable conjectural date for this poem is about 1367. I have remarked, in a note to l. 14 (p. 230), that the allegory of the poem is somewhat confused; and this implies a certain want of skill and clearness, which makes the supposition of its being an early work the more probable¹. It is extremely difficult to determine to what extent the sentiments are artificial. If a French poem of a similar character should one day be found, it would not be very surprising. Meanwhile, it is worth observing that the notion of personifying Pity is taken from Chaucer's favorite author Statius; see the Thebaid, bk. xi. 458-496, and compare the context, ll. 1-457. It is this which enables us to explain the word Herenus in l. 92, which is an error for Herines, the form used by Chaucer to denote the Erinnyes or Furies². The Erinnyes are mentioned in Statius, Theb. xi. 345 (cf. ll. 58, 60, 383); and Statius leads up to the point of the story where it is an even chance whether there will be peace or war. The Furies urge on the combatants to war; and at this crisis, the only power who can overrule them is Pietas, personified by Statius for this express purpose (ll. 458, 465, 466). The struggle between Pity and Cruelty in Chaucer's poem is parallel to the struggle between Pietas and the fury Tisiphone as told in Statius. Pity is called Herines quene, or queen of the Furies, because she alone is supposed to be able to control them. See my notes to ll. 57, 64, and 92 (pp. 231, 232).

³ 'Philippa Chaucer was a lady of the bedchamber, and therefore married, in 1366'; N. and Q. 7 S. v. 289.

The poem is extant in nine MSS. It is attributed to Chaucer by Shirley (see p. 229), and the internal evidence confirms this. There is a fairly good copy in MS. F, on which my edition of it is based. There is, further, an excellent critical edition of this poem by Prof. Ten Brink, in Essays on Chaucer, Part II, p. 170 (Chaucer Soc.); this I carefully consulted after making my own copy, and I found that the differences were very slight.

III. THE BOOK OF THE DUCHESSÉ.

Here we are on firm ground. The genuineness of this poem has never been doubted. It is agreed that the word Whyte in l. 948, which is given as the name of the lady lately dead, is a translation of Blanche, and that the reference is to the wife of the

Duke of Lancaster (John of Gaunt), who died Sept. 12, 1369, at the age of twenty-nine, her husband being then of the same age. As the poem would naturally be written soon after this event, the date must be near the end of 1369. In fact, John of Gaunt married again in 1372, whereas he is represented in the poem as being inconsolable. Chaucer's own testimony, in the Legend of Good Women, l. 418, is that he made 'the deeth of Blaunche the Duchesse'; and again, in the Introduction to the Man of Law's Prologue, l. 57, that 'In youthe he made of Ceys and Alcioun.' In 1369, Chaucer was already twenty-nine years of age (taking the year of his birth to be 1340, not 1328), which is rather past the period of youth; and the fact that he thus mentions 'Ceys and Alcioun' as if it were the name of an independent poem, renders it almost certain that such was once the case. He clearly thought it too good to be lost, and so took the opportunity of inserting it in a more ambitious effort. The original 'Ceys and Alcioun' evidently ended at l. 220; where it began, we cannot say, for the poem was doubtless revised and somewhat altered. Ll. 215, 216 hint that a part of it was suppressed. The two subjects were easily connected, the sorrow of Alcyone for the sudden and unexpected loss of her husband being the counterpart of the sorrow of the duke for the loss of his wife. The poem of 'Ceys and Alcioun' shews Chaucer under the influence of Ovid, just as part of his Complaint to Pity was suggested by Statius; but in the later part of the poem of the Book of the Duchesse we see him strongly influenced by French authors, chiefly Guillaume de Machault and the authors of Le Roman de la Rose. His familiarity with the latter poem (as pointed out in the notes) is such as to prove that he had already been previously employed in making his translation of that extremely lengthy work, and possibly quotes lines from his own translation¹.

The relationship between the MSS. and Thynne's edition has been investigated by Koch, in Anglia, vol. iv. Anzeiger, p. 95, and by Max Lange, in his excellent dissertation entitled Untersuchungen über Chaucer's Boke of the Duchesse, Halle,

1883. They both agree in representing the scheme of relationship so as to give the following result :

Here a represents the lost original MS., and β and γ are lost MSS. derived from it. Thynne follows β; whilst γ is followed by the Tanner MS. and a lost MS. δ. The Fairfax and Bodley MSS., which are much alike, are copies of δ. The MS. γ had lost a leaf, containing ll. 31-96; hence the same omission occurs in the three MSS. derived from it. However, a much later hand has filled in the gap in MS. F, though it remains blank in the other two MSS. On the whole, the authorities for this poem are not very good; I have, in general, followed MS. F, but have carefully amended it where the other copies seemed to give a better result. Lange gives a useful set of 'Konjekturen,' many of which I have adopted.

IV. THE COMPLEYNT OF MARS.

Lydgate tells us that this poem is Chaucer's, referring to it as containing the story of 'the broche which that Vulcanus At Thebes wrought,' &c. Internal evidence clearly shews that it was written by the author of the Treatise on the Astrolabie. In MS. Harl. 7333, Shirley gives it the title 'The broche of Thebes, as of the love of Mars and Venus.' Bale oddly refers to this poem as De Vulcani veru, but broche is here an ornament, not a spit. With the exception of two lines and a half (ll. 13-15), the whole poem is supposed to be sung by a bird, and upon St. Valentine's day. It begins in the ordinary 7-line stanza, rimed ababbcc; but the Complaint itself is in 9-line stanzas, rimed abaaabbcc.

At the end of the copy of this poem in MS. T, Shirley appends the following note:—'Thus eondethe here this complaint, whiche some men sayne was made by [i. e. with respect to] my lady of York, doughter to the kyng of Spaygne, and my lord huntingdon, some tyme Duc of Excestre.' This tradition may be correct, but the intrigue between them was discreditable enough, and would have been better passed over in silence than celebrated in a poem, in which Mars and Venus fitly represent them. In the heading to the poem in the same MS., Shirley tells us further, that it was written to please John of Gaunt. The heading is:—'Loo, yee louers, gladethe and comfortethe you of thallyance etrayted¹ bytwene the hardy and furyous Mars the god of armes and Venus the double [i. e. fickle] goddesse of loue; made by Geffrey Chaucier, at the comandement of the renommed and excellent Prynce my lord the Duc Iohn of Lancastre.' The lady was John of Gaunt's sister-in-law. John of Gaunt married, as his second wife, in 1372, Constance, elder daughter of Pedro, king of Castile; whilst his brother Edmund, afterwards duke of York, married Isabel, her sister. In Dugdale's Baronage, ii. 154, we read that this Isabel, 'having been somewhat wanton in her younger years, at length became a hearty penitent; and departing this life in 1394, was buried in the Friers Preachers at Langele,' i. e. King's Langley in Hertfordshire; cf. Chauncy's Hertfordshire, p. 455; Camden's Anglica, p. 350. It is highly probable that Chaucer addressed his Envoy to the Complaint of Venus to the same lady, as he calls her 'Princess'; see p. 209, l. 73, and the Notes to that Poem.

Mars is, accordingly, intended to represent John Holande, half-brother to Richard II, Earl of Huntingdon, and afterwards Duke of Exeter. He actually married John of Gaunt's daughter Elizabeth, whose mother was the Blanche celebrated in the Book of the Duchess.

If this tradition be true, the date of the poem must be not very many years after 1372, when the Princess Isabel came to England. We may date it, conjecturally, about 1374. See further in Furnivall's Trial Forewords, pp. 78-90.

The poem is remarkable for its astronomical allusions, which are fully explained in the notes. The story of Mars and Venus was doubtless taken from Ovid, Metam. iv. 170-189. The story of the brooch of Thebes is from Statius, ii. 265, &c.; see note to l. 245, on p. 283.

I shall here add a guess of mine which possibly throws some light on Chaucer's reason for referring to the brooch of Thebes. It is somewhat curious that the Princess Isabel, in a will made twelve years before her death, and dated Dec. 6,

1382, left, amongst other legacies, 'to the Duke of Lancaster, a Tablet of Jasper which the King of Armonie gave her'; see Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 82. Here Armonie means, of course, Armenia; but it is also suggestive of Harmonia, the name of the first owner of the brooch of Thebes. It seems just possible that the brooch of Thebes was intended to refer to this tablet of jasper, which was doubtless of considerable value and may have been talked about as being a curiosity.

V. THE PARLEMENT OF FOULES.

This poem is undoubtedly genuine; both Chaucer and Lydgate mention it. It is remarkable as being the first of the Minor Poems which exhibits the influence upon Chaucer of Italian literature, and was therefore probably written somewhat later than the Complaint of Mars. It is also the first of the Minor Poems in which touches of true humour occur; see ll. 498-500, 508, 514-6, 563-575, 589-616. Dr. Furnivall (Trial Forewords, p. 53) notes that the MSS. fall into two principal groups; in the first he places Gg., Trin., Cx., Harl., O., the former part of Ff., (part of) Ar., and the fragments in Hh. and Laud 416; in the second he places F., Tn., D., and the latter part of Ff. Lt. also belongs to the second group. See further in Anglia, vol. iv. Anzeiger, p. 97. The whole poem, except the Roundel in ll. 680-692, is in Chaucer's favourite 7-line stanza, often called the ballad-stanza, or simply balade in the MSS.

The poem itself may be roughly divided into four parts. The first part, ll. 1-84, is mainly occupied with an epitome of the general contents of Cicero's Somnium Scipionis. The second part, ll. 85-175, shews several instances of the influence of Dante. The third part, ll. 176-294, is almost wholly translated or imitated from Boccaccio's Teseide. And the fourth part, ll. 295 to the end, is occupied with the real subject of the poem, the main idea being taken, as Chaucer himself tells us, from Alanus de Insulis. The passages relating to the Somnium Scipionis are duly pointed out in the notes; and so are the references to Dante. The history of the third and fourth parts requires further explanation.

We have already seen that Chaucer himself tells us, in the Prol. to the Legend, that he made—'al the love of Palamon and Arcite Of Thebes, thogh the story ys knowen lyte¹. Now, in the note on Anelida and Arcite, p. 310, it is explained how this story of Palamon and Arcite was necessarily translated, more or less closely, from Boccaccio's Teseide, and was doubtless written in the 7-line stanza; also that fragments of it are preserved to us (1) in sixteen stanzas of the Parliament of Foules, (2) in the first ten stanzas of Anelida, and (3) in three stanzas of Troilus. At a later period, the whole poem was re-written in a different metre, and now forms the Knights Tale. The sixteen stanzas here referred to begin at l. 183 (the previous stanza being also imitated from a different part of the Teseide, bk. xi. st. 24), and end at l. 294. Chaucer has somewhat altered the order; see note to l. 183, on p. 293. I here quote, from Furnivall's Trial Forewords, pp. 60-66, a translation by Mr. W. M. Rossetti, of Boccaccio's Teseide, bk. vii. stanzas 51-66. This passage can be compared with Chaucer's imitation of it at the reader's leisure.

 She saw a temple of copper; round which
 She saw youths dancing and women—
 This one of them beautiful, and that one in fine raiment,

 Who spent the day in this alone.
 Then over the temple she saw doves hover
 And settle and coo.

 With new flames born of pangs;
 Each of which dripped with tears
 Produced by a woman cruel and fell
 Whom she there saw, called Jealousy.

And, having seen all this, she [the prayer] made her request,
Which was conceded without denial.'

At l. 298 we are introduced to a queen, who in l. 303 is said to be the noble goddess Nature. The general idea is taken from Aley'n's Pleynt of Kynde (l. 316), i. e. from the Planctus Naturae of Alanus de Insulis; see note to l. 298, on p. 297. I here quote the most essential passage from the Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets, ed. T. Wright, ii. 437. It describes the garment worn by the goddess Nature, on which various birds were represented. The phrase animalium concilium probably suggested the name given by Chaucer to our poem.

'Haec autem [vestis] nimis subtilizata, subterfugiens oculorum indaginem, ad tantam materiae tenuitatem advenerat, ut ejus aerisque eandem crederes esse naturam, in qua, prout oculis pictura imaginabatur, animalium celebratur concilium. Illic aquila, primo juvenem, secundo senem, induens, tertio iterum reciprocata priorem, in Adonidem revertebatur a Nestore. Illic ancipiter (sic), civitatis praefectus aëriae, violenta tyrannide a subditis redditus exposcebat. Illic milvus, venatoris induens personam, venatione furtiva larvam gerebat ancipitris. Illic falco in ardeam bellum excitabat civile, non tamen aequali lauce divisum. Non enim illud pugnae debet appellatione censi, ubi tu pulsas, ego vapulo tantum. Illic struthio, vita seculari postposita, vitam solitariam agens, quasi heremita factus, desertarum solitudines incolebat. Illic olor, sui funeris praeco, mellitae citherizationis organo vitae prophetabat apocopam. Illic in pavone tantum pulcritudinis compluit Natura thesaurum, ut eam postea crederes mendicasse. Illic phoenix, in se mortuus, redivivus in alio, quodam Naturae miraculo, se sua morte a mortuis suscitabat. Illic avis concordiae (ciconia) prolem decimando Naturae persolvebat tributum. Illic passeres in atomum pygmaeae humilitatis relegati degebant, grus ex opposito in giganteae quantitatis evadebat excessum.

‘Illic phasianus, natalis insulae perpressus angustias, principum futurus deliciae, nostros evolabat in orbes. Illic gallus, tanquam vulgaris astrologus, suae vocis horologio horarum loquebatur discrimina. Illic gallus silvestris, privatoris galli deridens desidiam, peregre proficiscens, nemorales peragrabat provincias. Illic bubo, propheta miseriae, psalmodias funereae lamentationis praecinebat. Illic noctua tantae deformitatis sterquilinio sordescebat, ut in ejus formatione Naturam crederes fuisse somnolentam. Illic cornix, ventura prognosticans, nugatorio concitabatur garritu. Illic pica, dubio picturata colore, curam logices perennebat insomnem. Illic monedula, latrocinio laudabili reculas thesaurizans, innatae avaritiae argumenta monstrabat. Illic columba, dulci malo inebriata Diones, laborabat Cypridis in palaestra. Illic corvus, zelotypiae abhorrens dedecus, suos foetus non sua esse pignora fatebatur, usque dum comperto nigri argumento coloris, hoc quasi secum disputans comprobat. Illic perdix nunc aëriae potestatis insultus, nunc venatorum sophismata, nunc canum latratus propheticos abhorrebat. Illic anas cum ansere, sub eodem jure vivendi, hiemabat in patria fluviali. Illic turtur, suo viduata consorte, amorem epilogare dedignans, in altero bigamiae refutabat solatia. Illic psittacus cum sui gutturis incude vocis monetam fabricabat humanae. Illic colurnicem, figurae draconis ignorantem fallaciam, imaginariae vocis decipiebant sophismata. Illic picus, propriae architectus domunculae, sui rostri dolabro clausulam fabricabat in ilice. Illic curruca, novercam exuens, materno pietatis ubere alienam cuculi prolem adoptabat in filium; quae tamen capitali praemiata stipendio, privignum agnoscens, filium ignorabat. Illic hirundo, a sua peregrinatione reversa, sub trabe nidi lutabat hospitium. Illic philomena, deflorationis querelam reintegrans, harmoniaca tympanizans dulcedine, puritatis dedecus excusabat. Illic alauda, quasi nobilis citharista, non studii artificio, sed

As to the date of this poem, Ten Brink (Studien, p. 127) shews that it must have been written later than 1373; and further, that it was probably written earlier than Troilus, which seems to have been finished in 1383. It may therefore have been written in 1382, in which case it may very well refer to the betrothal of King Richard II. to Anne of Bohemia in 1381. Prof. Ward, in his Life of Chaucer, p. 86, says:—‘Anne of Bohemia, daughter of the great Emperor Charles IV., and sister of King Wenceslas, had been successively betrothed to a Bavarian prince and to a Margrave of Meissen, before—after negotiations which, according to Froissart, lasted a year¹—her hand was given to young King Richard II. of England. This sufficiently explains the general scope of the Assembly of Fowls, an allegorical poem [referring back to] St. Valentine’s Day, 1381—eleven months or nearly a year after which date the marriage took place².’

I here note that Lydgate’s Flour of Curtesie is a palpable imitation of the Parliament of Foules.

VI. MERCILES BEAUTE.

The unique copy of this poem is in MS. P³. It is the last poem in the MS., and is in excellent company, as it immediately follows several other of Chaucer’s genuine poems. This is probably why Bp. Percy attributed it to Chaucer, who himself tells us that he wrote ‘balades, roundels, virelayes.’ It is significant that Mätzner, in his Altenglische Sprachproben, i. 347, chose this poem alone as a specimen of the Minor Poems. It is, in fact, most happily expressed, and the internal evidence places its authenticity beyond question. The three roundels express three 'movements,' in the poet's usual manner; and his mastery of metre is shewn in the use of the same rime in -en-e in the first and third roundels, requiring no less than ten different words for the purpose; whilst in the second roundel the corresponding lines end in -eyn-e, producing much the same effect, if (as is probable) the old sounds of e and ey were not very different. We at once recognise the Chaucerian phrases I do no fors (see Cant. Ta. 6816, 7094), and I counte him not a bene (see Troil. v. 363).

¹ See l. 647. The royal tercel eagle is, then, Richard II.; and the formel eagle is Queen Anne; the other two tercel eagles were her other two suitors. See Froissart, bk. ii. c. 86.

² It is quite impossible that the poem can refer, as some say, to the marriage of John of Gaunt in 1359, or even to that of de Coucy in 1364; see Furnivall’s Trial Forewords, p. 70. It is plainly much later than the Book of the Duchess, as the internal evidence incontestably shews.

³ Todd gives the contents of this MS. in his Illustrations of Chaucer, p. 116.

Very characteristic is the use of the dissyllabic word sen-e (l. 10), which is an adjective, and means 'manifest,' from the A.S. geséne (gesýne), and not the past participle, which is y-seyn. Chaucer rimes it with clen-e (Prol. to C. T. 134), and with gren-e (Kn. Tale, 1440). The phrase though he sterve for the peyne (l. 23) reminds us of for to deyen in the peyne (Kn. Ta. 275).

But the most curious thing about this poem is the incidental testimony of Lydgate, in his Ballade in commendation of our Ladie; see poem no. 26 above, discussed at p. xxvii. I here quote st. 22 in full, from ed. 1561, fol. 330:—

'Where might I loue euer better beset
Then in this Lilie, likyng to beholde?
That lace of loue, the bonde so well thou knit,
That I maie see thee, or myne harte colde,
And or I passe out of my daies olde,
Tofore [thee] syngyng euermore vterly—
Your iyen twoo woll slea me sodainly.

VII. ANELIDA AND ARCITE.

The genuineness of this poem is obvious enough, and is vouched for both by Lydgate and Shirley, as shewn above. It is discussed in the Notes, p. 310. I may add that Lydgate incidentally refers to it in his Complaint of the Black Knight, l. 379:—'Of Thebes eke the false Arcite.' Much later allusions are the following:—

'There was also Annelida the queene,
Upon Arcite how sore she did complaine';
Assembly of Ladies, l. 465.
..... 'and the weimenting
Of her Annelida, true as turtle-dove
To Arcite fals.'

Court of Love, l. 233.

The first three stanzas are from Boccaccio's Teseide, as shewn in the Notes; so also are stanzas 8, 9, and 10. Stanzas 4-7 arc partly from Statius. The origin of ll. 71-210 is at present unknown. It is difficult to date this poem, but it must be placed after 1373, because of its quotations from the Teseide, or rather from Chaucer's own Palamon and Arcite. The mention of 'the quene of Ermony' in l. 71 suggests that Chaucer's thoughts may have been turned towards Armenia by the curious fact that, in 1384, the King of Armenia came to England about Christmas time, stayed two months, and was hospitably entertained by King Richard at Eltham; see Fabyan's Chronicles, ed. Ellis, p. 532. At an earlier time, viz. in 1362, Walsingham says that some knights of Armenia appeared at a tournament in Smithfield. In the Transactions of the Cambridge Philological Society, May 13, 1886, there is a short paper by Prof. Cowell, from which we learn that Mr. Bradshaw believed the name of Anelida to be identical 'with Anáhita (Avaitis), the ancient goddess of Persia and Armenia. . . He supposed that Chaucer got the name Anelida from a misreading of the name Anaetidem or Anaetida in some Latin MS., the t being mistaken for l.' We must remember that Creseide represents a Greek accusative form Χρυσήϊδα, of which the gen. Χρυσήϊδος occurs in Homer, Il. i. 111; also that the curious Chaucerian form Dalida (for Dalilah) is probably due to association with Greek accusatives in -δα. The genitive Anaetidos occurs in Pliny, xxxiii. 4; in Holland's translation of Pliny, ii. 470, she appears as 'the goddesse Diana syrnamed Anaitis.' It may be as well to explain to those who are unaccustomed to MSS. of the fourteenth century, that it was then usual to write e in place of ae or æ, so that the name would usually be written, in the accusative case, Anetida. This suggests that Anelida should be spelt with but one n; and such is the practice of all the better MSS.

It remains to be added that one source of the part of the poem called the Complaint (ll. 211-350) is the poem printed in this volume as no. XXI., at p. 213. That poem is, in fact, a kind of exercise in metrical experiments, and exhibits specimens of the ten-line stanza, in which the main part of the Complaint is written. Chaucer seems to have elaborated this into a longer Complaint, with additional varieties in the metre; and then to have written the preceding story by way of introduction. One line (xxi. 50) is repeated without alteration (vii. 237); another (xxi. 35) is only altered in the first and last words (vii. 222). Other resemblances are pointed out in the Notes.

It is also worth while to notice how the character of the speaking falcon in the second part of the Squire's Tale is precisely that of Anelida. The parallel lines are pointed out in the Notes.

VIII. CHAUCER'S WORDES UNTO ADAM.

This is evidently a genuine poem, written by the author of the translation of Boethius and of the story of Troilus.

IX. THE HOUS OF FAME.

It is needless to say that this poem is genuine, as Chaucer himself claims it twice over; once in his Prologue to the Legend of Good Women, l. 417, and again by the insertion in the poem itself of the name Geffrey (l. 729). The influence of Dante is here very marked; hence Lydgate refers to it by the name of 'Dante in English.' This influence is thoroughly discussed by Rambeau in Englische Studien, iii. 209, in an article which is far too important to be neglected. I can only say here that the author points out both general and particular likenesses between the two poems. In general, both are visions; both are in three books; in both the authors seek abstraction from surrounding troubles by venturing into the realm of imagination; as Dante is led by Vergil, so Chaucer is upborne by the eagle. Dante begins his third book, Il Paradiso, with an invocation to Apollo, and Chaucer likewise begins his third book with the same; moreover, Chaucer's invocation is little more than a translation of Dante's.

Among the particular resemblances, we may notice the method of commencing each division of the poem with an invocation¹. Again, both poets mark the exact date of commencing their poems: Dante descended into the Inferno on Good Friday, 1300 (Inf. xxi. 112); Chaucer began his work on the 10th of December, the year being, probably, 1383 (note to l. 111).

Chaucer sees the desert of Libya (l. 488), corresponding to similar waste spaces mentioned by Dante; see note to l. 482. Chaucer's eagle is also Dante's eagle; see note to l. 500. Chaucer gives an account of Phaeton (l. 942) and of Icarus (l. 920) much like those given by Dante (Inf. xvii. 107, 109); both accounts, however, may have been taken from Ovid¹. Chaucer's account of the eagle's lecture to him (l. 729) is copied from Parad. i. 109-117. Chaucer's steep rock of ice (l. 1130) corresponds to Dante's steep rock (Purg. iii. 47). If Chaucer cannot describe all the beauty of the House of Fame (l. 1168), Dante is equally unable to describe Paradise (Par. i. 6). Chaucer copies from Dante his description of Statius, and follows his mistake in saying that he was born at Toulouse; see note to l. 1460. The description of the House of Rumour is also imitated from Dante; see note to l. 2034. Chaucer's error of making Marsyas a female arose from his not understanding the Italian form Marsia; see note to l. 1229.

These are but a few of the points discussed in Rambeau's remarkable article; it is impossible to give, in a summary, a just idea of the careful way in which the resemblances between these two great poets are pointed out. It is no longer possible to question Chaucer's knowledge of Italian, and it is useless to search for the original of this poem in Provençal literature, as Warton vaguely suggests that we should do. I can see no help to be obtained from a perusal of Petrarch's Trionfo della Fama, to which some refer us; it is quite clear that the general notion of a House of Fame was adopted from Ovid, Metam. xii. 39-63. The proof of this is seen in the care with which Chaucer works in all the details in that passage. He also keeps an eye on the celebrated description of Fame in Vergil, Aen. iv. 173-189; even to the unlucky rendering of pernicibus alis by 'partriches winges' (l. 1392).

By way of further assistance, I here quote the whole of Golding's translation of the above-mentioned passage from Ovid:—

¹ I do not feel sure that the resemblances quite prove that Chaucer followed Dante rather than Ovid. Thus, if Chaucer says lat the reynes goon (l. 951) where Dante says abbandonò li freni (Inf. xvii. 107), we have in Ovid equi . . . colla iugo eripiunt, abruptaque lora relinquunt (Met. ii. 315). Still, Chaucer's words are closer to Dante than to the original.

' Amid the world tweene heanen and earth, and sea, there is a place,
 Set from the bounds of each of them indifferently in space,
 From whence is seene what-euer thing is practizde any-where,
 Although the Realme be neere so farre: and roundly to the eare
 Commes whatsoeuer spoken is; Fame hath his dwelling there,
 Who in the top of all the house is lodged in a towre.
 A thousand entries, glades, and holes are framed in this bowre.
 There are no doores to shut. The doores stand open night and day.

The house is all of sounding brasse, and roreth eucry way,
 Reporting double eucry word it heareth people say.
 There is no rest within, there is no silence any-where.
 Yet is there not a yelling out: but humming, as it were
 The sound of surges being heard farre off, or like the sound
 That at the end of thunderclaps long after doth redound
 When Ioue doth make the clouds to crack. Within the courts is preace

Of common people, which to come and go do neuer ceace.
 And millions both of troths and lies run gadding eucry-where,
 And wordes confuselie flie in heapes, of which some fill the eare
 That heard not of them erst, and some cole-carriers part do play,
 To spread abroade the things they heard, and euer by the way
 The thing that was inuented growes much greater than before,
 And euery one that gets it by the end addes somewhat more.
 Light credit dwelleth there, there dwells rash error, there doth dwell Vaine ioy: there dwelleth hartlesse feare, and brute that loues to tell

Uncertaine newes vpon report, whereof he doth not knowe
 The author, and sedition who fresh rumors loues to sowe.
 This Fame beholdeth what is done in heauen, on sea, and land,
 And what is wrought in all the world he layes to vnderstand.'

Compare with this H. F., ll. 711-724, 672-699, 1025-1041, 1951-1976, 2034-2077.

The chief imitations of Chaucer's poem are The Palice of Honour, by Gawain Douglas, The Garland of Laurell, by Skelton, and The Temple of Fame, by Pope. Pope's poem should not be compared with Chaucer's; it is very different in character, and is best appreciated by forgetting its origin.

The authorities for the text are few and poor. There are but three MSS., viz. F., B., and P. (the last being a fragment); and two early printed editions, viz. Cx. and Th. F. and B. form a first group, and P. and Cx. a second; Th. partly follows Cx., and partly F. I have been much assisted by an excellent dissertation on The House of Fame by Hans Willert of Berlin, printed at Berlin in 1888. Since then, whilst engaged in writing this preface, I have received the edition of The House of Fame by the same author, with collation and notes, printed at Berlin in 1888. I am sorry it has reached me too late to help me, as it appears to be well and carefully done.

X. THE FORMER AGE.

First printed in 1866, in Morris's Chaucer, from a transcript made by Mr. Bradshaw, who pointed out its genuineness. It is ascribed to Chaucer in both MSS., and belongs, in fact, to his translation of Boethius, though probably written at a later date. In MS. I., the poem is headed:—'Chawcer vp-on this fyfte metur of the second book.' In MS. Hh., the colophon is: Finit Etas prima: Chaucers.' Dr. Koch thinks that the five poems here numbered X—XIV 'form a cyclus, as it were, being free transcriptions of different passages in Boethius' Consolatio Philosophiae.' There is, in fact, a probability that these were all written at about the same period, and that rather a late one, some years after the prose translation of Boethius had been completed; and a probable date for this completion is somewhere about 1380.

Both MSS. copies are from the same source, as both of them omit the same line, viz. l. 56; which I have had to supply by conjecture. Neither of the MSS. is well spelt, nor is either very satisfactory. The mistake in riming l. 47 with l. 43 instead of l. 45 may very well have been due to an oversight on the part of the poet himself. But the poem is a beautiful one, and admirably expressed; and its inclusion among the Minor Poems is a considerable gain.

Dr. Furnivall has printed the Latin text of Boethius, lib. ii. met. 5, from MS. I., as well as Chaucer's prose version of the same, for the sake of comparison with the text of the poem. The likeness hardly extends beyond the first four stanzas. I here transcribe, from Dr. Morris's edition, that part of the prose version which is parallel to the poem, omitting a few sentences which do not appear there at all:—

'Blysful was the first age of men. Thei helden hem apaied with the metes that the trewe erthes brou3ten furthe. Thei ne destroyede ne desceyvede not hem-self with outeage. They weren wont lyztly to slaken her hunger at euene with acornes of okes. XI. FORTUNE.

Attributed to Chaucer by Shirley in MSS. A. and T.; also marked as Chaucer's in MSS. F. and I. In MS. I., this poem and the preceding are actually introduced into Chaucer's translation of Boethius, between the fifth metre and the sixth prose of the second book. For further remarks, see the Notes.

XII. TRUTH.

This famous poem is attributed to Chaucer in MS. F., also (thrice) by Shirley, who in one of the copies in MS. T. (in which it occurs twice) calls it a 'Balade that Chaucier made on his deeth-bedde'; which is probably a mere bad guess⁸. The MSS. may be divided into two groups; the four best are in the first group, viz. At., E., Gg., Ct., and the rest (mostly) in the second group. Those of the first group have the readings Tempest (8), Know thy contree (19), and Hold the hye wey (20); whilst the rest have, in the same places, Peyne (8), Look up on hy (19), and Weyve thy lust (20). It is remarkable that the Envoy occurs in MS. At. only. It may have been suppressed owing to a misunderstanding of the word vache (cow), the true sense of which is a little obscure. The reference is to Boethius, bk. v. met. 5, where it is explained that quadrupeds look down upon the earth, whilst man alone looks up towards heaven; cf. lok up in l. 19 of the poem. The sense is therefore, that we are to cease to look down, and to learn to look up like true men; 'onlyche the lynage of man,' says Chaucer, in his translation of Boethius, 'heveth heyest his heyze heved¹. . . this figure amonesteth² the, that axest the hevене with thi ryzte visage, and hast areised thi forhede to beren up on heye thi corage, so that thi thouzt ne be nat y-hevied³ ne put lowe undir foot.'

XIII. GENTILESSE.

It is curious that this Balade not only occurs as an independent poem, as in MSS. T., Harl., Ct., and others, but is also quoted bodily in a poem by Henry Scogan in MS. A. It is attributed to Chaucer by Shirley in MSS. T. and Harl.; and still more satisfactory is the account given of it by Scogan. The title of Scogan's poem is:—'A moral balade made by Henry Scogan squyer. Here folowethe nexst a moral balade to my lorde the Prince, to my lord of Clarence, to my lord of Bedford, and to my lorde of Gloucestre; by Henry Scogan, at a souper of feorthe merchande (sic) in the vyntre in London, at the hous of Lowys Iohan.' It is printed in all the old editions of Chaucer; see poem no. 33, p. xx. Scogan tells us that he was 'fader,' i.e. tutor, to the four sons of Henry IV. above-mentioned⁴. His ballad is in 21 8-line stanzas, and he inserts Chaucer's Gentilesse, distinguished by being in 7-line stanzas, between the 13th and 14th stanzas of his own work. He refers to Chaucer in the 9th stanza thus:—

‘My maistre Chaucier, God his soule have,
That in his langage was so curyous,
He saide that the fader, nowe dede and grave,
Beqwathe no-thing his vertue with his hous
Un-to his sone.’

This is a reference to ll. 16, 17 of Chaucer’s poem. Again, in his 13th stanza, he says:—

‘By auncetrye thus may ye no-thing clayme,
As that my maistre Chaucier dothe expresse,
But temporell thing, that man may hurte and mayme;
Thane is gode stocke of vertuons noblesse;
And, sithe that he is lord of blessednesse
That made us alle, and for mankynde that dyed,
Folowe his vertue with full besynesse;
And of this thinge herke howe my maistre seyde.’

He here refers to lines 15–17, and lines 1–4 of Chaucer’s poem; and then proceeds to quote it in full. Having done so, he adds:—

‘Loo, here this noble poete of Brettayne
Howe hyely he, in vertuouse sentence,
The losse, in youthe, of vertue can compleyne.’

Scogan’s advice is all good; and, though he accuses himself of having misspent his youth, this may very well mean no more than such an expression means in the mouth of a good man. He is doubtless the very person to whom Chaucer’s ‘Lenvoy a Scogan’ was addressed, and Chaucer (l. 21) there gives him an excellent character for wisdom of speech. Accordingly, he is not to be confused with the Thomas Scogan or Scogin to whom is attributed an idle book called ‘Scoggins Iests,’ which were said to have been ‘gathered’ by Andrew Boord or Borde, author of the *Introduction of Knowledge*¹. When Shakespeare, in 2 Hen. IV. iii. 2. 33, says that Sir John Falstaff broke Scogan’s head, he was no doubt thinking of the supposed author of the jest-book, and may have been led, by observation of the name in a black-letter edition of Chaucer, to suppose that he lived in the time of Henry IV. This was quite enough for his purpose, though it is probable that the jester lived in the time of Edward IV.; see Tyrwhitt's note on the Envoy to Scogan. On the other hand, we find Ben Jonson taking his ideas about Scogan solely from Henry Scogan's poem and Chaucer's Envoy, without any reference to the jester. See his Masque of the Fortunate Isles, in which Scogan is first described and afterwards introduced. The description tells us nothing more than we know already.

As for Lewis John (p. lxxv.), Tyrwhitt says he was a Welshman, 'who was naturalised by Act of Parliament, 2 Hen. V., and who was concerned with Thomas Chaucer in the execution of the office of chief butler; Rot. Parl. 2 Hen. V. n. 18.'

Caxton's printed edition of this poem seems to follow a better source than any of the MSS.

XIV. LAK OF STEDFASTNESSE.

Attributed to Chaucer by Shirley in MSS. Harl. and T., and sent to King Richard at Windsor, according to the same authority. The general idea of it is from Boethius; see the Notes. Shirley refers it to the last years of Richard II., say 1397-9. We find something very like it in Piers Plowman, C. iv. 203-210, where Richard is told that bribery and wicked connivance at extortion have almost brought it about—

'That no lond loveth the, and yut leest thyn owene.'

In any case, the date can hardly vary between wider limits than between 1393 and 1399. Richard held a tournament at Windsor in 1399¹, which was but thinly attended; 'the greater part of the knights and squires of England were disgusted with the king.'

Of this poem, MS. Ct. seems to give the best text.

XV. AGAINST WOMEN UNCONSTAUNT.

For the genuineness of this Balade, we have chiefly the internal evidence to trust to; but this seems to me to be sufficiently strong. The Balade is perfect in construction, having but three rimes (-esse, -ace, -ene), and a refrain. The 'mood' of it strongly resembles that of the preceding Balade; the lines run with perfect smoothness, and the rimes are all Chaucerian. It is difficult to suppose that Lydgate, or even Hoccleve, who was a better metrician, could have produced so good an imitation of Chaucer's style. But we are not altogether without external evidence; for the general idea of the poem, and what is more important, the whole of the refrain, are taken from Chaucer's favourite author Machault (ed. Tarbé, p. 56); whose refrain is—'En lieu de bleu, Damë, vous vestez vert.' Again, the poem is only found in company with other poems by Chaucer. I have said, at p. 199, that it occurs in MSS. F. and Ct. Now in MS. Ct. we find, on the back of fol. 188 and on fol. 189, just four poems in the same hand. These are (1) Gentilesse; (2) Lak of Stedfastnesse; (3) Truth; and (4) Against Women Unconstaunt. As three of these are admittedly genuine, there is a chance that the fourth is the same. We may also notice that, in this MS., the poems on Lak of Stedfastnesse and Against Women Unconstaunt are not far apart. But, on lately searching MS. Ha. (Harl. 7578), I again found three of these poems in company, viz. (1) Gentilesse; (2) Lak of Stedfastnesse; and (3) Against Women Unconstaunt; the last being, in my view, precisely in its right place. This copy of the poem was previously unknown to me, and is not mentioned on p. 199. On collation, I find that it affords no variation of any importance, and suggests no improvement. In l. 4, it wrongly has I for ye; in l. 6, it agrees with Ct. in the inferior reading things; in l. 12, it wrongly omits the word a; and, in the same line, we find the spelling wethirkoc.

¹ Froissart, bk. iv. c. 105 (Johnes' translation).

XVI. LENVOY A SCOGAN.

This piece is attributed to Chaucer in all three MSS., viz. F., P., and Gg.; and is obviously genuine. The probable date of it is towards the end of 1393; see the Notes.

For some account of Scogan, see above.

XVII. LENVOY A BUKTON.

This piece is certainly genuine. In MS. F., the title is—'Lenvoy de Chaucer a Bukton.' In Julian Notary's edition it is—'Here foloweth the counceyll of Chaucer touching Maryag, &c. whiche was sente te (sic) Bucketon, &c.' In all the other early printed editions it is inserted without any title immediately after the Book of the Duchess.

The poem is one of Chaucer's latest productions, and may safely be dated about the end of the year 1396. This appears from the reference, in l. 23, to the great misfortune it would be to any Englishmen 'to be take in Fryse,' i.e. to be taken prisoner in Friesland. There is but one occasion on which this reference could have had any point, viz. during or just after the expedition of William of Hainault to Friesland, as narrated by Froissart in his Chronicles, bk. iv. capp. 78, 79. He tells that William of Hainault applied to Richard II. for assistance, who sent him 'some men-at-arms and two hundred archers, under the command of three English lords'. The expedition set out in August, 1396, and stayed in Friesland about five weeks, till the beginning of October, when 'the weather began to be very cold and to rain almost daily.' The great danger of being taken prisoner in Friesland was because the Frieslanders fought so desperately that they were seldom taken prisoners themselves. Then 'the Frieslanders offered their prisoners in exchange, man for man; but, when their enemies had none to give in return, they put them to death.' Besides this, the prisoners had to endure all the miseries of a bad and cold season, in an inclement climate. Hence the propriety of Chaucer's allusion fully appears. From l. 8, we learn that Chaucer was now a widower; for the word eft means 'again.' His wife is presumed to have died in the latter part of 1387. We should also observe the allusion to the Wife of Bath's Tale in l. 29.

XVIII. THE COMPLEYNT OF VENUS.

This poem is usually printed as if it formed part of the Complaint of Mars; but it is really distinct. It is attributed to Chaucer by Shirley both in MS. T. and in MS. A. It is not original, but translated from the French, as appears from l. 82. Shirley tells us that the author of the French poem was Sir Otes de Graunson, a worthy knight of Savoy. He is mentioned as receiving from King Richard the grant of an annuity of 126*l.*

¹ See Johnes' translation of Froissart, 1839; ii. 612-7.

13s. 4d. on 17 Nov. 1393; see Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 123. The association of this poem with the Complaint of Mars renders it probable that the Venus of this poem is the same as the Venus of the other, i.e. the Princess Isabel of Spain, and Duchess of York. This fits well with the word Princess at the beginning of the Envoy; and as she died in 1394, whilst Chaucer, on the other hand, complains of his advancing years, we must date the poem about 1393, i.e. just about the time when Graunson received his annuity. Chaucer, if born about 1340, was not really more than 53, but we must remember that, in those days, men often aged quickly. John of Gaunt, who is represented by Shakespeare as a very old man, only lived to the age of 59; and the Black Prince died quite worn out, at the age of 46. Compare the notes to ll. 73, 76, 79, and 82.

XIX. THE COMPLAINT TO HIS PURSE.

Attributed to Chaucer by Shirley, in MS. Harl. 7333; by Caxton; by the scribes of MSS. F., P., and Ff.; and by early editors. I do not know on what grounds Speght removed Chaucer's name, and substituted that of T. Occleve; there seems to be no authority for this change. I think it highly probable that the poem itself is older than the Envoy; see note to l. 17. In any case, the Envoy is almost certainly Chaucer's latest extant composition.

XX. PROVERBS.

Attributed to Chaucer in MSS. F. and Ha.; see further in the Notes. From the nature of the case, we cannot assign any probable date to this composition. Yet it was, perhaps, written after, rather than before, the Tale of Melibeus.

XXI. A COMPLAINT TO HIS LADY.

We may fairly say that this poem is attributed to Chaucer by Shirley, since in MS. Harl. 78, it is copied out by him as if it were a continuation of the Complaint to Pity, and the pages are, throughout, headed with the words—'The Balade of Pytee. By Chauciers.' Stowe implies that he had seen more than one MS. copy of this poem, and says that 'these verses were compiled by Geffray Chaucer,' for which he may have found authority in the MSS. However, the internal evidence settles the matter. It is evident that we have here a succession of metrical experiments, the last of which exhibits the ten-line stanza cut down to nine lines in his Complaint of Anelida; and, in fact, we here have that Complaint in a crude form, which was afterwards elaborated; see the references, in the Notes, to the corresponding passages in that poem. But a very great and unique interest is attached to lines 16 to 42. For here we have the sole example, in English literature of that period, of the use of terza rima, obviously copied from Dante; and Chaucer was the only writer who then had a real acquaintance with that author. I know of no other example of the use of this metre before the time of Lord Surrey and Sir Thomas Wyatt, when Englishmen once more sought acquaintance with Italian poetry. Consequently, we have here the pleasure of seeing how Chaucer handled Dante's metre; and the two fragments here preserved shew that he might have handled it quite successfully if he had persevered in doing so.

It is to be regretted that Shirley's spelling is so indifferent; he was rather an amateur than a professional scribe. Some of his peculiarities may be noticed, as they occur not only here, but also in the two following pieces, nos. XXII. and XXIII. He constantly adds a final e in the wrong place, producing such forms as fallethe, horwe, frome, and the like, and drops it where it is necessary, as in hert (for herte). He is fond of eo for ee or long e, as in beo, neodethe. He writes ellas for allas; also e in place of the prefix y-, as in eknytte for y-knit. This last peculiarity is extremely uncommon. I have removed the odd effect which these vagaries produce, and adopt the ordinary spelling of MSS. that resemble in type the Ellesmere MS. of the Canterbury Tales.

XXII. AN AMOROUS COMPLAINT.

Whilst searching through the various MSS. containing Minor Poems by Chaucer in the British Museum, my attention was arrested by this piece, which, as far as I know, has never before been printed. It is in Shirley's handwriting, but he does not claim it for Chaucer. However, the internal evidence seems to me irresistible; if he did not write it, we may well ask, who did? It is far above the level of Gower, Hoccleve, or Lydgate; and Chaucer's peculiar touches appear in it over and over again. There is, moreover, in the last stanza, a direct reference to the Parliament of Foules¹.

I cannot explain the oracular notice of time in the heading; even if we alter May to day, it contradicts l. 85, which mentions 'seint Valentines day.' The heading is—'And next folowyng begynnith an amerowse compleynte made at wyndesore in the laste May tofore Nouembre' (sic). The date is inexplicable; but the mention of locality is interesting. Chaucer became a 'valet of the king's chamber' in 1367, and must frequently have been at Windsor, where the institution of the Order of the Garter was annually celebrated on St. George's Day (April 23). Some of the parallelisms in expression between the present poem and other passages in Chaucer's Works are pointed out in the Notes.

This Complaint should be compared with the complaint uttered by Dorigen in the Cant. Tales, 11623-11637, which is little else than the same thing in a compressed form. There is also much resemblance to the 'complaints' in Troilus; see the references in the Notes.

Since printing the text at p. 218, I have found that it is precisely the same poem as one extant in MSS. F. and B., with the title 'Complaynt Damours.' I had noticed the latter some time ago, and had made a note that it ought to be closely examined; but unfortunately I forgot to do so, or I should have seen at once that it had strong claims to being considered genuine. These claims are considerably strengthened by the fact of the appearance of the poem in these two Chaucerian MSS., the former of which contains no less than seventeen, and the latter eight of the Minor Poems.

It is of some importance to give here the results of a collation of the text with these MSS. In most places, their readings are inferior to those in the text; but in other places they suggest corrections.

In MS. F. the fourth stanza is mutilated; the latter half of lines 24-28 is missing.

In B., below the word Explicit, another and later hand has scrawled 'be me Humfrey Flemyng.' Perhaps be (i. e. by) is to be taken in the (common) sense of 'with reference to'; so that Humfrey thought the poem applicable to his own case¹; see p. lix. l. 5 from the bottom. It cannot mean that he either wrote out or composed the poem.

These readings do not help us much; for the text, on the whole, is better. They confirm my insertion of in (29); of that

¹ Or perhaps it merely means—'this signature is mine.' It is a mere scribble, and does not necessarily relate to the poem at all.

(54) ; of hir (62) ; but they leave many lines imperfect. They suggest the suppression of ne (13) ; of best (14) ; and of the second nay (30) ; these words are not needed.

Lines 8, 16, 17, 31 are hardly any better. The best suggestions are these ; in l. 43 read—'So that algates, she is verray rote' ; in l. 64 read 'Yet wolde I' ; in l. 65 read 'meke' ; in l. 76 read 'on' for 'unto.' In l. 87, I have already put 'whos' for 'was' in Harl.

In l. 25, song must be kept. I now think ll. 24 and 25 should run thus :—

I may wel singe, 'in sory tyme I spende
My lyf' ; that song is my confusioun.

There is probably a reference to some popular refrain, like that in XI. 7.

It is not at all improbable that a better copy of this poem may yet be found.

XXIII. BALADE OF COMPLEYNT.

This poem, which has not been printed before, as far as I am aware, occurs in Shirley's MS. Addit. 16165, at fol. 256, back. It is merely headed 'Balade of compleynte,' without any note of its being Chaucer's. But I had not read more than four lines of it before I at once recognised the well-known melodious flow which Chaucer's imitators (except sometimes Hoccleve) so seldom succeed in reproducing. And when I had only finished reading the first stanza, I decided at once to copy it out, not doubting that it would fulfil all the usual tests of metre, rime, and language ; which it certainly does. It is far more correct in wording than the preceding poem, and does not require that we should either omit or supply a single word. But in l. 20 the last word should surely be dere rather than here ; and the last word in l. 11 is indistinct. I read it as reeuwe, afterwards altered to newe ; and newe makes very good sense. I may notice that Shirley's n's are very peculiar : the first upstroke is very long, commencing below the line ; and this peculiarity renders the reading tolerably certain. Some lines resemble lines in no. XXI., as is pointed out in the Notes. Altogether, it is a beautiful poem, and its recovery is a clear gain.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

I regret that this Introduction has run to so great a length ; but it was incumbent on me to shew reasons for the rejection or acceptance of the very large number of pieces which have hitherto been included in editions of Chaucer's Works. I have now only to add that I have, of course, been greatly indebted to the works of others ; so much so indeed that I can hardly particularise them. I must, however, mention very gratefully the names of Dr. Furnivall, Professor Ten Brink, Dr. Koch, Dr. Willert, Max Lange, Rambeau, and various contributors to the publications of the Chaucer Society ; and though I have consulted for myself such books as Le Roman de la Rose, the Teseide, the Thebaid of Statius, the poems of Machault, and a great many more, and have inserted in the Notes a large number of references which I discovered for myself, I beg leave distinctly to disclaim any merit, not doubting that most of what I have said may very likely have been said by others, and said better. Want of leisure renders it impossible for me to give to others their due meed of recognition in many instances ; for I have often found it less troublesome to consult original authorities for myself than to hunt up what others have said relative to the passage under consideration.

I have a special object in making this explanation ; for I have learnt, to my great regret, that, if I should lay claim to originality of research, I may easily seem to borrow from others without acknowledgment¹. I therefore wish to say that I beg leave to assign the credit of anything that seems to be new in the present volume to any one who cares to claim it; and I hope it may be clearly understood that, wherever I differ from any eminent critic, I am willing that he shall consider me to be in the wrong (unless I can completely prove the contrary); and wherever I agree with him, let him assume that the discovery was his own. It is not always easy to ascertain what are the most valuable things that each critic has ever said, though I admit that each of us ought to do so as far as his limited opportunities will allow him. On the other hand, I greatly fear that I have missed some remarks of value, and have failed to reproduce some solutions of difficulties that have already been given. To use the master's own words, in the introduction to his Treatise on the Astrolabie—'I nam but a lewd compilatour of the labour of [othere men]; and with this swerd shal I slen envie.'

The Glossary is almost wholly the work of Mr. C. Sapsworth, Scholar of St. John's College, Cambridge; and I am much indebted to him for his help. In the matter of transcription, I have also received help from my daughters, and from Miss F. Whitehead.

CHAUCER
THE MINOR POEMS

I. AN A. B. C.

Incipit carmen secundum ordinem literarum Alphabeti.

ALMIGHTY and al merciable queene,
 To whom that al this world fleeth for socour,
 To have relees of sinne, sorwe and tene,
 Glorious virgine, of alle floures flour,
 To thee I flee, confounded in errour! 5
 Help and releve, thou mighty debonaire,
 Have mercy on my perilous langour!
 Venquisht me hath my cruel adversaire.

Bountee so fix hath in thyn herte his tente,
 That wel I wot thou wolt my socour be, 10
 Thou canst not warne him that, with good entente,
 Axeth thyn help. Thyn herte is ay so free,
 Thou art largesse of pleyn felicitee,
 Haven of refut, of quiete and of reste.
 Lo, how that theves seven chasen me! 15
 Help, lady bright, er that my ship to-breste!

Comfort is noon, but in yow, lady dere,
 For lo, my sinne and my confusioun,
 Which oughten not in thy presence appere,
 Han take on me a grevous accioun 20

 That in this world was never wight so wo
 With-oute dethe; and, if I shal not feyne,
 My purpos was, to Pite to compleyne 5
 Upon the crueltee and tirannye
 Of Love, that for my trouthe doth me dye.

And when that I, by lengthe of certeyn yeres,
 Had ever in oon a tyme sought to speke,
 To Pite ran I, al bespreynt with teres, 10
 To preyen hir on Cruelte me awreke.
 But, er I might with any worde out-breke,
 Or tellen any of my peynes smerte,
 I fond hir deed, and buried in an herte.

Adoun I fel, when that I saugh the herse, 15
 Deed as stoon, whyl that the swogh me laste;
 But up I roos, with colour ful diverse,
 And pitously on hir myn yën caste,
 And ner the corps I gan to pressen faste,
 And for the soule I shoop me for to preye; 20
 I nas but lorn; ther nas no more to seye.

Thus am I slayn, sith that Pite is deed;
 Allas! that day! that ever hit shulde falle!
 What maner man dar now holde up his heed?
 To whom shal any sorwful herte calle? 25
 Now Cruelte hath cast to sleen us alle,
 In ydel hope, folk redelees of peyne—
 Sith she is deed—to whom shul we compleyne?

III. THE BOOK OF THE DUCHESS.

The Proem.

I HAVE gret wonder, by this lighte,
 How that I live, for day ne nighte
 I may nat slepe wel nigh nocht;
 I have so many an ydel thought
 Purely for defaute of slepe, 5
 That, by my trouthe, I take kepe
 Of no-thing, how hit cometh or goth,
 Ne me nis no-thing leef nor loth.
 Al is yliche good to me—
 Ioye or sorowe, wherso hit be— 10
 For I have feling in no-thing,
 But, as it were, a mased thing,
 Alway in point to falle a-doun;
 For [swich] imaginacioun
 Is alway hoolly in my mynde. 15
 And wel ye wite, agaynes kynde
 Hit were to liven in this wyse;
 For nature wolde nat suffyse
 To noon erthely creature
 Not longe tyme to endure 20
 Withoute slepe, and been in sorwe;
 And I ne may, ne night ne morwe

Out of his slepe, and gan to goon,
 And did as he had bede him doon;
 Took up the dreynte body sone 195
 And bar hit forth to Alcione,
 His wyf the quene, ther as she lay,
 Right even a quarter before day,
 And stood right at her beddes feet,
 And called her, right as she heet, 200
 By name, and seyde, 'my swete wyf,
 Awak! let be your sorwful lyf!
 For in your sorwe ther lyth no reed;
 For certes, swete, I nam but deed;
 Ye shul me never on lyve y-se. 205
 But good swete herte, [look] that ye
 Bury my body, swiche a tyde

 And far-wel, swete, my worldes blisse!
 I praye god your sorwe lisse; 210
 To litel whyl our blisse lasteth!'

With that her eyen up she casteth,
 And saw noght; '[A]!' quod she for sorwe,
 And deyed within the thridde morwe.
 But what she sayde more in that swow 215
 I may not telle yow as now,
 Hit wer to longe for to dwelle;
 My first matere I wil yow telle,
 Wherfor I have told this thing
 Of Alcione and Seys the king. 220

 And I wol telle yow wherfore ;
 For I ne might, for bote ne bale,
 Slepe, or I had red this tale
 Of this dreynte Seys the king,
 And of the goddes of sleping. 230
 Whan I had red this tale wel,
 And over-loked hit everydel,
 Me thoghte wonder if hit were so ;
 For I had never herd speke, or tho,
 Of no goddes that coude make 235

ME thoghte thus :—that hit was May,
 And in the dawning ther I lay,
 Me mette thus, in my bed al naked :—
 [I] loked forth, for I was waked
 With smale foules a gret hepe, 295
 That had affrayed me out of slepe,
 Through noyse and swetnesse of her song,
 And, as me mette, they sate among,
 Upon my chambre-roof withoute,
 Upon the tyles, al a-boute, 300
 And songen, everich in his wyse,
 The moste solempne servyse
 By note, that ever man, I trowe,

 He ferde thus evel ther he seet,
 I wente and stood right at his feet,
 And grette him, but he spak noght,
 But argued with his owne thoght,
 And in his witte disputed faste 505
 Why and how his lyf might laste ;
 Him thoughte his sorwes wer so smerte
 And lay so colde upon his herte ;
 So, through his sorwe and hevvy thoght,
 Made him that he ne herde me noght ; 510
 For he had wel nigh lost his mynde,
 Thogh Pan, that men clepe god of kynde,
 Were for his sorwes never so wroth.

But at the laste, to sayn right soth,
 He was war of me, how I stood 515
 Before him, and dide of myn hood,
 And had ygret him, as I coude.
 Debonairly, and no-thing loude,

The false trayteresse, pervers,
 God wolde I coude clepe her wers!
 For now she worcheth me ful wo, 815
 And I wol telle sone why so.
 'Among these ladies thus echoon,
 Soth to seyn, I saw [ther] oon
 That was lyk noon of [al] the route,
 For I dar swere, withoute doute, 820
 That as the someres sonne bright
 Is fairer, clerer, and hath more light
 Than any planete, [is] in heven,
 The mone, or the sterres seven,
 For al the worlde, so had she 825
 Surmounted hem alle of beaute,
 Of maner and of comlinessse,
 Of stature and wel set gladnesse,
 Of goodlihede so wel beseye—
 Shortly, what shal I more seye? 830
 By god, and by his halwes twelve,
 It was my swete, right as her-selve
 She had so stedfast countenaunce,
 So noble port and meyntenaunce;
 And Love, that had herd my bone, 835
 Had espyed me thus sone,
 That she ful sone, in my thoght,
 As helpe me god, so was y-caught
 So sodenly, that I ne took
 No maner counseyl but at her look 840

IV. THE COMPLEYNT OF MARS.

The Proem.

'GLADETH, ye foules, of the morow gray,
 Lo! Venus risen among yon rowes rede!
 And floures fresshe, honouren ye this day;
 For when the sonne uprist, then wol ye sprede.
 But ye lovers, that lye in any drede, 5
 Fleëth, lest wikked tonges yow espye;
 Lo! yond the sonne, the candel of Ielosye!
 With teres blewe, and with a wounded herte
 Taketh your leve; and, with seynt Iohn to borow,
 Apeseth somewhat of your sorowes smerte, 10
 Tyme cometh eft, that cese shal your sorow;
 The glade night is worth an hevvy morow!—
 (Seynt Valentyne! a foul thus herde I singe Upon thy day, er sonne gan up-springe).—
 Yet sang this foul—'I rede yow al a-wake, 15
 And ye, that han not chosen in humble wyse,
 Without repenting cheseth yow your make.
 And ye, that han ful chosen as I devyse,
 Yet at the leste renoveleth your servyse;

Yet wol I, in my briddes wyse, singe
The sentence of the compleynt, at the leste,
That woful Mars made atte departinge 25
Fro fresshe Venus in a morweninge,
Whan Phebus, with his fyry torches rede,
Ransaked hath every lover in his drede.

The Story.

¶ Whylom the thridde hevenes lord above,
As wel by hevenish revolucioun 30
As by desert, hath wonne Venus his love,
And she hath take him in subieccioun,
And as a maistresse taught him his lessoun,
Comaunding him that never, in her servyse,
He nere so bold no lover to despyse. 35

For she forbad him Ielosye at alle,
And cruelte, and bost, and tyrannye;
She made him at her lust so humble and talle,
That when her deyned caste on him her yë,
He tok in pacience to live or-dye; 40
And thus she brydeleth him in her manere,
With no-thing but with scourging of her chere.

Who regneth now in blisse but Venus,
That hath this worthy knight in governaunce?
Who singeth now but Mars, that serveth thus 45
The faire Venus, causer of plesaunce?

He bynt him to perpetual obeisaunce,
 And she bynt her to loven him for ever,
 But so be that his trespas hit dissever.

Thus be they knit, and regnen as in heven 50
 By loking most; til hit fil, on a tyde,
 That by her bothe assent was set a steven,
 That Mars shal entre, as faste as he may giyde,
 Into her nexte paleys, to abyde,
 Walking his cours till she had him a-take, 55
 And he preyde her to haste her for his sake.

Then seyde he thus—'myn hertes lady swete,
 Ye knowe wel my mischef in that place;
 For sikerly, til that I with yow mete,
 My lyf stant ther in aventure and grace; 60
 But when I see the beaute of your face,
 Ther is no dred of deth may do me smerte,
 For al your lust is ese to myn herte.'

She hath so gret compassion of her knight,
 That dwelleth in solitude til she come; 65
 For hit stood so, that ilke tyme, no wight
 Counseyled him, ne seyde to him welcome,
 That nigh her wit for wo was overcome;
 Wherefore she spedde her als faste in her weye,
 Almost in oon day, as he dide in tweye. 70

And thus in Ioye and blisse I let hem dwelle ;
 This worthy Mars, that is of knighthod welle, 75
 The flour of fairnes lappeth in his armes,
 And Venus kisseth Mars, the god of armes.

Soiourned hath this Mars, of which I rede,
 In chambre amid the paleys prively
 A certeyn tyme, til him fel a drede, 80
 Through Phebus, that was comen hastely
 Within the paleys-yates sturdely,
 With torche in honde, of which the stremes brighte
 On Venus chambre knockeden ful lighte.

The chambre, ther as lay this fresshe quene, 85
 Depeynted was with whyte boles grete,
 And by the light she knew, that shoon so shene,
 That Phebus cam to brenne hem with his hete ;
 This sely Venus, nigh dreynt in teres wete,
 Enbraceth Mars, and seyde, ' alas ! I dye ! 90
 The torch is come, that al this world wol wrye.'

Up sterte Mars, him liste not to slepe,
 Whan he his lady herde so compleyne ;
 But, for his nature was not for to wepe,
 In stede of teres, fro his eyen tweyne 95
 The fyry sparkes brosten out for payne ;

 Fle wolde he not, ne mighte him-selven hyde.

His myghty spere, as he was wont to fighte,
 He shaketh so that almost it to-wonde;
 Ful hevy was he to walken over londe;
 He may not holde with Venus companye,
 But bad her fleen, lest Phebus her espye. 105

O woful Mars! alas! what maist thou seyn,
 That in the paleys of thy disturbaunce
 Art left behynde, in peril to be sleyn?
 And yet ther-to is double thy penaunce,
 For she, that hath thyn herte in governaunce, 110
 Is passed halfe the stremes of thyn yën;
 That thou nere swift, wel maist thou wepe and cryen.

Now fleeth Venus in-to Cylenius tour,
 With voide cours, for fere of Phebus light.
 Alas! and ther ne hath she no socour, 115
 For she ne fond ne saw no maner wight;
 And eek as ther she had but litil might;
 Wher-for, her-selven for to hyde and save,
 Within the gate she fledde into a cave.

Derk was this cave, and smoking as the helle, 120
 Not but two pas within the gate hit stood;
 A naturel day in derk I let her dwelle.
 Now wol I speke of Mars, furious and wood;
 For sorow he wold have seen his herte blood;

The compleynt of Mars.The Proem of the Compleynt.

¶ The ordre of compleynt requireth skilfully, 155
 That if a wight shal pleyne pitously,
 There not be cause wherfor that men pleyne;
 Or men may deme he pleyneith folily
 And causeles; alas! that am not I!
 Wherfor the ground and cause of al my peyne, 160
 So as my troubled wit may hit ateyne,
 I wol reherse; not for to have redresse,
 But to declare my ground of hevinesse.

Devotion.

¶ The firste tyme, alas! that I was wrought,
 And for certeyn effectes hider broght 165
 By him that lordeth ech intelligence,
 I yaf my trewe servise and my thoght,
 For evermore—how dere I have hit boght!—
 To her, that is of so gret excellence,
 That what wight that first sheweth his presence, 170
 When she is wroth and taketh of him no cure,
 He may not longe in Ioye of love endure.
 This is no feyned mater that I telle;
 My lady is the verrey sours and welle
 Of beaute, lust, fredom, and gentilnesse, 175
 Of riche aray—how dere men hit selle!—
 Of al disport in which men frendly dwelle,
 Of love and pley, and of benigne humblesse,
 Of sounne of instruments of al swetnesse;

A Lady in fear and woe.

¶ To whom shal I than pleyne of my distresse?
Who may me helpe, who may my harm redresse?

The Brooch of Thebes.

¶ The broche of Thebes was of suche a kynde, 245
 So ful of rubies and of stones of Ynde,
 That every wight, that sette on hit an yē,

 So sore the beaute wolde his herte bynde,
 Til he hit hadde, him thoghte he moste dye; 250

The Proem.

THE lyf so short, the craft so long to lerne,
 Thassay so hard, so sharp the conquering,
 The dredful Ioy, that alwey slit so yerne,
 Al this mene I by love, that my feling
 Astonyeth with his wonderful worching 5
 So sore ywis, that whan I on him thinke,
 Nat wot I wel wher that I wake or winke.

For al be that I knowe not love in dede,
 Ne wot how that he quytesth folk her hyre,
 Yet happeth me ful ofte in bokes rede 10
 Of his miracles, and his cruel yre;
 Ther rede I wel he wol be lord and syre,
 I dar not seyn, his strokes ben so sore,
 But God save swich a lord! I can no more.

Of usage, what for luste what for lore, 15
 On bokes rede I ofte, as I yow tolde.
 But wherfor that I speke al this? not yore
 Agon, hit happed me for to beholde
 Upon a boke, was write with lettres olde;

 Fulfid of thought and besy hevinesse;
 For bothe I hadde thing which that I nolde, 90
 And eek I ne hadde that thing that I wolde.

But fynally my spirit, at the laste,
 For-wery of my labour al the day,
 Took rest, that made me to slepe faste,

The Story.

This forseid African me hente anoon, 120
 And forth with him unto a gate broghte
 Right of a parke, walled with grene stoon;
 And over the gate, with lettres large y-wroghte,
 Ther weren vers y-writen, as me thoghte,
 On eyther halfe, of ful gret difference, 125
 Of which I shal yow sey the pleyn sentence.

‘Thorgh me men goon in-to that blisful place
 Of hertes hele and dedly woundes cure;
 Thorgh me men goon unto the welle of Grace,
 Ther grene and lusty May shal ever endure; 130
 This is the wey to al good aventure;
 Be glad, thou reder, and thy sorwe of-caste,
 Al open am I; passe in, and hy the faste!’

‘Thorgh me men goon,’ than spak that other syde,
 ‘Unto the mortal strokes of the spere, 135
 Of which Disdayn and Daunger is the gyde,
 Ther tree shal never fruyt ne leves bere.
 This stream you ledeth to the sorwful were,
 Ther as the fish in prison is al drye;
 Theschewing is only the remedye.’ 140

Thise vers of gold and blak y-writen were,
 The whiche I gan a stounde to beholde,
 For with that oon encresed ay my fere,
 And with that other gan myn herte bolde;
 That oon me hette, that other did me colde, 145

Hath knit by even noubre of acord,
 In esy vois began to speke and seye,
 'Foules, tak hede of my sentence, I preye,
 And, for your ese, in furthering of your nede,
 As faste as I may speke, I wol me sped. 385

Ye know wel how, seynt Valentynes day,
 By my statute and through my governaunce,
 Ye come for to chese—and flee your way—
 Your makes, as I prik yow with plesaunce.
 But natheles, my rightful ordenaunce 390
 May I not lete, for al this world to winne,
 That he that most is worthy shal beginne.

VI. MERCILES BEAUTE: A TRIPLE ROUNDEL.

I. Captivity.

YOUR yēn two wol sle me sodenly,
I may the beaute of hem not sustene,
So woundeth hit through-out my herte kene.

And but your word wcl helen hastily
My hertes wounde, whyl that hit is grene, 5
Your yēn two wol sle me sodenly;
I may the beaute of hem not sustene.

Upon my trouthe I sey yow feithfully,
That ye ben of my lyf and deth the quene;
For with my deth the trouthe shal be sene. 10
Your yēn two wol sle me sodenly,
I may the beaute of hem not sustene,
So woundeth hit through-out my herte kene.

II. Rejection.

So hath your beaute fro your herte chaced
Pitee, that me ne availeth not to pleyne; 15
For Daunger halt your mercy in his cheyne.

Giltles my deth thus han ye me purchaced;
I sey yow soth, me nedeth not to feyne;

This excellent text is from P. (Pepys 2006, p. 290). I note all variations from the MS.

1. P. Yowre two yen; but read Your yen two; for in ll. 6, 11, the MS. has Your yen, &c. P. wolle. 2. P. them; read hem. 3. P. wondeth it thorowout (out written in the margin). 4. P. will. 5. P. *So hath your beaute fro your herte chaced
 Pitee, that me ne availeth not to pleyne.* 20
 Allas! that nature hath in yow compassed
 So gret beaute, that no man may atteyne
 To mercy, though he sterve for the peyne.
*So hath your beaute fro your herte chaced
 Pitee, that me ne availeth not to pleyne ;* 25
For daunger halt your mercy in his cheyne.

III. Escape.

Sin I fro love escaped am so fat,
 I never think to ben in his prison lene ;
 Sin I am fre, I counte him not a bene.
 He may answer, and seye this or that ; 30
 I do no fors, I speke right as I mene.
*Sin I fro love escaped am so fat,
 I never think to ben in his prison lene.*
 Love hath my name y-strike out of his sclat,
 And he is strike out of my bokes clene 35
 For ever-mo ; [ther] is non other mene.
*Sin I fro love escaped am so fat,

VII. ANELIDA AND ARCITE.

The compleynt of feire Anelida and fals Arcite.

Proem.

Thou ferse god of armes, Mars the rede,
 That in the frosty country called Trace,
 Within thy grisly temple ful of drede
 Honoured art, as patroun of that place!
 With thy Bellona, Pallas, ful of grace, 5
 Be present, and my song continue and gye;
 At my beginning thus to thee I crye.

For hit ful depe is sonken in my mynde,
 With pitous herte in English for tendyte
 This olde storie, in Latin which I fynde, 10
 Of quene Anelida and fals Arcite,
 That elde, which that al can frete and byte,
 As hit hath freten mony a noble storie,
 Hath nigh devoured out of our memorie.

Be favorable eek, thou Polymia, 15
 On Parnaso that, with thy sustres glade,
 By Elicon, not fer from Cirrea,
 Singest with vois memorial in the shade,
 Under the laurer which that may not fade,

The Story.

Iamque domos patrias, &c.; Statii Thebais, xii. 519.

Whan Theseus, with werres longe and grete,
 The aspre folk of Cithe had over-come,
 With laurer crowned, in his char gold-bete,
 Hoom to his contre-houses is y-come;— 25
 For which the peple blisful, al and somme,
 So cryden, that unto the sterres hit wente,
 And him to honouren dide al her entente;—

Before this duk, in signe of hy victorie,
 The trompes come, and in his baner large 30
 The image of Mars; and, in token of glorie,
 Men mighten seen of tresor many a charge,
 Many a bright helm, and many a spere and targe,
 Many a fresh knight, and many a blisful route,
 On hors, on fote, in al the felde aboute. 35

Ipolita his wyf, the hardy quene
 Of Cithia, that he conquered hadde,
 With Emelye, her yonge suster shene,
 Faire in a char of golde he with him ladde,
 That al the ground aboute her char she spradde 40
 With brightnesse of the beaute in her face,
 Fulfid of largesse and of alle grace.

 The slye wey of that I gan to wryte,
 Of quene Anelida and fals Arcite.

Mars, which that through his furious course of yre,
 The olde wrath of Iuno to fulfille, 51
 Hath set the peples hertes bothe on fyre
 Of Thebes and Grece, and everich other to kille
 With bloody speres, ne rested never stille,
 But throng now her, now ther, among hem bothe, 55
 That everich other slough, so wer they wrothe.

For whan Amphiorax and Tydeus,
 Ipomedon, Parthonopee also
 Were dede, and slayn [was] proud Campaneus,
 And whan the wrecches Thebans, bretheren two, 60
 Were slayn, and king Adrastus hoom a-go,
 So desolat stood Thebes and so bare,
 That no wight coude remedie of his care.

And whan the olde Creon gan espye
 How that the blood roial was broght adoun, 65
 He held the cite by his tyrannye,
 And did the gentils of that regioun
 To ben his frendes, and dwellen in the toun.

The noble folk wer to the toune ydrawe. 70

Among al these, Anelida the quene
Of Ermony was in that toun dwellinge,
That fairer was then is the sonne shene;
Through-out the world so gan her name springe,
That her to seen had every wight lykinge; 75
For, as of trouthe, is ther noon her liche,
Of al the women in this worlde riche.

Yong was this quene, of twenty yeer of elde,
Of midel stature, and of swich fairnesse,
That nature had a Ioye her to behelde; 80
And for to speken of her stedfastnesse,
She passed hath Penelope and Lucesse,
And shortly, if she shal be comprehended,
In her ne mighte no-thing been amended.

This Theban knight [Arcite] eek, soth to seyn, 85
Was yong, and ther-with-al a lusty knight,
But he was double in love and no-thing pleyn,
And subtil in that crafte over any wight,
And with his cunning wan this lady bright;
For so ferforth he gan her trouthe assure, 90

1. I wot my-self as wel as any wight; 220

IX. THE HOUS OF FAME.

Book I.

God turne us every dreem to gode !
For hit is wonder, by the rode,
To my wit, what causeth swevenes
Either on morwes, or on evenes ;
And why theeffect folweth of somme, 5
And of somme hit shal never come ;
Why that is an avisioun,
Why this, a revelacioun,
Why this a dreem, why that a sweven,
And nat to every man liche even ; 10
Why this a fantome, these oracles,
I noot : but who-so of these miracles
The causes knoweth bet than I,
Devyne he ; for I certeynly
Ne can hem noght, ne never thinke 15
To besily my wit to swinke,
To knowe of her signifaunce
The gendres, neither the distaunce
Of tymes of hem, ne the causes
For-why this more then that cause is ; 20
As if folkes complexiouns
Make hem dreme of reflexiouns ;
Or elles thus, as others sayn,

In Itaile, with ful moche pyne,
 Unto the strondes of Lavyne.
 And tho began the story anoon,
 As I shal telle yow echoon. 150

First saw I the destruccioun
 Of Troye, through the Grek Synoun,
 With his false forsweringe,
 And his chere and his lesinge
 Made the hors broght into Troye, 155
 Thorgh which Troyens loste al her Ioye.

And after this was grave, allas!
 How Ilioun assailed was
 And wonne, and king Priam y-slayn,
 And Polites his sone, certayn, 160
 Dispitously of dan Pirrus.

And next that saw I how Venus,
 Whan that she saw the castel brende,
 Doun fro the heven gan descende,
 And bad hir sone Eneas flee; 165
 And how he fled, and how that he Escaped was from al the pres,
 And took his fader, Anchises,
 And bar him on his bakke away,
 Cryinge, 'Allas, and welaway!' 170
 The whiche Anchises in his honde
 Bar the goddes of the londe,
 Thilke that unbrende were.

And I saw next, in alle his fere,
 How Creusa, dan Eneas wyf, 175
 Which that he loved as his lyf,
 And hir yonge sone Iulo
 And eek Ascanius also,

 That any woman mighte do,
 Weninge hit had al be so,
 As he hir swoor; and her-by demed
 That he was good, for he swich semed.
 Allas! what harm doth apparence, 265
 Whan hit is fals in existence!
 For he to hir a traitour was;
 Wherfor she slow hir-self, allas!
 Lo, how a woman doth amis,
 To love him that unknowen is! 270
 For, by Crist, lo! thus hit fareth;
 'Hit is not al gold, that glareth.'
 For, al-so brouke I wel myn heed,
 Ther may be under goodliheed
 Kevered many a shrewed vyce; 275
 Therfor be no wight so nyce,
 To take a love oonly for chere,

For speche, or for frendly manere ;
 For this shal every woman fynde
 [That som man, of his pure kynde, 280
 Wol shewen outward the faireste,
 Til he have caught that what him leste ;
 And thanne wol he causes fynde,]
 And swere how that she is unkynde,
 Or fals, or prevy, or double was. 285
 Al this seye I by Eneas
 And Dido, and her nyce lest,
 That lovede al to sone a gest ;
 Therfor I wol seye a proverbe,
 That ' he that fully knoweth therbe 290
 May saufly leye hit to his yè' ;
 Withoute dreed, this is no lye.
 But let us speke of Eneas,
 How he betrayed hir, allas !
 And lefte hir ful unkyndely. 295
 So whan she saw al-utterly,
 That he wolde hir of trouthe faile,
 And wendé fro hir to Itaile,
 She gan to wringe hir hondes two.
 ' Allas ! ' quod she, ' what me is wo ! 300
 Allas ! is every man thus trewe,
 That every yere wolde have a newe,
 If hit so longe tyme dure,
 Or elles three, peraventure ?
 As thus : of oon he wolde have fame 305
 In magnifying of his name ;
 Another for frendship, seith he ;
 And yet ther shal the thridde be,
 That shal be taken for delyte,
 Lo, or for singular profyte.' 310

 Right so soun is air y-broke. 770
 But this may be in many wyse,
 Of which I wil thee two devyse,
 As soun that comth of pype or harpe.
 For whan a pype is blowen sharpe,
 The air is twist with violence, 775
 And rent; lo, this is my sentence;
 Eek, whan men harpe-strings smyte,
 Whether hit be moche or lyte, (270)
 Lo, with the strook the air to-breketh;
 Right so hit breketh whan men speketh. 780
 Thus wost thou wel what thing is speche.
 'Now hennesforth I wol thee teche,
 How every speche, or noise, or soun,
 Through his multiplicacioun,
 Thogh hit were pyped of a mouse, 785
 Moot nede come to Fames House.
 I preve hit thus—tak hede now—
 By experience; for if that thou (280)
 Throwe on water now a stoon,
 Wel wost thou, hit wol make anoon 790
 A litel roundel as a cercle,
 Paraventure brood as a covercle;
 And right anoon thou shalt see weel,
 That wheel wol cause another wheel,
 And that the thridde, and so forth, brother, 795
 Every cercle causing other,

 And right thus every word, ywis,
 That loude or prive y-spoken is, 810
 Moveth first an air aboute,
 And of this moving, out of doute,
 Another air anoon is meved,
 As I have of the water preved,
 That every cercle causeth other. 815
 Right so of air, my leve brother ;
 Everich air in other stereth

Incipit liber tercius.

Invocation.

O GOD of science and of light,
 Apollo, through thy grete might,
 This litel laste book thou gye!
 Nat that I wilne, for maistrye,
 Here art poetical be shewed; 1095
 But, for the rym is light and lewed,
 Yit make hit sumwhat agreable,
 Though som vers faile in a sillable;
 And that I do no diligence
 To shewe craft, but o sentence. (10) 1100
 And if, divyne vertu, thou
 Wilt helpe me to shewe now
 That in myn hede y-marked is—
 Lo, that is for to menen this,
 The Hous of Fame for to descryve— 1105
 Thou shalt se me go, as blyve,
 Unto the nexte laure I see,
 And kisse hit, for hit is thy tree;
 Now entreth in my breste anoon!—

 But up I clomb with alle paine,
 And though to clymbe hit greved me,
 Yit I ententif was to see, (30) 1120
 And for to pouren wonder lowe,
 If I coude any weyes knowe
 What maner stoon this roche was;
 For hit was lyk a thing of glas,
 But that hit shoon ful more clere; 1125
 But of what congeled matere
 Hit was, I niste redely.

But at the laste espied I,
 And found that hit was, every del,
 A roche of yse, and not of steel. (40) 1130
 Thoughte I, 'By Seynt Thomas of Kent!

 For ese of yow, and losse of tyme :
 For tyme y-lost, this knowen ye,
 By no way may recovered be.

Ther saugh I pleyen Iogelours,
 Magiciens, and tregetours, (170) 1260

And phitonesses, charmeresses,
 Olde wicches, sorceresses,
 That use exorsisaciouns,
 And eek this fumigaciouns;
 And clerkes eek, which conne wel 1265

Al this magyke naturel,
 That craftely don her ententes,
 To make, in certeyn ascendentes,
 Images, lo, through which magyke,
 To make a man ben hool or syke. (180) 1270

Ther saugh I the queen Medea,
 And Circes eke, and Calipsa;
 Ther saugh I Hermes Ballenus,
 Lymote, and eek Simon Magus.
 Ther saugh I, and knew hem by name, 1275

That by such art don men han fame.

 And therto eek, as to my wit,
 I saugh a gretter wonder yit,
 Upon her eyen to beholde;
 But certeyn I hem never tolde; (290) 1380
 For as fele eyen hadde she
 As fetheres upon foules be,
 Or weren on the bestes foure,

 And hir eighte sustren eke,
 That in her face semen meke;
 And evermo, eternally,
 They songe of Fame, as tho herd I:—
 ‘Heried be thou and thy name, 1405
 Goddessse of renoun or of fame!’
 Tho was I war, lo, atte laste,

As I myn eyen gan up caste,
 That this ilke noble quene
 On her shuldres gan sustene (320) 1410

 The Tholosan that highte Stace, (370) 1460
 That bar of Thebes up the fame
 Upon his shuldres, and the name
 Also of cruel Achilles.
 And by him stood, withouten lees,
 Ful wonder hye on a pilere 1465
 Of yren, he, the gret Omere;
 And with him Dares and Tytus
 Before, and eek he, Lollius,
 And Guido eek de Columpnis,
 And English Gaufride eek, y-wis. (380) 1470
 And ech of these, as have I Ioye,
 Was besy for to bere up Troye.
 So hevy ther-of was the fame,
 That for to bere hit was no game.

But yit I gan ful wel espye, 1475

That Latin poete [dan] Virgyle,

That bore hath up a longe whyle

The fame of Pius Eneas. 1485

And next him on a piler was,

Of coper, Venus clerk, Ovyde,

That hath y-sowen wonder wyde

The grete god of loves name.

And ther he bar up wel his fame, (400) 1490

Upon this piler, also hye

As I hit mighte see with yē :

XI. FORTUNE.

Balades de visage sanz peinture.

I. Le Pleintif countre Fortune.

THIS wrecched worldes transmucioun,
As wele or wo, now povre and now honour,
With-outen ordre or wys discrecioun
Governed is by Fortunes errour;
But natheles, the lak of hir favour 5
Ne may nat don me singen, though I dye,
'Iay tout perdu mon temps et mon labour :'
For fynally, Fortune, I thee defye!

Yit is me left the light of my resoun,
To knowen frend fro fo in thy mirour. 10
So muche hath yit thy whirling up and doun
Y-taught me for to knowen in an hour.
But trewely, no force of thy reddour
To him that over him-self hath the maystrye!
My suffisaunce shal be my socour: 15
For fynally, Fortune, I thee defye!

O Socrates, thou stedfast champioun,
She never mighte be thy tormentour;
Thou never dreddest hir oppressioun,
Ne in hir chere founde thou no savour. 20

The spelling is conformed to that of the preceding poems; the alterations though numerous are slight; as y for i, au for aw, &c. The text mainly follows MS. I. (=II. 3. 21, Camb. Univ. Library). Other MSS. are A. (Ashmole 59); T. (Trin. Coll. Camb.); F. (Fairfax 16.; B. (Bodley 638); H. (Harl. 2251). 2. F. pouerte; rest pouere (poore, pore, poeere). 8, 16. I. fynaly; deffye. 11. I. mochel; the rest muche, moche. 13. I. fors; thi reddour. 17. I. stidfast chaumpyoun. 18. I. myht; thi tormentowr. 20. I. fownde thow.

Thou knewe wel the deceit of hir colour,
 And that hir moste worshipe is to lye.
 I knowe hir eek a fals dissimulour :
 For fynally, Fortune, I thee defye !

. II. La respounse de Fortune au Pleintif.

No man is wrecched, but him-self hit wene, 25
 And he that hath him-self hath suffisaunce.
 Why seystou thanne I am to the so kene,
 That hast thy-self out of my governaunce?
 Sey thus: 'Graunt mercy of thyn haboundaunce
 That thou hast lent or this.' Why wolt thou stryve? 30
 What wostou yit, how I thee wol avaunce?
 And eek thou hast thy beste frend alyve !

I have thee taught divisioun bi-twene
 Frend of effect, and frend of countenaunce;
 Thee nedeth nat the galle of noon hyene. 35
 That cureth eyen derked for penaunce;
 Now sestou cler, that were in ignoraunce
 Yit halt thyn ancre, and yit thou mayst arryve
 Ther bountee berth the keye of my substaunce :
 And eek thou hast thy beste frend alyve. 40

How many have I refused to sustene,
 Sin I thee fostred have in thy plesaunce !
 Woltou than make a statut on thy quene
 That I shal been ay at thyn ordinaunce?
 Thou born art in my regne of variaunce, 45
 Aboute the wheel with other most thou dryve.
 My lore is bet than wikke is thy grevaunce,
 And eek thou hast thy beste frend alyve.

III. La respounse du Pleintif countre Fortune.

Thy lore I dampne, hit is adversitee.
 My frend maystou nat reven, blind goddesse! 50
 That I thy frendes knowe, I thanke hit thee.
 Tak hem agayn, lat hem go lye on presse!
 The nigardye in keping hir richesse
 Prenostik is thou wolt hir tour assayle;
 Wikke appetyt comth ay before seknesse: 55
 In general, this reule may nat fayle.

La respounse de Fortune countre le Pleintif.

Thou pinchest at my mutabilitee,
 For I thee lente a drope of my richesse,
 And now me lyketh to with-drawe me.
 Why sholdestou my realtee oppresse? 60
 The see may ebbe and flowen more or lesse;
 The welkne hath might to shyne, reyne, or hayle;
 Right so mot I kythen my brotelnesse.

XIII. GENTILESSE.

Moral Balade of Chaucer.

THE firste stok, fader of gentilesse—
 What man that claymeth gentil for to be,
 Must folowe his trace, and alle his wittes dresse
 Vertu to sewe, and vyces for to fle.
 For unto vertu longeth dignitee, 5
 And noght the revers, saufly dar I deme,
 Al were he mytre, croune, or diademe.

This firste stok was ful of rightwisnesse,
 Trewe of his word, sobre, pitous, and free,
 Clene of his goste, and loved besinesse, 10
 Ageinst the vyce of slouthe, in honestee;
 And, but his heir love vertu, as did he,
 He is noght gentil, thogh he riche seme,
 Al were he mytre, croune, or diademe.

Vyce may wel be heir to old richesse; 15
 But ther may no man, as men may wel se,

XIV. LAK OF STEDFASTNESSE.

Balade.

SOM tyme this world was so stedfast and stable,
 That mannes word was obligacioun,
 And now hit is so fals and deceivable,
 That word and deed, as in conclusioun,
 Ben no-thing lyk, for turned up so doun 5
 Is al this world for mede and wilfulnesse,
 That al is lost for lak of stedfastnesse.

What maketh this world to be so variable,
 But lust that folk have in dissensioun?
 Among us now a man is holde unable, 10
 But-if he can, by som collusion,
 Don his neighbour wrong or oppressioun.
 What causeth this, but wilful wrecchednesse,
 That al is lost, for lak of stedfastnesse?

Trouthe is put doun, resoun is holden fable; 15
 Vertu hath now no dominacioun,
 Pitee exyled, no man is merciabe.
 Through covetyse is blent discrecioun;
 The world hath mad a permutacioun
 Fro right to wrong, fro trouthe to fikellesse, 20
 That al is lost, for lak of stedfastnesse.

XV. AGAINST WOMEN UNCONSTANT.

Balade.

MADAME, for your newe-fangelnesse,
 Many a servaunt have ye put out of grace,
 I take my leve of your unstedfastnesse,
 For wel I wot, whyl ye have lyves space,
 Ye can not love ful half yeer in a place; 5
 To newe thing your lust is euer kene;
 In stede of blew, thus may ye were al grene.

Right as a mirour nothing may enpresse,
 But, lightly as it cometh, so mot it pace,
 So fareth your love, your werkes bereth witnessse. 10
 Ther is no feith that may your herte embrace;
 But, as a wedercok, that turneth his face
 With every wind, ye fare, and that is sene;
 In stede of blew, thus may ye were al grene.

Ye might be shryned, for your brotelnesse, 15
 Bet than Dalyda, Creseide or Candace;
 For ever in chaunging stant your sikernesse,

XVII. LENVOY DE CHAUCER A BUKTON.

The counseil of Chaucer touching Mariage, which was sent to Bukton.

My maister Bukton, whan of Criste our kinge
Was axed, what is trouthe or sothfastnesse,
He nat a word answerde to that axinge,
As who saith: 'no man is al trew,' I gesse.
And therfor, thogh I highte to expresse 5
The sorwe and wo that is in mariage,
I dar not wryte of hit no wikkednesse,
Lest I my-self falle eft in swich dotage.

I wol nat seyn, how that hit is the cheyne
Of Sathanas, on which he gnaweth ever, 10
But I dar seyn, were he out of his payne,
As by his wille, he wolde be bounde never.
But thilke doted fool that eft hath lever
Y-cheyned be than out of prisoun crepe,
God lete him never fro his wo dissever, 15
Ne no man him bewayle, though he wepe.

But yit, lest thou do worse, tak a wyf;
Bet is to wedde, than brenne in worse wyse.
But thou shalt have sorwe on thy flesh, thy lyf,
And been thy wyves thral, as seyn these wyse, 20

I. (The Lover's worthiness.)

THER nis so hy comfort to my plesaunce,
 Whan that I am in any hevinesse,
 As for to have leyser of remembraunce
 Upon the manhod and the worthinesse,
 Upon the trouthe, and on the stedfastnesse 5
 Of him whos I am al, whyl I may dure;
 Ther oghte blame me nō creature,
 For every wight preiseth his gentillesse.

In him is bountee, wisdom, governaunce
 Wel more then any mannes wit can gesse; 10
 For grace hath wold so ferforth him avaunce
 That of knighthode he is parfit richesse.
 Honour honoureth him for his noblesse;
 Therto so wel hath formed him Nature,
 That I am his for ever, I him assure, 15
 For every wight preiseth his gentillesse.

And not-withstanding al his suffisaunce,
 His gentil herte is of so greet humblesse
 To me in worde, in werke, in contenaunce,
 And me to serve is al his businesse, 20
 That I am set in verrey sikernesse.

II. (Disquietude caused by Jealousy.)

Now certes, Love, hit is right covenable 25
 That men ful dere bye the noble thing,
 As wake a-bedde, and fasten at the table,
 Weping to laughe, and singe in compleyning,
 And doun to caste visage and loking,
 Often to chaungen hewe and contenance, 30
 Pleyne in sleping, and dremen at the daunce,
 Al the revers of any glad feling.

Thogh Ielosye wer hanged by a cable,
 She wolde al knowe through her espying;
 Ther doth no wight nõ-thing so resonable, 35
 That al nis harm in her imagening.
 Thus dere aboutht is love in yeving,
 Which ofte he yiveth with-outen ordinaunce,
 As sorow ynogh, and litel of plesaunce,
 Al the revers of any glad feling. 40

A litel tyme his yift is agreable,
 But ful encomberous is the using;
 For sotel Ielosye, the deceyvable,
 Ful often-tyme causeth destourbing.

 For I so longe have been in your servyse
 That for to lete of wol I never assente;
 No force thogh Ielosye me tormente;
 Suffyceth me to see him whan I may,
 And therefore certes, to myn ending-day 55
 To love him best ne shal I never repente.

And certes, Love, whan I me wel avyse
 On any estat that man may represente,
 Than have ye maked me, through your franchyse,
 Chese the best that ever on erthe wente. 60
 Now love wel, herte, and lok thou never stente;

To you, my purse, and to non other wight
 Compleyne I, for ye be my lady dere!
 I am so sory, now that ye be light;
 For certes, but ye make me hevychere,
 Me were as leef be leyd up-on my bere; 5
 For whiche un-to your mercy thus I crye:
 Beth hevychere, or elles mot I dye!

Now voucheth sauf this day, or hit be night,
 That I of you the blisful soun may here,
 Or see your colour lyk the sonne bright, 10
 That [as] of yelownesse hadde never pere.
 Ye be my lyf, ye be myn hertes stere,
 Quene of comfort and of good companye:
 Beth hevychere, or elles mot I dye!

Now purs, that be to me my lyves light, 15
 And saveour, as doun in this worlde here,
 Out of this toune help me through your might,
 Sin that ye wole nat ben my tresorerere;
 For I am shave as nye as any frere.
 But yit I pray un-to your curtesye: 20
 Beth hevychere, or elles mot I dye!

APPENDIX.

XXI. A COMPLEINT TO HIS LADY.

I. (In seven-line stanzas.)

THE longe night, whan every creature
Shulde have hir rest in somewhat, as by kynde,
Or elles ne may hir lyf nat long endure,
Hit falleth most in-to my woful mynde
How I so fer have broght my-self behynde, 5
That, sauf the deeth, ther may no-thing me lisse,
So desespai red I am from alle blisse.

This same thoght me lasteth til the morwe,
And from the morwe forth til hit be eve;
Ther nedeth me no care for to borwe, 10
For bothe I have good leys er and good leve;
Ther is no wight that wol me wo bereve
To wepe y-nogh and wailen al my fille;
The sore spark of peyne doth me spille.

II. (In Terza Rima ; imperfect.)

[The sore spark of peyne doth me spille;] 15
This Love hath [eek] me set in swich a place

Of these fragments there are but two MS. copies, Sh. and Ph., in which (as in ed. 1561) it is written in continuation of the Complaint unto Pity. MS. (below) = Sh. (Harl. 78). For Ph., see l. 124.

1. MS. nyghtes; see l. 8. 2, 3. hir; MS. theyre. 7. ed. (1561) dispaired. 12. MS. me; ed. my. 14. Both insert now before doth. 15. It seems necessary to repeat this line in order to start the series of rimes. 16. MS. This loue that hathe me set; I omit that, and supply eek.

That my desyr [he] never wol fulfille ;
 For neither pitee, mercy, neither grace
 Can I nat fynde ; yit [from] my sorwful herte,
 For to be deed, I can hit nat arace. 20
 The more I love, the more she doth me smerte ;
 Through which I see, with-oute remedye,
 That from the deeth I may no wyse asterte ;
 [For this day in her servise shal I dye].

III. (In Terza Rima ; imperfect.)

[Thus am I slain, with sorwes ful dyverse ; 25
 Ful long agoon I mighte have taken hede].
 Now sothly, what she hight I wol reherse ;
 Her name is Bountee, set in womanhede,
 Sadnesse in youthe, and beautee prydelees,
 And plesaunce, under governaunce and drede ; 30
 Her surname eek is Faire Rewthelees,
 The Wyse, y-knit un-to good Aventure,
 That, for I love her, sleeth me giltelees.
 Her love I best, and shal whyl I may dure,
 Bet than my-self an hundred thousand deel, 35
 Than al this worldes richesse or creature.
 Now hath nat Lovē me bestowed weel
 To love, ther I never shal have part ?
 Allas ! right thus is turned me the wheel,
 Thus am I slayn with loves fyry dart. 40
 I can but love her best, my swete fo ;
 Love hath me taught no more of his art
 But serve alwey, and stinte for no wo.

17. I supply he (i. e. Love). 19. MS. and yit my ; I omit and,
and supply from. 24. Supplied to complete the rime from Compl.
 Mars, 189. 25. Supplied from Compl. Pite, 22, 17. 26.
Supplied from Annelida, 307. 31. MS. is eek. 32. MS. The Corrupt ? Perhaps read riche creature. 40. MS. fury. 42. Read of alle his ?

IV. (In ten-line stanzas.)

[With-in] my trewe careful herte ther is
So moche wo, and [eek] so litel blis, 45

That wo is me that ever I was bore ;
For al that thing which I desyre I mis,
And al that ever I wolde nat, I-wis,

That fynde I redy to me evermore ;
And of al this I not to whom me pleyne. 50

For she that mighte me out of this bringe
Ne reccheth nat whether I wepe or singe ;
So litel rewthe hath she upon my peyne.

Allas ! whan sleping-tyme is, than I wake,
Whan I shulde daunce, for fere than I quake, 55

This hevvy lyf I lede for your sake,
Thogh ye ther-of in no wyse hede take,

My hertes lady, and hool my lyves quene ! 60
For trewly dorste I seye, as that I fele,
Me semeth that your swete herte of stele
Is whetted now ageynes me to kene.

My dere herte, and best beloved fo,
Why lyketh yow to do me al this wo, 65

What have I doon that greveth yow, or sayd,
But for I serve and love yow and no mo ?
And whylst I live, I wol do ever so ;

And therfor, swete, ne beth nat evil apayd.
For so good and so fair as [that] ye be, 70

Hit wer [a] right gret wonder but ye hadde
Of alle servants, bothe goode and badde ;
And, leest worthy of alle hem, I am he.

44. MS. In ; I read With-in. 45. I supply eek. 50. So in

But never-the-les, my righte lady swete,
 Thogh that I be unconning and unmete 75
 To serve as I best coude ay your hynesse,
 Yit is ther fayner noon, that wolde I hete,
 Than I to do yow ese, or elles bete
 What-so I wiste were to [yow distresse].
 And had I might as good as I have wille, 80
 Than shulde ye fele wher it wer so or noon ;
 For in this worlde living is ther noon
 That fayner wolde your hertes wil fulfillle.

 For bothe I love, and eek dreed yow so sore,
 And algates moot, and have doon yow, ful yore, 85
 That bet loved is noon, ne never shal ;
 And yit I wolde beseche yow of no more
 But leveth wel, and be nat wroth ther-fore,
 And lat me serve yow forth ; lo ! this is al.
 For I am nat so hardy ne so wood 90
 For to desyre that ye shulde love me ;
 For wel I wot, allas ! that may nat be ;
 I am so litel worthy, and ye so good.

 For ye be oon the worthiest on-lyve,
 And I the most unlykly for to thryve ; 95
 Yit, for al this, [now] witeth ye right wele,
 That ye ne shul me fro your service dryve
 That I nil ay, with alle my wittes fyve,
 Serve yow trewly, what wo so that I fele.
 For I am set on yow in swich manere 100
 That, thogh ye never wil upon me rewe,
 I moste yow love, and ever been as trewe
 As any can or may on-lyve [here].

The more that I love yow, goodly fre,
The lasse fynde I that ye loven me; 105

Allas! whan shal that harde wit amende?
Wher is now al your wommanly pitee,
Your gentillesse and your debonairtee,
Wil ye no-thing ther-of upon me spende?
And so hool, swete, as I am youres al, 110

And so gret wille as I have yow to serve,
Now, certes, and ye lete me thus sterve,
Yit have ye wonne ther-on but a smal.

For, at my knowing, I do no-thing why,
And this I wol beseche yow hertely, 115

That, ther ever ye fynde, whyl ye live,
A trewer servant to yow than am I,
Leveth [me] thanne, and sleeth me hardely,
And I my deeth to you wol al forgive.
And if ye fynde no trewer [man than me], 120

[Why] will ye suffre than that I thus spille,
And for no maner gilt but my good wille?
As good wer thanne untrewre as trewe to be.

But I, my lyf and deeth, to yow obeye,
And with right buxom herte hoolly I preye, 125

As [is] your moste plesure, so doth by me;
Wel lever is me lyken yow and deye
Than for to any thing or thinke or seye
That mighte yow offende in any tyme.
And therfor, swete, rewe on my peynes smerte, 130

And of your grace granteth me som drope;
For elles may me laste ne blis ne hope,
Ne dwellen in my trouble careful herte.

XXII. AN AMOROUS COMPLEINT.

An amorous Compleint, made at Windesor.

I, WHICH that am the sorwefulleste man
 That in this world was ever yit levinge,
 And leest recoverer of him-selven can,
 Beginne thus my deedly compleyninge
 On hir, that may to lyf and deeth me bringe, 5
 Which hath on me no mercy ne no rewthe
 That love hir best, but sleeth me for my trewthe.
 [Ne] can I seyen nought that may yow lyke,
 [For] certes, now, allas! allas! the whyle!
 Your plesaunce is to laughen whan I syke, 10
 And thus ye me from al my blisse exyle.
 Ye have me cast in that despitous yle
 Ther never man on lyve ne might asterte;
 This have I for I love yow best, swete herte!
 Soth is, that wel I wot, by lyklinesse, 15
 If it wer thing possible [for] to do
 For to acounte your beutee and goodnesse,
 I have no wonder though ye do me wo;
 Sith I, thunworthiest that may ryde or go,
 Durste ever thinken in so hy a place, 20
 What wonder is, though ye do me no grace?

In MS. Harl. 7333, fol. 133 b and 134. The title is—And next folowyng begynnith an amerowse compleynte made at wyndesore in the laste May tofore Nouembre (sic).

1. Harl. sorowfulest. 2. worlde; leving. 3. leste recouuerer.

Allas! thus is my lyf brought to an ende,
 My deeth, I see, is my conclusioun;
 I may wel say, in sory tyme I spende
 My lyf, that so may have confusioun 25
 For mercy, pitee, and deep affeccoun.
 I sey for me, for al my deedly chere,
 Alle these diden, in that, me love yow dere.

And in this wyse and [in] dispayre I live
 In love; nay, nay, but in dispayre I dye! 30
 But shal I thus [to] yow my deeth for-give,
 That causeles doth me this sorow drye?
 Ye, certes, I! For she of my folye
 Hath nought to done, although she do me sterve;
 Hit is nat with hir wille that I hir serve! 35

Than sith I am of my sorowe the cause
 And sith that I have this, withoute hir reed,
 Than may I seyn, right shortly in a clause,
 It is no blame unto hir womanheed
 Though swich a wrecche as I be for hir deed; 40
 Yet alwey [been] two thinges, doon me dyë,
 That is to seyn, hir beutee and myn yë.

So algates, she is [than] the verray rote
 Of my disese, and of my dethe also;
 For with oon word she mighte be my bote, 45
 If that she vouched sauf for to do so.
 But [why] than is hir gladnesse at my wo?

To seen hir servaunts dyen for hir sake!

But certes, than is al my wonderinge, 50
Sithen she is the fayrest creature
As to my dome, that ever was levinge,
The benignest and beste eek that nature
Hath wrought or shal, whyl [that] the world may dure,
Why that she lefte pite so bihynde? 55
It was, y-wis, a greet defaute in kynde.

Yit is al this no lak to hir, pardee,
But God or nature sore wolde I blame;
For, though she shewe no pite unto me,
Sithen that she doth othere men the same, 60
I ne oughte to despyse my ladies game;
It is [hir] pley to laughen whan men syketh,
And I assente, al that hir list and lyketh!

Ye! wolde I, as I dar, with sorweful herte
Biseche un-to your mekly womanhede 65
That I now dorste my sharpe shoures smerte
Shewe by worde, and ye wolde ones rede
The pleynte of me, the which ful sore drede
That I have seid here, through myn unknowinge,

NOTES.

I. AN A B C.

THIS poem is a rather free translation of a similar poem by Guillaume de Deguileville, as pointed out in the Preface, where the whole of the original is quoted in full.

Explanations of the harder words should, in general, be sought for in the Glossarial Index, though a few are discussed in the Notes.

The language of this translation is, for the most part, so simple, that but few passages call for remark. I notice, however, a few points.

Chaucer has not adhered to the complex metre of the original, but uses a stanza of eight lines of five accents in place of de Deguileville's stanza of twelve lines of four accents.

3. Dr. Koch calls attention to the insertion of a second of, in most of the MSS., before sorwe. Many little words are often thus wrongly inserted into the texts of nearly all the Minor Poems, simply because, when the final e ceased to be sounded, the scribes regarded some lines as imperfect. Here, for example, if sinne be regarded as monosyllabic, a word seems required after it; but when we know that Chaucer regarded it as a dissyllabic word, we at once see that MSS. Gg. and Jo. (which omit this second of) are quite correct. We know that sinne is properly a dissyllabic word in Chaucer, because he rimes it with the infinitives biginne (Cant. Ta. C. 941) and winne (same, D. 1421), and never with such monosyllables as kin or tin. This is easily tested by consulting Mr. Cromie's very useful Rime-index to the Canterbury Tales. The above remark is important, on account of its wide application. The needless insertions of little words in many of the 15th-century MSS. are easily detected.

4. Scan the line by reading—Glórious virgín', óf all' flóur-es flóur. Cf. l. 49. Or read—'Glórious virgín', of állë,' &c.

6. Debonaire, gracious lady; used as a sb. Compare the original, l. 11.

8. Answers to l. 6 of the original—'Vaincu m'a mon aversaire.' The word Venquisht is here the right form; similarly, in the Squieres Tale, l. 342, the word vanished is to be read as vanish'd, with the accent on the second syllable, and with elision of e. See Ten Brink, Chaucers Sprache, § 257.

11. Warne, reject, refuse to hear. So in P. Plowman, C. xxiii. 12, 'whanne men hym werneth' means 'when men refuse to give him what he asks for.'

12. Free, liberal, bounteous. So in Shak. Troilus, iv. 5. 100—'His heart and hand both open and both free.' It may be remarked, once for all, that readers frequently entirely misunderstand passages in our older authors, merely because they forget what great changes may take place in the sense of words in the course of centuries.

13. Largesse, i. e. the personification of liberality; 'thou bestowed perfect happiness.'

14. Cf. original, l. 15—'Quer [for] tu es de salu porte.' Scan by reading—Háv'n of refút. But in l. 33, we have refút.

15. Theves seven, seven robbers, viz. the seven deadly sins. We could easily guess that this is the meaning, but it is needless; for the original has—'Par sept larrons, pechies mortez,' l. 17; and a note in the Sion Coll. MS. has—'i. seven dedly synnes.' The theme of the Seven Deadly Sins is one of the commonest in our old authors; it is treated of at great length in Chaucer's Persones Tale, and in Piers Plowman.

16. 'Ere my ship go to pieces;' this graphic touch is not in the original.

17. Yow, you. In addressing a superior, it was customary to use the words ye and you, as a mark of respect; but, in prayer, the words thou and thee were usual. Hence, Chaucer has mixed the two usages in a very remarkable way, and alternates them suddenly. Thus, we have thee in l. 5, thou in l. 6, &c., but yow in l. 17, thy in l. 19, you in l. 24; and so on. We even find the plural verbs helpen, l. 104; Beth, l. 134; and Ben, l. 176.

20. Accioun, action, is here used in the legal sense; 'my sin and confusion have brought an action (i. e. plead) against me.' It is too close a copy of the original, l. 25—'Contre moy font une accion.'

21. I. e. 'founded upon rigid justice and a sense of the desperate nature of my condition.' Cf. 'Rayson et desesperacion Contre moy veulent maintenir;' orig. l. 29. Maintenir, to maintain an action, is a legal term. So, in l. 22, sustene means 'sustain the plea.'

24. 'If it were not for the mercy (to be obtained) from you.'

25. Literally—'There is no doubt that thou art not the cause; meaning, 'Without doubt, thou art the cause.' Misericorde is adopted from the original. According to the usual rule, viz. that the syllable er is usually slurred over in Chaucer when a vowel follows, the word is to be read as mis'ricord-e. So also sou'reyn, l. 69.

27. Vouched sauf, vouchsafed. Tacorde, to accord; cf. talyghte, tamende, &c. in Gloss. to CH. II. (i. e. Chaucer's Prioresses Tale, &c., in the Clarendon Press Series)

29. Cf. 'S'encore fust Parc encordé;' orig. l. 47; and 'l'arc de justice,' l. 42. The French expression is probably borrowed (as suggested in Bell's Chaucer) from Ps. vii. 13—'arcum suum tetendit.' Hence the phrase of Justice and of yre refers to the bowe.

30. First, at first, before the Incarnation.

36. For examples of the use of great assize, or last assize, to signify the Last Judgment, see Murray's Dict., s. v. Assize.

39. Most MSS. read here—'That but thou er [or or] that day correcte me;' this cannot be right, because it destroys the rime. However, the Bedford MS., instead of correcte me, has Me chastice; and in MS. C. me chastyse is written over an erasure (doubtless of the words correcte me). Even thus, the line is imperfect, but is completed by help of the Sion MS., which reads me weel chastyce.

40. Of verrey right, in strict justice; not quite as in l. 21.

41. Rather close to the original—'Fuiant m'en viens a ta tente Moy mucier pour la tormente Qui ou monde me tempeste,' &c. Mucier means 'to hide,' and ou means 'in the,' F. au.

45. Al have I, although I have. So in l. 157.

49. MS. Gg. has Gracyouse; but the French has Glorieuse.

50. Bitter; Fr. text 'amere.' The allusion is to the name Maria, Gk. Μαρία, Μαριάμ, the same as Miriam, which is explained to mean 'bitterness,' as being connected with Marah, i. e. bitterness; see Exod. xv. 23 (Gesenius). Scan the line by reading: neith'r in érth-ë nór.

55. But if, except, unless (common).

56. Stink is oddly altered to sinke in some editions.

57, 58. Closely copied from the French, ll. 85-87. But the rest of the stanza is nearly all Chaucer's own. Cf. Col. ii. 14.

67. The French means, literally—'For, when any one goes out of his way, thou, out of pity, becomest his guide, in order that he may soon regain his way.'

70. The French means—'And thou bringest him back into the right road.' This Chaucer turns into—'bringest him out of the wrong road;' which is all that is meant by the crooked strete.

71. In the ending -eth of the third pers. sing. present, the e is commonly suppressed. Read lov'th. So also com'th in l. 99.

73. The French means—'Calendars are illumined, and other books are confirmed (or authenticated), when thy name illumines them.' Chaucer has 'Illuminated calendars, in this world, are those that are brightened by thy name.' 'An allusion to the custom of writing the high festivals of the Church in the Calendar with red, or illumined, letters;' note in Bell's Chaucer. The name of Mary appears several times in old calendars; thus the Purification of Mary is on Feb. 2; the Annunciation, on Mar. 25; the Visitation, on July 2; the Assumption, on Aug. 15; the Nativity, on Sept. 8; the Presentation, on Nov. 21; the Conception, on Dec. 8. Our books of Common Prayer retain all of these except the Assumption and the Presentation. Kalenderes has four syllables; and so has enlumined.

76. Him thar, i. e. it needs not for him to dread, he need not dread. It occurs again in the Cant. Tales (ed. Tyrwhitt), ll. 4318, 5911, 5918, 6947, 17301.

80. Resigne goes back to l. 112 of the original, where resiné (= resigné) occurs.

81. Here the French (l. 121) has douceur; Koch says it is clear that Chaucer's copy had douleur. It refers to the Mater dolorosa.

86. This line runs badly in the MSS., but is the same in nearly all. I have ventured to change bothe have into have bothe, where bothe is dissyllabic; see ll. 63, 122. It then flows evenly. The sense of ll. 84-6 seems to be—'Let not the foe of us all boast that he has, by his wiles (listes), unluckily convicted (of guilt) that (soul) which ye both,' &c.

88. Slur over the last syllable of Continue, and accent us.

89. The French text refers to Exod. iii. 2. Cf. The Prioresses Tale, C. T. Group B, l. 1658; in CH. II.

97. Koch points out that per-e is here dissyllabic; as in the Complaint to His Purse, l. 11. The French has per, l. 146. Read—Nóble princesse, &c.

100. Melodye or glee; here Koch remarks that Chaucer 'evidently mistook tirelire for turelure.' The Fr. tirelire means a money-box, and the sense of l. 150 of the original is—'We have no other place in which to secure what we possess.' See l. 107 of Chaucer's translation, below. But Chaucer's mistake was easily made; he was thinking, not of the mod. Fr. turelure

(which, after all, does not mean a 'melody,' but the refrain of a song, like the Eng. tooral looral), but of the O. F. tirelire. This word (as Cotgrave explains) not only meant 'a box having a cleft on the lid for mony to enter it,' but 'also the warble, or song of a lark.' Hence Shakespeare speaks of 'the lark, that tirra-lyra chants,' Wint. Tale, iv. 3. 9.

102. Read N'advocat noón. That the M. E. advocat was sometimes accented on the o, is proved by the fact that it was sometimes cut down to vocat; see P. Plowman, B. ii. 60; C. iii. 61.

109. Cf. Luke i. 38—'Ecce ancilla Domini.'

110. Oure bille, &c., i. e. 'to bring forward (or offer) a petition on our behalf.' For the old expression 'to put up (or forth) a bill,' see my note to P. Plowman, C. v. 45. Compare also Compleynte unto Pite, l. 44.

113. Read tym-e. Tenquere, for to enquere; cf. note to l. 27. Cf. the French d'enquere, l. 169.

116. To werre; F. 'pour guerre,' l. 173; i. e. 'by way of attack.' Us may be taken with wroughte, i. e. 'wrought for us such a wonder.' Werre is not a verb; the verb is werreyen, as in Squi. Ta. l. 10.

119. Ther, where, inasmuch as. 'We had no salvation, inasmuch as we did not repent; if we repent, we shall receive it.' But the sentence is awkward. Cf. Mark i. 4; Matt. vii. 7.

122. Pause after both-e; the e is not elided.

125. Mene, mediator; lit. mean (intermediate) person. So in P. Plowman, B. vii. 196—'And Marie his moder be owre mene bitwene.'

132. Koch thinks that the false reading it in some MSS. arose from a reading hit (= hitteth) as a translation of F. fert, l. 196. Anyway, the reading is seems best.

136. Of pitee, for pity; the usual idiom.

140. Vicaire, deputed ruler; not in the original. See note to Parliament of Foules, l. 379.

141. Governeresse; copied from the French text, l. 214. This rare word occurs, as the last word, in a poem beginning 'Mother of norture,' printed in the Aldine Edition of Chaucer's Poems, vi. 275. Chaucer himself uses it again in the Complaint to Pity, l. 80.

144. Compare the expressions Regina Celi, Veni coronaberis, 'Heil crowned queene,' and the like; Polit. Religious, and Love Poems, ed. Furnivall, p. 147; Hymns to the Virgin, ed. Furnivall, pp. 1, 4. Suggested by Rev. xii. 1.

150. The reference is, obviously, to Gen. iii. 18; but thorns here mean sins. Cf. 'Des espines d'iniquite;' F. text, l. 224.

158. Copied from the French, l. 239—'Ou tu a la court m'ajournes.' It means 'fix a day for me to appear at thy court,' cite me to thy court.

159. Not in the original. Chaucer was thinking of the courts of the Common Bench and King's Bench, as mentioned, for example, in Wyclif's Works, ed. Arnold, iii. 215.

161. The word Xristus, i. e. Christus, is written Xpc (with a mark of contraction) in MSS. C., Gl., Gg., and Xpūs in F. Xpc is copied from the French; but it is very common, being the usual contracted form of the Gk. Χριστός, or, in capital letters, ΧΡΙCΤΟC, obtained by taking the two first and the last letters. The old Greek sigma was written C; as above. De Deguileville could think of no French word beginning with X; so he substituted for it the Greek chi, which resembled it in form.

163, 164. These lines answer to ll. 243, 247 of the French; 'For me He had his side pierced; for me His blood was shed.' Observe that the word Christus has no verb following it; it is practically an objective case, governed by thanke in l. 168. 'I thank thee because of Christ and for what He has done for me.' In l. 163, the word suffre is understood from the line above, and need not be repeated. Unfortunately, all the scribes have repeated it, to the ruin of the metre; for the line then contains two syllables too many. However, it is better omitted. Longius is trisyllabic, and herte (as in the next line) is dissyllabic. The sense is—'to suffer His passion on the cross, and also (to suffer) that Longius should pierce His heart, and make,' &c. Pighte, made, are in the subjunctive. The difficulty really resides in the word that in l. 161. If Chaucer had written eeck instead of it, the whole could be parsed.

The story of Longius is very common; hence Chaucer readily introduced an allusion to it, though his original has no hint of it. The name is spelt Longeus in Piers Plowman, C. xxi. 82 (and is also spelt Longinus). My note on that passage says—'This story is from the Legenda Aurea, cap. xlvi. Longinus was a blind centurion, who pierced the side of Christ; when drops of the Sacred Blood cured his infirmity. The day of St. Longinus is Mar. 15; see Chambers, Book of Days. The name Longinus is most likely derived from λόγχη, a lance, the word used in John xix. 34; and the legend was easily developed from St. John's narrative. The name Longinus first appears in the Apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus.' See also the Chester Plays, ed. Wright ; Cursor Mundi, p. 962 ; Coventry Mysteries, ed. Halliwell, p. 334 ; York Mystery Plays, p. 368 ; Lamentation of Mary Magdalen, st. 26 ; &c.

164. Herte is the true M.E. genitive, from the A.S. gen. heortan. Herte blood occurs again in the Pardoner's Tale, l. 902.

169-171. Close to the French, ll. 253-5 ; and l. 174 is close to l. 264 of the same. Cf. Heb. xi. 19 ; Jo. i. 29 ; Isaiah, li'i. 7.

176. This line can best be scanned by taking That as standing alone, in the first foot. See note to Compl. to Pite, l. 16.

177. The words of Zechariah (xiii. 1) are usually applied to the blood of Christ, as in Rev. i. 5.

180. 'That, were it not (for) thy tender heart, we should be destroyed.'

184. To mercy able, fit to obtain mercy ; cf. Cant. Ta. Prol. 167.

II. THE COMPLEYNT UNTO PITE.

TITLE. In MS. B., the poem is entitled, 'The Complaynte vnto Pyte,' which is right. In MS. Trin., there is a colophon—'Here endeth the exclamacioun of the Deth of Pyte ;' see p. 12. In MS. Sh. (in Shirley's handwriting) the poem is introduced with the following words—'And nowe here filowing [following] begynnethe a complaint of Pitee. made by Geffray Chaucier the aureat Poete that euer was fonde in oure vulgare to-fore hees [for thees?] dayes.' The first stanza may be considered as forming a Proem ; stanzas 2-8, the Story ; and the rest, the Bill of Complaint. The title 'A complaint of Pitee' is not necessarily incorrect ; for of may be taken in the sense of 'concerning,' precisely as in the case of 'the Vision of Piers the Plowman.' As to the connection of this poem with the Thebaid of Statius, see notes to ll. 57 and 92.

1. I do not follow Ten Brink in putting a comma after so. He says—'That so refers to the verb [sought] and not to yore ago, is evident from l. 3. Compare the somewhat different l. 93.' I hope it shews no disrespect to a great critic if I say that I am not at all confident that the above criticism is correct ; l. 93 rather tells against it. Observe the reading of l. 117 in MS. Sh. (in the footnotes).

4. With-oute dethe, i. e. without actually dying.

Shal not, am not to.

7. Doth me dye, makes me die.

9. Ever in oon, continually, constantly, always in the same way ; cf. Cant. Tales, E. 602, 677, F. 417 (Glos. to Prioresses Tale, s. v. Oon).

11. Me awreke. 'The e of me is elided;' Ten Brink. He compares also Cant. Ta. Prol. 148; (the correct reading of which is, probably—

'But sorē weep sche if oon of hem were deed;'

the e of sche being slurred over before i in if). He also refers to the Prioresses Tale (B 1660), where thalyghte = the alyghte; and to the Second Nonnes Tale (G 32) where do me endyte is to be read as do mendyte.

14. The notion of Pity being 'buried in a heart' is awkward, and introduces an element of confusion. If Pity could have been buried out of the heart, and thus separated from it, the whole would have been a great deal clearer. This caution is worth paying heed to; for it will really be found, further on, that the language becomes confused in consequence of this very thing. In the very next line, for example, the hearse of Pity appears, and in l. 19 the corpse of Pity; in fact, Pity is never fairly buried out of sight throughout the poem.

15. Herse, hearse; cf. l. 36 below. It should be remembered that the old herse was a very different thing from the modern hearse. What Chaucer refers to is what we should now call 'a lying in state;' with especial reference to the array of lighted torches which illuminated the bier. See the whole of Way's note in Prompt. Parvulorum, pp. 236, 237, part of which is quoted in my Etym. Dict., s.v. hearse. The word hearse (F. herce) originally denoted a harrow; next, a frame with spikes for holding lights in a church service; thirdly, a frame for lights at a funeral pageant or 'lying in state;' fourthly, the funeral pageant itself; fifthly, a frame on which a body was laid; and so on. 'Chaucer,' says Way, 'appears to use the term herse to denote the decorated bier, or funeral pageant, and not exclusively the illumination, which was a part thereof; and, towards the sixteenth century, it had such a general signification alone.' In ll. 36-42, Chaucer describes a company of persons who stood round about the hearse. Cf. Brand's Popular Antiquities, ed. Ellis, ii. 236-7.

16. Here Deed stands alone in the first foot. Scan—Deed | as stoon | whyl that | the swogh | me laste. Cf. A B C, l. 176, and the note. See remarks in the Preface as to this peculiarity.

27. Cf. Deth of Blaunche, l. 587—'This is my peyne withoute reed;' Ten Brink.

33. Ten Brink reads ay for ever, on the ground that ever and never, when followed by a consonant, are dissyllabic in Chaucer. But see Book of the Duchesse, l. 73.

34. Hadde, dissyllabic; it occasionally is so; mostly when it is used by itself, as here. Cf. Sect. iii. l. 951.

37. 'Without displaying any sorrow.' He now practically identifies Pity with the fair one in whose heart it was said (in l. 14) to be buried. This fair one was attended by Bounty, Beauty, and all the rest; they are called a folk in l. 48.

41. Insert and after Estaat or Estat, for this word has no final -e in Chaucer; see Prol. 522; Squi. Tale, 26; &c.

44. 'To have offered to Pity, as a petition;' see note to A B C, 110.

47. 'I kept my complaint quiet,' i. e. withheld it; see l. 54.

50. MS. Sh. is right. The scribe of the original of MSS. Tn. Ff. T. left out I and these, and then put in only; then another scribe, seeing that a pronoun was wanted, put in we, as shewn by MSS. F. B. (Ten Brink). Here, and in l. 52, the e of alle is either very lightly sounded after the cæsural pause, or (more likely) is dropped altogether, as elsewhere.

53. And been assented, and (who) are all agreed.

54. Put up, put by. Cf. 'to put up that letter;' K. Lear, i. 2. 28; &c.

57. He here addresses his fair one's Pity, whom he personifies, and addresses as a mistress.

By comparison of this passage with l. 92, it becomes clear that Chaucer took his notion of personifying Pity from Statius, who personifies Pietas in his Thebaid, xi. 457-496. I explained this at length in a letter to The Academy, Jan. 7, 1888, p. 9. In the present line, we find a hint of the original; for Statius describes Pietas in the words 'pudibundaque longe Ora reducentem' (l. 493), which expresses her humility; whilst the reverence due to her is expressed by reuerentia (l. 467).

59. Sheweth . . . Your servaunt, Your servant sheweth. Sheweth is the word used in petitions, and servant commonly means 'lover.'

63. Accented rénoun, as in the Ho. of Fame, 1406. Cf. l. 86.

64. Crueltee, Cruelty, here corresponds to the Fury Tisiphone, who is introduced by Statius (Theb. xi. 483) to suppress the peaceful feelings excited by Pietas, who had been created by Jupiter to control the passions even of the gods (l. 465). At the siege of Thebes, Pietas was for once overruled by Tisiphone; and Chaucer complains here that she is again being controlled; see ll. 80, 89-91. Very similar is the character of Daungere or Danger (F. Dangier) in the Romaunt of the Rose; in l. 3549 of the English version (l. 3301 of the original), we find Pity saying—

‘Wherefore I pray you, Sir Daungere,
For to mayntene no lenger heere
Such cruel werre agayn youre man.’

We may also compare Machault’s poem entitled Le Dit du Vergier, where we find such lines as—

‘Einssi encontre Cruauté
Deffent l’amant douce Pité.’

66. Under colour, beneath the outward appearance.

67. ‘In order that people should not observe her tyranny.’

70. Hight, is (rightly) named. The final -e, though required by grammar, is suppressed; the word being conformed to other examples of the third person singular of the present tense, whilst hight-e is commonly used as the past tense. Pity’s right name is here said to be ‘Beauty, such as belongs to Favour.’ The poet is really thinking of his mistress rather than his personified Pity. It is very difficult to keep up the allegory.

71. ‘Heritage, of course, stands in the gen. case;’ Ten Brink.

76. Wanten, are lacking, are missing, are not found in, fall short. ‘If you, Pity, are missing from Bounty and Beauty.’ There are several similar examples of this use of want in Shakespeare; e.g. ‘there wants no junkets at the feast;’ Tam. Shrew, iii. 2. 250.

78. This Bille, or Petition, may be divided into three sets of ‘terns,’ or groups of three stanzas. I mark this by inserting a paragraph-mark (¶) at the beginning of each tern. They are marked off by the rimes; the first tern ends with seyne, l. 77; the next with the riming word peyne, l. 98; and again with peyne, l. 119.

83. Perilous is here accented on the i.

87. Ten Brink omits wel, with most of the MSS.; but the e in wite seems to be suppressed. It will hardly bear a strong accent. Mr. Sweet retains wel, as I do.

91. Pronounce the third word as despeir’d. ‘Compare 1 Kings x. 24: And all the earth sought to Solomon;’ Ten Brink.

92. Herenus has not hitherto been explained. It occurs in four MSS., Tn. F. B. Ff.; a fifth (T.) has ‘heremus;’ the Longleat MS. has ‘heremus’ or ‘herenius;’ Sh. substitutes ‘vertuose;’ and MS. Harl. 7578 has ‘Vertoues;’ but it is highly improbable that vertuose is original, for no one would ever have altered it so unintelligibly. Ten Brink and Mr. Sweet adopt this reading vertuousē, which they make four syllables, as being a vocative case; and of course this is an easy way of evading the difficulty. Dr. Furnivall once suggested hevenus, which I presume is meant for 'heaven's'; but this word could not possibly be accented as hevénus. The strange forms which proper names assume in Chaucer are notorious; and the fact is, that Herenus is a mere error for Herines or Herynes. Herynes (accented on y), occurs in St. 4 of Bk. iv of Troilus and Criseide, and is used as the plural of Erinnys, being applied to the three Furies:— 'O ye Herynes, nightes doughtren thre.' Pity may be said to be the queen of the Furies, in the sense that pity (or mercy) can alone control the vindictiveness of vengeance. Shakespeare tells us that mercy 'is mightiest in the mightiest,' and is 'above this sceptred sway;' Merch. Ven. iv. i. 188.

Chaucer found this name precisely where he found his personification of Pity, viz. in Statius, who has the sing. Erinnys (Theb. xi. 383), and the pl. Erinnyas (345).

In a poem called The Remedy of Love, in Chaucer's Works, ed. 1561, fol. 322, back, the twelfth stanza begins with—'Come hither, thou Hermes, and ye furies all,' &c., where it is plain that 'thou Hermes' is a substitution for 'Herines.'

95. The sense is—'the longer I love and dread you, the more I do so.' If we read ever instead of ay, then the e in the must be suppressed. 'In ever lenger the moore, never the moore, never the lesse, Chaucer not unfrequently drops the e in the, pronouncing lengerth, neverth;' cf. Clerkes Tale, E. 687; Man of Lawes Tale, B. 982; Ten Brink.

96. Most MSS. read so sore, giving no sense. Ten Brink has—'For sooth to seyne, I bere the hevvy soore;' following MS. Sh. It is simpler to correct so to the, as suggested by Harl. 7578, which has—'For soith [error for sothly] for to saye I bere the sore.'

101. Set, short for setteth, like bit for biddeth, Cant. Tales, Prol. 187, &c. Ten Brink quotes from the Sompnoures Tale (C. T. 7564)—'With which the devel set your herte on fire,' where set = sets, present tense.

105. Ten Brink inserts ne, though it is not in the MSS. His note is: 'Ne is a necessary complement to but="only," as but properly means "except"; and a collation of the best MSS. of the Cant. Tales shows that Chaucer never omitted the negative in this case. (The same observation was made already by Prof.

Child in his excellent paper on the language of Chaucer and Gower; see Ellis, Early Eng. Pronunciation, p. 374). Me ne forms but one syllable, pronounced meen [i. e. as mod. E. main]. In the same manner I ne=iin [pron. as mod. E. een] occurs, Cant. Tales, ProL. 764 (from MS. Harl. 7334)—

“I ne saugh this yeer so mery a companye;”

and in the Man of Lawes Tale (Group B, 1139)—

“I ne sey but for this ende this sentence.”

Compare Middle High German in (= ich ne), e. g. in kan dir nicht, Walter v. d. Vogelweide, ed. Lachmann, 101, 33. In early French and Provençal me, te, se, &c., when preceded by a vowel, often became m, t, s, &c.; in Italian we have cen for ce ne, &c. Cf. They n' wer-e in Sect. x. l. 5; and Sect. iii. 244 (note).

119. Observe that this last line is a repetition of l. 2.

III. THE BOOK OF THE DUCHESSE.

I may remark here that the metre is sometimes difficult to follow; chiefly owing to the fact that the line sometimes begins with an accented syllable, just as, in Milton's L'Allegro, we meet with lines like ‘Zéphyr, with Aurora playing.’ The accented syllables are sometimes indistinctly marked, and hence arises a difficulty in immediately detecting the right flow of a line. A clear instance of a line beginning with an accented syllable is seen in l. 23—‘Slép', and thús meláncolyë.’

1. The opening lines of this poem should be compared with this passage from Froissart's Paradis d'Amour—

‘*Je sui de moi en grant merveille
Comment je vis, quant tant je veille,
Et on ne porrait en veillant
Trouver de moi plus travaillant:
Car bien sacies que pour veiller
Me viennent souvent travailler
Pensees et melancolies,*’ etc.

Furnivall; Trial Forewords, p. 51.

Chaucer frequently makes words like have (l. 1), live (l. 2), especially in the present indicative, mere monosyllables. As examples of the fully sounded final e, we may notice the dative light-e (l. 1), the dative (or adverbial) night-e (l. 2), the infinitive slép-e (3), the adverb ylich-e (9), the dative mynd-e (15), &c.

On the other hand, hav-e is dissyllabic in l. 24. The e is elided before a following vowel in defaute (5), trouthe (6), falle (13), wite (16), &c. We may also notice that com'th is a monosyllable (7), whereas trewely (33) has three syllables, though in l. 35 it makes but two. It is clear that Chaucer chose to make some words of variable length; and he does this to a much greater extent in the present poem and in the House of Fame than in more finished productions, such as the Canterbury Tales. But it must be observed, on the other hand, that the number of these variable words is limited; in a far larger number of words, the number of syllables never varies at all, except by regular elision before a vowel.

14. The reading For sorwful ymaginacioun (in F., Tn., Th.) cannot be right. Lange proposes to omit For, which hardly helps us. It is clearly the word sorwful that is wrong. I propose to read simply sory, with the same sense.

15. Observe how frequently, in this poem and in the House of Fame, Chaucer concludes a sentence with the former of two lines of a couplet. Other examples occur at ll. 29, 43, 51, 59, 67, 75, 79, 87, 89; i. e. at least ten times in the course of the first hundred lines. The same arrangement occasionally occurs in the existing translation of the Romaunt of the Rose, but with such less frequency as, in itself, to form a presumption against Chaucer's having written it.

Similar examples in Milton, though he was an admirer of Chaucer, are remarkably rare; compare, however, Comus, 97, 101, 127, 133, 137. The metrical effect of this pause is very good.

23. The texts read this. Ten Brink suggests thus (Ch. Sprache, § 320); which I adopt.

31. What me is, what is the matter with me. Me is here in the dative case. This throws some light on the common use of me in Shakespeare in such cases as 'Heat me these irons hot,' K. John iv. 1. 1; &c.

31-96. These lines are omitted in the Tanner MS. 346; also in MS. Bodley 638 (which even omits ll. 24-30). In the Fairfax MS. they are added in a much later hand. Consequently, Thynne's edition is here our only satisfactory authority; though the late copy in the Fairfax MS. is worth consulting.

32. Aske, may ask; subjunctive mood.

33. Trewely is here three syllables, which is the normal form; cf. Prologue, 761; Kn. Tale, 409. In l. 35, the second e is hardly sounded.

36. I insert moot, to complete the sense and metre.

37. 'The most obvious interpretation of these lines seems to be that they contain the confession of a hopeless passion, which has lasted for eight years—a confession which certainly seems to come more appropriately and more naturally from an unmarried than a married man. 'For eight years,'—he says—'I have loved, and loved in vain—and yet my cure is never the nearer. There is but one physician that can heal me—but all that is ended and done with. Let us pass on into fresh fields; what cannot be obtained must needs be left;' Ward, Life of Chaucer, p. 53. Dr. Furnivall supposes that the relentless fair one was the one to whom his Complaint unto Pite was addressed; and chronology would require that Chaucer fell in love with her in 1361. There is no proof that Chaucer was married before 1374, though he may have been married not long after his first passion was 'done.'

43. 'It is good to regard our first subject;' and therefore to return to it. This first subject was his sleeplessness.

45. Til now late follows I sat upryght, as regards construction. The reading Now of late, in some printed editions, is no better.

48. This 'Romaunce' turns out to have been a copy of Ovid's Metamorphoses, a book of which Chaucer was so fond that he calls it his 'own book;' Ho. of Fame, 712. Probably he really had a copy of his own, as he constantly quotes it. Private libraries were very small indeed.

49. Dryve away, pass away; the usual phrase. Cf. 'And dryuen forth the longe day;' P. Plowman, B. prol. 224.

56. 'As long as men should love the law of nature,' i.e. should continue to be swayed by the natural promptings of passion; in other words, for ever. Certainly, Ovid's book has lasted well. In l. 57, such thinges means 'such love-stories.'

62. 'Alcyone, or Halcyone: A daughter of Æolus and Enarete or Ægiale. She was married to Ceyx, and lived so happy with him, that they were presumptuous enough to call each other Zeus and Hera, for which Zeus metamorphosed them into birds, alkuōn (a king-fisher) and kēūks (a greedy sea-bird, Liddell and Scott; a kind of sea-gull; Apollod. i. 7 § 3, &c.; Hygin. Fab. 65). Hyginus relates that Ceyx perished in a shipwreck, that Alcyone for grief threw herself into the sea, and that the gods, out of compassion, changed the two into birds. It was fabled that, during the seven days before, and as many after the shortest day of the year, while the bird alkuōn was breeding, there always prevailed calms at sea. An embellished form of the story is given by Ovid, Metam. xi. 410, &c.; compare Virgil, Georg. i. 399.—Smith's Dictionary. Hence the expression 'halcyon days;' see Holland's Pliny, b. x. c. 32, quoted in my Etym. Dict. s. v. Halcyon.

M. Sandras asserts that the history of Ceyx and Alcyone is borrowed from the Dit de la Fontaine Amoureuse, by Machault, whereas it is evident that Chaucer took care to consult his favourite Ovid, though he also copied several expressions from Machault's poem. Consult Max Lange, as well as Furnivall's Trial Forewords to Chaucer's Minor Poems, p. 43. Surely, Chaucer himself may be permitted to know; his description of the book, viz. in ll. 57-59, applies to Ovid, rather than to Machault's Poems. But the fact is that we have further evidence; Chaucer himself, elsewhere, plainly names Ovid as his authority. See Cant. Tales, Group B, l. 53 (in my edition of the Prioresses Tale, p. 3), where he says—

'For he [Chaucer] hath told of loueres vp and duon
Moo than Ovide made of menciou
In his Epistolis, that ben ful olde.
What sholde I tellen hem sin they ben tolde.
In youthe he made of Ceyx and Alcioun;' etc.

It is true that Chaucer here mentions Ovid's Heroides rather than the Metamorphoses; but that is only because he goes on to speak of other stories, which he took from the Heroides; see the whole context. It is plain that he wishes us to know that he took the present story chiefly from Ovid; yet there are some expressions which he owes to Machault, as will be shown below. It is worth notice, that the whole story is also in Gower's Confessio Amantis, bk. iv. (ed. Pauli, ii. 100); where it is plainly copied from Ovid throughout.

Ten Brink (Studien, p. 10) points out one very clear indication of Chaucer's having consulted Ovid. In l. 68, he uses the expression to tellen shortly, and then proceeds to allude to the shipwreck of Ceyx, which is told in Ovid at great length (Met. xi. 472-572). Of this shipwreck Machault says never a word; he merely says that Ceyx died in the sea.

There is a chapter De Alcione in Vincent of Beauvais, Speculum Naturale, bk. xvi. c. 26; made up from Ambrosius, Aristotle, Pliny (bk. 10), and the Liber de Natura Rerum.

66. Instead of quoting Ovid, I shall quote from Golding's translation of his Metamorphoses, as being more interesting to the English reader. The whole story is also told by Dryden, whose version is easily accessible. As the story is told at great length, I quote only a few of the lines that most closely correspond to Chaucer. Compare—

‘But fully bent

He [Ceyx] seemèd, neither for to leaue the journey which he ment
To take by sea, nor yet to giue Alcyone leaue as tho
Companion of his perlous course by water for to go

When toward night the wallowing waues began to waxen white,
And eke the heady eastern wind did blow with greater might . . .

And all the heauen with clouds as blacke as pitch was ouercast,
That neuer night was halfe so darke. There came a flaw [gust]
at last,

That with his violence brake the Maste, and strake the Sterne away

Behold, euen full upon the waue a flake of water blacke
Did breake, and vnderneathe the sea the head of Ceyx stracke.’

fol. 137-9.

See further in the note to l. 136.

78. Come is probably in the subjunctive mood, and may therefore be dissyllabic.

80. Of the restoration of this line, I should have had some reason to be proud; but I find that Ten Brink (who seems to miss nothing) has anticipated me; see his Chaucers Sprache, §§ 48, 329. We have here, as our guides, only the edition of Thynne (1532), and the late insertion in MS. Fairfax 16. Both of these read—‘Anon her herte began to yerne:’ whereas it of course ought to be—‘Anon her herte gan to erme.’ The substitution of began for gan arose from forgetting that herte (A.S. heorte) is dissyllabic in Chaucer, in countless places. The substitution of yerne for erme arose from the fact that the old word ermen, to grieve, was turned into earn in the sixteenth century, and was afterwards again changed into yearn. All this I have already shewn at such length in my note to the Pardoner’s Prologue (Cant. Ta. C. 312), in my edition of the Man of Lawes Tale, pp. 39, 142, and yet again in my Etym. Dict., s.v. Yearn (2), that it is needless to repeat it all over again. Chaucer was quite incapable of such a hideously false rime as that of terne with yerne; in fact, it is precisely the word terne that is rimed with erme in his Pardoner’s Prologue. Mr. Cromie’s index shews that, in the Cant. Tales, the rime erme, terne, occurs only once, and there is no third word riming with either. There is, however, a rime of affermed with confermed, so that he might have rimed erme, terne, with afferme, conferme. There is, in Chaucer, no fifth riming word in -erne at all, and none in either -irme or -yrme.

Both in the present passage and in the Pardoner's Prologue the verb to erne is used with the same sb., viz. herte; which clinches the matter. By way of example, compare:—'The bysschop weop for ermynng;' King Alisaunder, ed. Weber, l. 1525.

86, 87. In l. 86 I supply ay (which seems wanted); and in l. 87 I delete alas after him, which makes the line a whole foot too long, and is not required.

91. Wher, short for whether (very common).

93. Avowe is all one word, though its component parts were often written apart. Thus, in P. Plowman, B. v. 457, we find And made avowe, where the other texts have a-vou, a-vowe; see Avow in Murray's Dict. I have already explained this fully in my note to C. T. Group C, 695 (Man of Lawes Tale, &c., p. 161).

97. Here the gap in the MSS. ceases, and we again have their authority for the text. For Had we should, perhaps, read Hadde.

106. This phrase is not uncommon. 'And on knes she sat adoun;' Lay le Freine, l. 159; in Weber's Met. Romances, i. 363. Cf. 'This Troylus ful soone on knowes hym sette;' Troilus, iii. 904 (ed. Morris, iv. 264).

107. Weep (not wepte) is Chaucer's word; see Glossaries to Prior. Tale and Man of Lawes Tale.

120. For knowe (as in F. Tn. Th.) read knowen, to avoid hiatus.

126. 'And she, exhausted with weeping and watching.' Gower (Conf. Amant. ed. Pauli, i. 160) speaks of a ship that is forstormed and forblowe, i. e. excessively driven about by storm and wind.

136. Go bet, go quickly, hasten, lit. go better, i. e. faster. See note to Group C, 667 (Man of Lawes Tale, &c.; p. 161). Cf. Go now faste, l. 152.

I here add another illustration from Golding's Ovid, fol. 139.

'Alcyone of so great mischaunce not knowing ought as yit,
Did keepe a reckoning of the nights that in the while did flit,
And hasted garments both for hiin and for her selfe likewise
To weare at his homecomming which she vainely did surmize.
To all the Gods deuoutly she did offer frankincense:
But most aboue them all the Church of Iuno she did sence.
And for her husband (who as then was none) she kneeld before .

The Altar, wishing health and soone arriuell at the shore.
 And that none other woman might before her be preferd,
 Of all her prayers this one peece effectually was herd.
 For Iuno could not finde in heart entreated for to bee
 For him that was already dead. But to th'intent that shee
 From Dame Alcyons deadly hands might keepe her Altars free
 She said: most faithfull messenger of my commandements, O
 Thou Rainebow to the sluggish house of slumber swiftly go,
 And bid him send a dreame in shape of Ceyx to his wife
 Alcyone, for to shew her plaine the loosing of his life.
 Dame Iris takes her pall wherein a thousand colours were
 And bowing like a stringed bow vpon the cloudie sphere,
 Immediately descended to the drowzye house of Sleepe,
 Whose court the cloudes continually do closely ouerdreepe.

Among the darke Cimmerians is a hollow mountaine found
 And in the hill a Caue that farre doth run within the ground,
 The C[h]amber and the dwelling place where slouthfull sleepe doth couch.

The light of Phœbus golden beames this place can never touch . . .
 No boughs are stird with blasts of winde, no noise of tatling toong
 Of man or woman euer yet within that bower roong.
 Dumbe quiet dwelleth there. Yet from the rockes foote doth go
 The riuer of forgetfulnesse, which runneth trickling so
 Upon the litle pebble stones which in the channell ly,
 That vnto sleepe a great deale more it doth prouoke thereby . . .
 Amid the Caue of Ebonye a bedsted standeth hie,
 And on the same a bed of downe with couering blacke doth lie:
 In which the drowzie God of sleepe his lither limbes doth rest.
 About him forging sundry shapes as many dreames lie prest
 As eares of corne do stand in fields in haruest time, or leaues
 Doe grow on trees, or sea to shoore of sandie cinder heaues.
 Assoone as Iris came within this house, and with her hand
 Had put aside the dazeling dreames that in her way did stand,
 The brightnesse of her robe through all the sacred house did shine.

The God of sleepe scarce able for to raise his heauie eine,
 A three or foure times at the least did fall againe to rest,
 And with his nodding head did knock his chinne against his brest.
 At length he waking of himselfe, vpon his elbowe leande.
 And though he knew for what she came: he askt her what she meand: etc.

139. The first accent falls on Sey; the e in halfē seems to be suppressed.

154. His wey. Chaucer substitutes a male messenger for Iris; see ll. 134, 155, 180-2.

155. Imitated from Machault's Dit de la Fontaine :—

'Que venue est en une grant vatee,
De deus grans mons entour environnee,
Et d'un russel qui par my la contree,' etc.

See Ten Brink, Studien, p. 200; Furnivall, Trial Forewords, p. 44.

It is worth notice that the visit of Iris to Somnus is also fully described by Statius, Theb. x. 81-136; but Chaucer does not seem to have copied him.

158, 159. Two bad lines in the MSS. Both can be mended by changing nought into nothing, as suggested by Ten Brink, Chaucers Sprache, § 299.

160. See a very similar passage in Spenser, F. Q. i. 1. 39, 40, 41, 42, 43. And cf. Ho. of Fame, 70.

167. Eclympasteyre. 'I hold this to be a name of Chaucer's own invention. In Ovid occurs a son of Morpheus who has two different names: "Hunc Icelon superi, mortale Phobetora vulgus Nominat;" Met. xi. 640. Phobetora may have been altered into Pastora: Icelon-pastora (the two names linked together) would give Eclympasteyre.'—Ten Brink, Studien, p. 11, as quoted in Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 116. At any rate, we may feel sure that Eclym- is precisely Ovid's Icelon. And perhaps Phobetora comes nearer to -pasteyre than does Phantasos, the name of another son of Morpheus, whom Ovid mentions immediately below. Gower (ed. Pauli, ii. 103) calls them Ithecus and Panthasas; and the fact that he here actually turns Icelon into Ithecus is a striking example of the strange corruption of proper names in medieval times. Prof. Hales suggests that Eclympasteyre represents Icelon plastora, where plastora is the acc. of Gk. πλαστόρ, i. e. moulder or modeller, a suitable epithet for a god of dreams; compare the expressions used by Ovid in ll. 626 and 634 of this passage. Icelon is the acc. of Gk. ἴκελος, or εἴκελος, like, resembling. For my own part, I would rather take the form plastera, acc. of πλαστήρ, a form actually given by Liddell and Scott, and also nearer to the form in Chaucer. Perhaps Chaucer had seen a MS. of Ovid in which Icelon was explained by plastora or plastera, written beside or over it as a gloss, or by way of explanation. This would explain the whole matter. Mr. Fleay thinks the original reading was Morpheus, Ecelon, Phantastere; but this is impossible, because Morpheus had but one heir (see next line).

Froissart has the word Enclimpostair as the name of a son of the god of sleep, in his poem called Paradis d'Amour. And it is now thought that Froissart's poem preceded Chaucer's. But this fact does not help us.

For the remarks by Prof. Hales, see the Athenæum, 1882, i. 444; for those by Mr. Fleay, see the same, p. 568. Other suggestions have been made, but are not worth recording.

173. To envye; to be read as Tenvy-e. The phrase is merely an adaptation of the F. à l'envi, or of the vb. envier. Cotgrave gives: 'à l'envy l'un de l'autre, one to despight the other, or in emulation one of the other;' also 'envier (au ieu), to vie.' Hence E. vie; see Vie in my Etym. Dict. It is etymologically connected with Lat. inuitare, not with Lat. invidia. See l. 406, below.

175. Read slepe, as in ll. 169, 177; A.S. slæpon, pt. t. pl.

181. Who is, i. e. who is it that.

183. Awaketh is here repeated in the plural form.

184. Oon ye, one eye. This is from Machault, who has: 'ouvri l'un de ses yeux.' Ovid has the pl. oculos.

185. Cast is the pp., as pointed out by Ten Brink, who corrects the line; Chaucers Sprache, § 320.

192. Abrayd, and not abrayde, is the right form; for it is a strong verb (A.S. ábregdan, pt. t. ábrægd). So also in the Ho. of Fame, 110.

195. Dreynt-e is here used as a def. adjective, with the weak declension in e; and is so written in MS. F. in l. 229. So also in Cant. Tales, B. 69; and cf. sweynt-e in Ho. Fame, 1783.

206. The word look must be supplied. MS. B. even omits herte; which would give—'But good-e swet-e, [look] that ye;' where good-e and swet-e are vocatives.

213. I adopt Ten Brink's suggestion (Chaucers Sprache, § 300), viz. to change allas into A.

218. My first matere, my first subject; i. e. sleeplessness; just as in l. 43.

219. Wherfor seems to be accented on the former syllable. MS. B. inserts you after told; perhaps it is not wanted. If it is, it had better come before told rather than after it.

222. I had be, I should have been. Deed and dolven, dead and buried; as in Cursor Mundi, 5494. Chaucer's dolven and deed is odd.

244. I ne roghte who, to be read In' roght-e who; i. e. I should not care who; see note to Compl. to Pite, 105. Roghte is subjunctive.

247. His lyve, during his life.

248. The readings are here onwarde, Th. F.; here onward, Tn.; here-on warde, B. I do not think here onward can be meant, nor yet hereon-ward; I know of no examples of such meaningless expressions. I read here on warde, and explain it: 'I will give him the very best gift that he ever expected (to get) in his life; and (I will give it) here, in his custody, even now, as soon as possible,' &c. Ward = custody, occurs in the dat. warde in William of Palerne, 376—'How that child from here warde was went for evermore.'

250. Here Chaucer again takes a hint from Machault's Dit de la Fontaine, where we find the poet promising the god a hat and a soft bed of gerfalcon's feathers. See Tén Brink, Studien, p. 204.

'Et por ce au dieu qui moult sout (?) et moult vault
 Por mielx dormir un chapeau de pavaut
 Et un mol lit de plume de gerfaut
 Promes et doing.'

255. Reynes, i.e. Rennes, in Brittany; spelt Raynes in the Paston Letters, ed. Gairdner, iii. 358. Linen is still made there; and by 'clothe of Reynes' some kind of linen, rather than of woollen cloth, is meant. It is here to be used for pillow-cases. It was also used for sheets. 'Your shetes shall be of clothe of Rayne;' Squyr of Lowe Degre, l. 842 (in Ritson, Met. Rom. iii. 180). 'A peyre schetes of Reynes, with the heued shete [head-sheet] of the same;' Earliest Eng. Wills, ed. Furnivall, p. 4, l. 16. 'A towaile of Raynes;' Babees Book, p. 130, l. 213; and see note on p. 208 of the same. 'It [the head-sheet] was more frequently made of the fine white linen of Reynes;' Our Eng. Home, p. 109. 'Hede-shetes of Rennes' are noticed among the effects of Hen. V; see Rot. Parl., iv. p. 228; footnote on the same page. The mention of this feather-bed may have been suggested to Machault by Ovid's line about the couch of Morpheus (Metam. xi. 611)—'Plumeus, unicolor, pullo velamine tectus.'

264. We must delete quene.

279. 'To be well able to interpret my dream.'

282. The modern construction is—'The dream of King Pharaoh.' See this idiom explained in the Prioresses Tale, note to Group F, l. 209; p. 213. Cf. Gen. xli. 25.

284. As to Macrobius, see note to the Parl. of Foules, 29. And cf. Ho. of Fame, 513-7. We must never forget how frequent are Chaucer's imitations of Le Roman de la Rose. Here, for example, he is thinking of ll. 7-10 of that poem:—

‘Ung acteur qui ot non Macrobes
Ancois escrist la vision
Qui avint au roi Cipion.’

After Macrobes understand coude (from l. 283), which governs the infin. arede in l. 289.

286. Mett-e occupies the second foot in the line. In l. 288 read fortuned.

288. This line, found in Thynne only, is perhaps not genuine, but interpolated.

292. Cf. Rom. de la Rose, 45-47:—

‘Avis m'iere qu'il estoit mains
En Mai estoie, ce songoie.’

And again, cf. ll. 295, &c. with the same, ll. 67-74.

301. Read songen, not songe, to avoid the hiatus.

304. Chaucer uses som as a singular in such cases as the present. A clear case occurs in: ‘Som in his bed;’ Kn. Tale, 2173. Hence song is the sing. verb.

309. Entunes, tunes. Cf. entuned, pp.; C. T. Prol. 123.

310. Tewnes, Tunis; vaguely put for some distant and wealthy town; see ll. 1061-4, below. Its name was probably suggested by the preceding word entunes, which required a rime. Gower mentions Kaire (Cairo) just as vaguely:—

‘That me were lever her love winne
Than Kaire and al that is therinne;’ Conf. Amant., ed. Pauli,
ii. 57.

The sense is—‘that certainly, even to gain Tunis, I would not have (done other) than heard them sing.’ Lange thinks these lines corrupt; but I believe the idiom is correct.

323. As stained glass windows were then rare and expensive, it is worth while observing that these gorgeous windows were not real ones, but only seen in a dream. This passage is imitated in the late poem called the Court of Love, st. 33, where we are told that ‘The temple shone with windows al of glasse,’ and that in the glass were portrayed the stories of Dido and Annelida. These windows, it may be observed, were equally imaginary.

328. The caesural pause comes after Ector, which might allow the intrusion of the word of before king. But Mr. Sweet omits of, and I follow him. The words of king are again inserted before Lamedon in l. 329, being caught from l. 328 above.

Lamedon is Laomedon, father of King Priam of Troy. Ector is Chaucer's spelling of Hector; Man of Lawes Tale, 198. He here cites the usual examples of love-stories, such as those of Medea and Jason, and Paris and Helen. Lavyne is Lavinia, the second wife of Æneas; Vergil, Æn. bk. vii; cf. Ho. of Fame, 458. Observe his pronunciation of Médea, as in the Ho. of Fame, 401; Cant. Ta., B. 72 (see Prioresses Tale, &c. p. 3).

332. 'There is reason to believe that Chaucer copied these imageries from the romance of Guigemar, one of the Lays of Marie de France; in which the walls of a chamber are painted with Venus and the Art of Love from Ovid. Perhaps Chaucer might not look further than the temples of Boccaccio's Theseid for these ornaments;' Warton, Hist. E. Poetry, 1871, iii. 63. Cf. Rom. of the Rose (E. version), ll. 139-146.

333. Bothe text and glose, i. e. both in the principal panels and in the margin. He likens the walls to the page of a book, in which the glose, or commentary, was often written in the margin. Mr. Sweet inserts with before text, and changes And into Of in the next line; I do not think the former change is necessary, but I adopt the latter.

334. It had all sorts of scenes from the Romance of the Rose on it. Chaucer again mentions this Romance by name in his Merchant's Tale; C. T. 9906; and he tells us that he himself translated it; Prol. to Legend, 329. The celebrated Roman de la Rose was begun by Guillaume de Lorris, who wrote ll. 1-4070, and died in 1260 or 1262, and completed (in a very different and much more satirical style) by Jean de Meung (or Meun), surnamed Clopinel, from a defect in one of his legs, who wrote ll. 4071-22074; it was finished about the year 1305. The story is that of a young man who succeeded in plucking a rose in a walled garden, after overcoming extraordinary difficulties; allegorically, it means that he succeeded in obtaining the object of his love.

The existing English translation is imperfect, and bears internal evidence of not being Chaucer's, except throughout ll. 1-1705. Lines 1-4432 answer to ll. 1-4070 of the French text, by G. de Lorris. Lines 4433-5813 answer to ll. 4071-5170 of the original, by J. de Meun; after which there is a great gap. Lines 5814-7698 answer to ll. 10717-12564 of the original, and break off nearly 10,000 lines from the end.

The E. version is invariably called the Romaunt of the Rose, and we find the title Rommant de la Rose in the original, l. 20082; cf. our romant-ic. But Burguy explains that romant is a false form, due to confusion with words rightly ending in -ant. The right O. F. form is romans, originally an adverb; from the phrase parler romans, i. e. loqui Romanice. In the Six-text edition of the Cant. Tales, E. 2032, four MSS. have romance, one has romans, and one romauns.

For examples of walls or ceilings being painted with various subjects, see Warton's Hist. of E. Poetry, ed. Hazlitt, ii. 131, 275; iii. 63.

340. The first accent is on Blew, not on bright. Cf. Rom. de la Rose, 124, 125:—

‘Clere et serie et bele estoit
La matinee, et atrempee.’

343. Ne in is to be read as Nin; we find it written nin in the Squieres Tale, 35. See l. 694.

347. Whether is to be read as Wher; it is often so spelt.

348. The line, as it stands in the authorities, viz. ‘And I herde goyng, bothe vp and doune’—cannot be right. Mr. Sweet omits bothe. I prefer to omit And, while altering goyng to gon. Perhaps even speke (better speken) is an infinitive in l. 350. The line, as I give it, is idiomatic and metrical. However, speken may also be the pt. t. plural (A.S. spræcon); and it is more convenient to take it so.

352. Upon lengthe, after a great length of course, after a long run.

M. Sandras points out some very slight resemblances between this passage and some lines in a French poem in the Collection Mouchet, vol. ii. fol. 106; see the passage cited in Furnivall's Trial Forewords to the Minor Poems, p. 51. Most likely Chaucer wrote independently of this French poem, as even M. Sandras seems inclined to admit.

353. Embossed, embossed. This is a technical term, used in various senses; see the New Eng. Dictionary. Here it means ‘plunged into the thicket.’ In All's Well, iii. 6. 107, it means ‘driven into the thicket,’ i. e. driven to extremity. Later, it meant exhausted with running, and then covered with foam at the mouth.

In the play of Albumazar, Act v. sc. 2, Cricca says—

‘I am emboss'd
With trotting all the streets to find Pandolfo.’

Hazlitt's note is—‘Gascoigne, in his book of hunting, 1575, p. 242, enumerates embossed among “other generall termes of the hart and his properties. When he [the hart] is foamy at the mouth we say that he is embost." So in The Shoemaker's Holiday, or The Gentle Craft, 1610, sig. C 3—

'Besides, the miller's boy told me even now
He saw him take soile, and he hallowed him,
Affirming him so embost
That long he could not hold.'

See also the Book of St. Alban's, fol. f 1, back, about the hart dropping white foam when sore pressed.

362. A relay was a fresh set of dogs; see Relay in my Etym. Dict.

'When the howndys are set an hert for to mete,
And other hym chasen and folowyn to take,
Then all the Relais thow may vppon hem make.'
Book of St. Alban's, fol. e 8, back.

A lymere was a dog held in a leash, to be let loose when required. In the Book of St. Alban's, fol. e 4, we are told that the beasts which should be 'reride with the lymer,' i. e. roused and pursued by the dog so called, are 'the hert and the bucke and the boore.'

365. Oon, ladde, i. e. one who led. This omission of the relative is common.

368. 'The emperor Octovien' is the emperor seen by Chaucer in his dream. In l. 1314, he is called this king, by whom Edward III. is plainly intended. He was 'a favourite character of Carolingian legend, and pleasantly revived under this aspect by the modern romanticist Ludwig Tieck—probably [here] a flattering allegory for the King;' Ward's Life of Chaucer, p. 69. The English romance of Octouian Imperator is to be found in Weber's Metrical Romances, iii. 157; it extends to 1962 lines. He was an emperor of Rome, and married Floraunce, daughter of Dagabers [Dagobert], king of France. The adventures of Floraunce somewhat resemble those of Constance in the Man of Lawes Tale.

370. The exclamation 'A goddes halfe' was pronounced like 'A god's half;' see l. 758. See note to l. 544.

374. Fil to doon, fell to do, i. e. was fitting to do.

375. Fot-hoot, foot-hot, immediately; see my note to Man of Lawes Tale, 438.

376. Moot, notes upon a horn, here used as a plural. See Glossary. 'How shall we blowe whan ye han sen the hert? I shal blowe after one mote, ij notes [i. e. 3 motes in all]; and if myn howndes come not hastily to me as I wolde, I shall blowe iiij. motes;' Venery de Twety, in Reliquiæ Antiquæ, i. 152.

Cf. a passage in the Chace du Cerf, quoted from the Collection Mouchet, i. 166, in Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 51 (though Chaucer probably wrote his account quite independently of it):—

'Et puis si corneras apel
.iiij. lons mots, pour les chiens avoir.'

379. Rechased, headed back. Men were posted at certain places, to keep the hart within certain bounds. See next note.

386. A forloyn, a recall (as I suppose; for it was blown when the hounds were all a long way off their object of pursuit). It is thus explained in the Book of St. Alban's, fol. f i :—

'Yit mayster, wolde I fayn thus at yow leere,
What is a forloyng, for that is goode to here.
That shall I say the, quod he, the soth at lest.
When thy houndes in the wode sechyn any beest,
And the beest is stoll away owt of the fryth,
Or the houndes that thou hast meten therwith,
And any other houndes before than may with hem mete,
Thees oder houndes are then forloyned, I the hete.
For the beste and the houndes arn so fer before,
And the houndes behynde be weer[i]e and soore,
So that they may not at the best cum at ther will,
The houndes before forloyne [distance] hem, and that is the skyl.
They be ay so fere before, to me iff thou will trust;
And thys is the forloyne; Iere hit, iff thou lust.'

The 'chace of the forloyne' is explained (very obscurely) in the Venery de Twety; see Reliquiæ Antiquæ, i. 152. But the following passage from the same gives some light upon rechased: 'Another chace ther is whan a man hath set up archerys and greyhoundes, and the best be founde, and passe out the boundys, and myne houndes after; then shall y blowe on this maner a mote, and aftirward the rechace upon my houndys that be past the boundys.'

387. Go, gone. The sense is—'I had gone (away having) walked from my tree.' The idiom is curious. My tree, the tree at which I had been posted. Chaucer dreamt that he was one of the men posted to watch which way the hart went, and to keep the bounds.

396. The final e in fled-de is not elided, owing to the pause after it. See note to l. 685.

398. Wente, path. Chaucer often rimes words that are pronounced alike, if their meanings be different. See ll. 439, 440; and cf. ll. 627-630. The very same pair of rimes occurs again in the Ho. of Fame, 181, 182; and in Troil. iii. 785.

402. Read—For both-e Flor-a, &c. The -a in Flora comes at the cæsural pause; cf. ll. 413, 414. Once more, this is from Le Roman de la Rose, ll. 8449-51:—

‘Zephirus et Flora, sa fame,
Qui des flors est déesse et dame,
Cil dui font les floretes nestre.’

Cf. also ll. 5962-5:—

‘Les floretes i fait parair,
E cum estoiles flamboier,
Et les herbetes verdoier
Zephirus, quant sur mer chevauche.’

405. The first accent is on For; not happily.

408. ‘To have more flowers than the heaven (has stars, so as even to rival) seven such planets as there are in the sky.’ Rather involved, and probably all suggested by the necessity for a rime to heven. See l. 824. Moreover, it is copied from Le Roman de la Rose, 8465-8:—

‘Qu’il vous fust avis que la terre
Vosist emprendre estrif et guerre
Au ciel d’estre miex estelée,
Tant iert par ses flors revelée.’

410-412. From Le Roman de la Rose, 55-58:—

‘La terre
Et oblie la poverte
Ou ele a töt l’yver este.’

419. Imitated from Le Roman de la Rose, 1373-1391; in particular:—

‘Li ung [arbre] fu loing de l’autre assis
Plus de cinq toises, ou de sis,’ etc.

Chaucer has treated a toise as if it were equal to two feet; it was really about six.

429. According to the Book of St. Albans, fol. e 4, the buck was called a fawne in his first year, a preket in the second, a sowrell in the third, a sowre in the fourth, a bucke of the fyrst hede in the fifth, and a bucke (simply) in the sixth year. Also a roo is the female of the roobucke.

435. Argus is put for Algus, the old French name for the inventor of the Arabic numerals; it occurs in l. 16373 of the Roman de la Rose, which mentions him in company with Euclid and Ptolemy—

‘Algus, Euclides, Tholomees.’

This name was obviously confused with that of the hundred-eyed Argus.

This name Algus was evolved out of the O. F. algorisme, which, as Dr. Murray says, is a French adaptation ‘from the Arab. al-Khowārazmī, the native of Khwārazm (Khiva), surname of the Arab mathematician Abu Ja’far Mohammed Ben Musa, who flourished early in the 9th century, and through the translation of whose work on Algebra, the Arabic numerals became generally known in Europe. Cf. Euclid = plane geometry.’ He was truly ‘a noble countour,’ to whom we all owe a debt of gratitude. That Algus was sometimes called Argus, also appears from the Roman de la Rose, ll. 12994, &c., which is clearly the very passage which Chaucer here copies:—

‘Se mestre Argus li bien contens
I vosist bien metre ses cures,
E venist o ses dix figures,
Par quoi tout certefie et nombre,
Si ne péust-il pas le nombre
Des grans contens certefier,
Tant seust bien mouteplier.’¹

Here o means ‘with;’ so that Chaucer has copied the very phrase ‘with his figures ten.’ But still more curiously, Jean de Meun here rimes nombre, pres. sing. indic. with nombre, sb.; and Chaucer rimes noumbre, infin., with noumbre, sb. likewise. Countour in l. 435 means ‘arithmetician;’ in the next line it means an abacus or counting-board, for assisting arithmetical operations.

437. His figures ten; the ten Arabic numerals, i. e. from 1 to 9, and the cipher 0.

438. Al ken, all kin, i. e. mankind, all men. This substitution of ken for kin (A. S. cyn) seems to have been due to the exigencies of rime, as Chaucer uses kin elsewhere. However, Gower has the same form—‘And of what ken that she was come;’ Conf. Am. b. viii; ed. Pauli, iii. 332. So also in Will. of Palerne, 722—‘Miself knowe ich nouzt mi ken;’ and five times at least in the Ayenbite of Inwyt, as it is a Kentish form.

442. The strong accent on me is very forced.

¹ M. Méon prints montepplier. It is clearly mouteplier, to multiply.

445. A man in blak; John of Gaunt, in mourning for the loss of his wife Blaunche. Imitated by Lydgate, in his Complaint of the Black Knight, l. 130, and by Spenser, in his Daphnida:—

‘I did espie

Where towards me a sory wight did cost

Clad all in black, that mourning did bewray.’

452. Wel-faring-e; four syllables.

455. John of Gaunt, born in June, 1340, was 29 years old in 1369. I do not know why a poet is never to make a mistake; nor why critics should lay down such a singular law. But if we are to lay the error on the scribes, Mr. Brock’s suggestion is excellent. He remarks that nine and twenty was usually written .xxviiiij.; and if the v were omitted, it would appear as .xxiiiij., i. e. four and twenty. The existing MSS. write ‘four and twenty’ at length; but such is not the usual practice of earlier scribes. It may also be added that .xxiiiij. was at that time always read as four and twenty, never as twenty-four; so that no ambiguity could arise as to its meaning. See Richard the Redeless, iii. 260.

There is a precisely similar confusion in Cant. Ta. Group B, l. 5 (see my Prioresses Tale, p. 1, footnote 2); where eightetethe is denoted by ‘xviiijthe’ in the Hengwrt MS., whilst the Harl. MS. omits the v, and reads threttenthe, and again the Ellesmere MS. inserts an x, and gives us eighte and twentithe. The presumption is, that Chaucer knew his patron’s age, and that we ought to read nine for four; but even if he inadvertently wrote four, there is no crime in it.

475. The knight’s lay falls into two stanzas, one of five, and one of six lines, as marked. In order to make them more alike, Thynne inserted an additional line—And thus in sorowe lefte me alone—after l. 479. This additional line is numbered 480 in the editions; so I omit l. 480 in the numbering. The line is probably spurious. It is not grammatical; grammar would require that has (not is, as in l. 479) should be understood before the pp. left; or if we take left-e as a past tense, then the line will not scan. But it is also unmetrical, as the arrangement of lines should be the same as in ll. 481-6, if the two stanzas are to be made alike. Chaucer says the lay consisted of ‘ten verses or twelve’ in l. 463, which is a sufficiently close description of a lay of eleven lines. Had he said twelve without any mention of ten, the case would have been different.

481. If we must needs complete the line, we must read

'Allas! o deth!' inserting o; or 'Allas! the deth,' inserting the. The latter is proposed by Ten Brink, Sprache, &c. § 346.

490. Pure, very; cf. 'pure fettres,' Kn. Tale, 421. And see l. 583, below.

491. Cf. 'Why does my blood thus muster to my heart?' Meas. for Meas. ii. 4. 20.

501. Seet, sat; a false form for sat (A. S. sæt); due to the plural form seet-e or sēt-e (A. S. sæt-on). The very same error recurs in Kn. Tale, 1217; cf. same, 2035.

510. Made, i. e. they made; idiomatic.

521. Nē I, nor I; to be read N'I; cf. note to l. 343.

526. 'Yes; the amends is (are) easily made.'

532. Me acqueynte = m'acqueynt-e, acquaint myself.

544. By our lord, to be read as by'r lord. Cf. by'r lakin, Temp. iii. 3. 1. So again, in ll. 651, 690, 1042.

547. Me thinketh (= me think'th), it seems to me.

550. Wis, certainly: 'As certainly (as I hope that) God may help me.' So in Nonne Prestes Tale, 587; and cf. Kn. Tale, 1928. So also: 'As wisly helpe me gret god;' Squ. Ta. 469, &c. And see l. 683, below.

556. Paraventure, pronounced as Paraunter; Thynne so has it.

Compare this passage with the long dialogue between Troilus and Pandarus in the latter part of the first book of Troilus.

568. Alluding to Ovid's Remedia Amoris. Accent remédies on the second syllable.

569. The story of Orpheus is in Ovid's Metamorphoses, bk. x. The allusion is to the harp of Orpheus, at the sound of which the tortured had rest. Cf. Ho. of Fame, 1202.

'To tyre on Titius growing hart the gredy Grype forbears:

The shunning water Tantalus endeuereth not to drink;

And Danaus daughters ceast to fill their tubs that haue no brink.

Ixions wheel stood still: and downe sate Sisyphus vpon

His rolling stone.'—GOLDING'S Ovid, fol. 120.

570. Cf. Ho. of Fame, 919. Dædalus represents the mechanic. No mechanical contrivances can help the mourner.

572. Cf.

'Par Hipocras, ne Galien,

Tant fussent bo.i phisicien.'

Roman de la Rose, 16161.

Hippocrates and Galen are meant; see note to C. T. Group C, 306, in my Man of Lawes Tale, p. 141.

579. Y-worthe, (who am) become ; pp. of worthen.

582. 'For all good fortune and I are foes,' lit. angry (with each other).

589. S and C were so constantly interchanged before e that Sesiphus could be written Cesiphus ; and C and T were so often mistaken that Cesiphus easily became Tesiphus, the form in the Tanner MS. Further, initial T was sometimes replaced by Th ; and this would give the Thesiphus of MS. F.

Sesiphus, i. e. Sisyphus, is of course intended ; it was in the author's mind in connection with the story of Orpheus just above ; see note to l. 569. In the Roman de la Rose, we have the usual allusions to Yxion (l. 19479), Tentalus, i. e. Tantalus (l. 19482), Ticius, i. e. Tityus (l. 19506), and Sisifus (l. 19499).

But whilst I thus hold that Chaucer probably wrote Sesiphus, I have no doubt that he really meant Tityus, as is shewn by the expression lyth, i. e. lies extended. See Troil. i. 786, where Bell's edition has Siciphus, but the Campsall MS. has Ticyus ; whilst in ed. 1561 we find Tesiphus.

599. With this string of contrarities compare the Eng. version of the Roman de la Rose, 4706-4753.

614. Abaved, confounded, disconcerted. See Glossary.

618. Imitated from the Roman de la Rose, from l. 6644 onwards.

'Vez cum fortune le servi
N'est ce donc chose bien provable
Que sa roë n'est pas tenable?'

Jean de Meun goes on to say that Charles of Anjou killed Manfred, king of Sicily, in the first battle with him [A.D. 1266]—

'En la premeraine bataille
L'assailli por li desconfire,
Eshec et mat li ala dire
Desus son destrier auferrant
Du trait d'un paonnet errant
Ou milieu de son eschiquier.'

He next speaks of Conradin, whose death was likewise caused by Charles in 1268, so that these two (Manfred and Conradin) lost all their pieces at chess—

'Cil dui, comme folz garçonnés,
Roz et ferges et paonnés,
Et chevaliers as gieus perdirent,
Et hors de l'eschiquier saillirent.'

And further, of the inventor of chess (l. 6715)—

'Car ainsi le dist Athalus
 Qui des eschez controva l'us,
 Quant il traitoit d'arismetique.'

He talks of the queen being taken (at chess), l. 6735—

'Car la fierche avoit este prise
 Au gieu de la premiere assise.'

He cannot recount all Fortune's tricks (l. 6879)—

'De fortune la semilleuse
 Et de sa roë perilleuse
 Tous les tors conter ne porroie.'

629. Cf. 'whited sepulchres ;' Matt. xxiii. 27.

630. The MSS. and Thynne have floures, flourys. This gives no sense ; we must therefore read flour is. For a similar rime see that of nones, noon is, in the Prologue, 523, 524. Strictly, grammar requires ben rather than is ; but when two nominatives express much the same sense, the singular verb may be used, as in Lenvoy to Bukton, 6. The sense is—'her chief glory and her prime vigour is (i. e. consists in) lying.'

634. The parallel passage is one in the Remède de Fortune, by G. de Machault :—

'D'un ail rit, de l'autre lerne ;
 C'est l'orgueilleuse humilité,
 C'est l'envieuse charité [l. 642]. . .
 La peinture d'une vipère
 Qu'est mortable ;
 En riens à li ne se compère.'

See Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 47 ; and compare the remarkable and elaborate description of Fortune in the Anticlaudian of Alanus de Insulis (Distinctio 8, cap. 1), in Wright's Anglo-Latin Satirists, vol. ii. pp. 399, 400.

636. Chaucer seems to have rewritten the whole passage at a later period :—

'O soden hap, o thou fortune unstable,
 Like to the scorioun so deceivable,
 That flatrest with thy hed whan thou wolt sting ;
 Thy tail is deth, thurgh thyn enveniming.
 O brotel Ioye, o swete poyson queinte,
 O monstre, that so sotilly canst peinte,
 Thy giftes under hue of stedfastnesse
 That thou deceivest bothe more and lesse,' etc.

Cant. Tales, 9931 (Merch. Tale).

Compare also Man of Lawes Tale, 361, 404. 'The scorpiun is ones cunnes wurm thet haueth neb, ase me seith, sumdel iliche ase wummon, and is neddre bihinden; maketh feir semblaunt and fiketh mit te heued, and stingeth mid te teile;' Ancren Riwe, p. 206. Vincent of Beauvais, in his Speculum Naturale, bk. xx. c. 160, quotes from the Liber de Naturis Rerum—'Scorpio blandum et quasi virgineum dicitur vultum habere, sed habet in cauda nodosa venenatum aculeum, quo pungit et inficit proximantem.'

642. A translated line; see note to l. 634.

651. Read—Trow'st thou? by'r lord; see note to l. 544.

653. Draught is a move at chess; see ll. 682, 685. Thus in Caxton's Game of the Chesse—'the alphyn [bishop] goeth in vj. draughtes al the tablier [board] rounde about.' So in The Tale of Beryn, 1779, 1812. It translates the F. trait; see note to l. 618 (second quotation).

654. 'Fers, the piece at chess next to the king, which we and other European nations call the queen; though very improperly, as Hyde has observed. Pherz, or Pherzan, which is the Persian name for the same piece, signifies the King's Chief Counsellor, or General.—Hist. Shahilud. [shahi-ludii, chess-play], pp. 88, 89.—Tyrwhitt's Glossary. Chaucer follows Rom. Rose, where the word appears as fierge, l. 6688, and fierche, l. 6735; see note to l. 618 above. (For another use of fers, see note to l. 723 below.) Godefroy gives the O. F. spellings fierce, fierche, fierge, firge, and quotes two lines which give the O. F. names of all the pieces at chess:—

'Roy, roc, chevalier, et alphin,
Fierge, et peon.'—

Caxton calls them kyng, quene, alphyn, knyght, rook, pawn. Richardson's Pers. Dict., p. 1080, gives the Pers. name of the queen as farzī or farzīn, and explains farzīn by 'the queen at chess, a learned man;' compare Tyrwhitt's remark above. In fact, the orig. Skt. name for this piece was mantri, i.e. the adviser or counsellor. He also gives the Pers. farz, learned; farz or firz, the queen at chess. I suppose it is a mere chance that the somewhat similar Arab. faras means 'a horse, and the knight at chess;' Richardson (as above). Oddly enough, the latter word has also some connection with Chaucer, as it is the Arabic name of the 'wedge' of an astrolabe; see Chaucer's Astrolabe, ed. Skeat, Part i. § 14 (footnote).

655. When a chess-player, by an oversight, loses his queen for nothing, he may, in general, as well give up the game. Beryn was 'in hevyr plyzte,' when he only lost a rook for nothing; Tale of Beryn, 1812.

660. The word the before mid must of course be omitted. The lines are to be scanned thus:—

‘Therwith | fortun | e seid | e chek | here
And mate | in mid | pointe of | the chek | kere.’

The rime is a feminine one. Lines 660 and 661 are copied from the Rom. Rose; see note to l. 618, above. To be checkmated by an 'errant' pawn in the very middle of the board is a most ignominious way of losing the game. Cf. check-mate in Troil. ii. 754.

663. Athalus; see note to l. 618, above. Jean de Meun follows John of Salisbury (bishop of Chartres, died 1180) in attributing the invention of chess to Attalus. 'Attalus Asiaticus, si Gentilium creditur historiis, hanc ludendi lasciuam dicitur inuenisse ab exercitio numerorum, paululum deflexa materia;' Joan. Saresburiensis Policraticus, lib. i. c. 5. Warton (Hist. E. Poet. 1871, iii. 91) says the person meant is Attalus Philometor, king of Pergamus; who is mentioned by Pliny, Nat. Hist. xviii. 3, xxviii. 2. It is needless to explain here how chess was developed out of the old Indian game for four persons called chatur-anga, i. e. consisting of four members or parts (Benfey's Skt. Dict. p. 6). I must refer the reader to Forbes's History of Chess, or the article on Chess in the English Cyclopædia. See also the E. version of the Gesta Romanorum, ed. Herrtage, p. 70; A. Neckam, De Naturis Rerum, ed. Wright, p. 324; and Sir F. Madden's article in the Archæologia, xxiv. 203.

666. Ieopardies, hazards, critical positions, problems; see note on C. T. Group G, 743, in my Man of Lawes Tale, p. 187.

667. Pithagores, put for Pythagoras; for the rime. Pythagoras of Samos, born about B.C. 570, considered that all things were founded upon numerical relations; various discoveries in mathematics, music, and astronomy, were attributed to him.

682. 'I would have made the same move;' i. e. had I had the power, I would have taken her fers from her, just as she took mine.

684. She, i. e. Fortune; so in Thynne. The MSS. have He, i. e. God, which can hardly be meant.

685. The cæsural pause preserves e in draughte from elision. It rimes with caughte (l. 682). Similar examples of 'hiatus' are not common: Ten Brink (Sprache, § 270) instances C. T. Group C, 599, 772 (Pard. Tale).

694. Ne in is to be read as nin (twice); see l. 343.

700. 'There lies in reckoning (i. e. is debited to me in the account), as regards sorrow, for no amount at all.' In his account with Sorrow, he is owed nothing, having received payment in full. There is no real difficulty here.

705. 'I have nothing;' for (1) Sorrow has paid in full, and so owes me nothing; (2) I have no gladness left; (3) I have lost my true wealth; (4) and I have no pleasure.

708. 'What is past is not yet to come.'

709. Tantale, Tantalus. He has already referred to Sisyphus; see note to l. 589. In the Roman de la Rose, we find Yxion, l. 19479; Tentalus, l. 19482; and Sisifus, l. 19499; as I have already remarked.

717. Again from the Rom. de la Rose, l. 5869—

'Et ne priseras une prune
Toute la roë de fortune.
A Socrates seras semblables,
Qui tant fu fers et tant estables,
Qu'il n'ert liés en prosperités,
Ne tristes en aversités.'

Chaucer's thre strees is Jean de Meun's prune.

723. By the ferses twelve I understand all the pieces except the king, which could not be taken. The guess in Bell's Chaucer says 'all the pieces except the pawns;' but as a player only has seven pieces at most beside the pawns and king, I fail to see how seven can be called twelve. My own reckoning is thus: pawns, eight; queen, bishop, rook, knight, four; total, twelve. The fact that each player has two of three of these, viz. of the bishop, rook, and knight, arose from the conversion of chaturanga, in which each of four persons had a king, bishop, knight, rook [to keep to modern names] and four pawns, into chess, in which each of two persons had two kings (afterwards king and queen), two bishops, knights, and rooks, and eight pawns. The bishop, knight, and rook, were thus duplicated, and so count but once apiece. The case of the pawns was different, for each pawn had an individuality of its own, no two being made alike (except in inferior sets). Caxton's Game of the Chesse shews this clearly; he describes each of the eight pawns separately, and gives a different figure to each. According to him, the pawns were (beginning from the King's Rook's Pawn) the Labourer, Smyth, Clerke (or Notary), Marchaunt, Physicien, Tauerner, Garde, and Ribauld. They denoted 'all sorts and conditions of men;’ and this is why our common saying of ‘tinker, tailor, soldier, sailor, gentleman, apothecary, ploughboy, thief’ enumerates eight conditions¹.

As the word fers originally meant counsellor or monitor of the king, it could be applied to any of the pieces. There was a special reason for its application to each of the pawns; for a pawn, on arriving at its last square, could not be exchanged (as now) for any piece at pleasure, but only for a queen, i. e. the fers par excellence. For, as Caxton says again, ‘he [the pawn] may not goo on neyther side till he hath been in the fardest ligne of theschequer, & that he hath taken the nature of the draughtes of the quene, & than he is a fiers, and than may he goo on al sides cornerwyse fro poynt to poynt onely as the quene;’ &c.

726. These stock examples all come together in the Rom. de la Rose; viz. Jason and Medee, at l. 13433; Phylis and Demophon, at l. 13415; ‘Dido, roine de Cartage,’ at l. 13379. The story of Echo and Narcissus is told fully, in an earlier passage, at l. 1447; see ll. 1469-1545 of the English version; also that of ‘Dalida’ and ‘Sanson’ in a later passage, at l. 16879. See also the Legends of Dido, Medea, and Phillis in the Legend of Good Women; and the story of Sampson in the Monkes Tale, C. T. Group B, 3205, in my edition of the Prioresses Tale. Cf. also—

‘Ne Narcissus, the fayre,’ &c.; Kn. Tale, 1083.

‘And deye he moste, he sayde, as did Ecco
For Narcissus;’ C. T. 11263 (Frank. Tale).

779. M. Sandras points out the resemblance to a passage in G. de Machault’s Remède de Fortune:—

‘Car le droit estat d’innocence
Ressemblent (?) proprement la table
Blanche, polie, qui est able
A recevoir, sans nul contraire,
Ce qu’on y vent peindre ou portraire.’

The rime of table and able settles the point. Mr. Brock points out a parallel passage in Boethius, which Chaucer thus translates:—‘the soule hadde be naked of it-self, as a mirour or a c’ene parchemyn . . . Ryzt as we ben wont some time by a swift poyntel to ficchen lettres emprented in the smothernesse or in the plainesse of the table of wex, or in parchemyn that ne hath no figure ne note in it;' ed. Morris, p. 166 (bk. v. met. 4). But I doubt if Chaucer knew much of Boethius in 1369; and in the present passage he clearly refers to a prepared white surface, not to a tablet of wax. 'Youth and white paper take any impression;' Ray's Proverbs.

791. An allusion to the old proverb which is given in Hending in the form—'Whose yong lerneth, olt [old] he ne leseth;' Hending's Prov. l. 45. Kemble gives the medieval Latin—'Quod puer adsuescit, leviter dimittere nescit;' Gartner, Dicteria, p. 24 b. Cf. Horace, Epist. i. 2. 69; also Rom. de la Rose, 13094.

799. John of Gaunt married Blanche at the age of nineteen.

805. Imitated from Machault's Dit du Vergier and Fontaine Amoureuse.

'Car il m'est vis que je veoie,
Au joli prael ou j'estoie,
La plus tres belle compaignie
Qu'oncques fust veue ne oïe.'

Dit du Vergier, ed. Tarbé, p. 14..

'Tant qu'il avint, qu'en une compaignie
Où il avait mainte dame jolie
Juene, gentil, joïeuse et envoisie
Vis, par Fortune,
(Qui de mentir à tous est trop commune),
Entre les autres l'une
Qui, tout aussi com li solaus la lune
Veint de clarté,
Avait-elle les autres sormonté
De pris, d'onneur, de grace, de biauté;' &c.

Fontaine Amoureuse (in Trial Forewords, p. 47).

These are, no doubt, the lines to which Tyrwhitt refers in his remarks on the present passage in a note to the last paragraph of the Persones Tale. Observe also how closely the fifth line of the latter passage answers to l. 812.

823. Is, which is; as usual. I propose this reading. That of the MSS. is harsh, viz. 'Than any other planete in heven.'

824. 'The seven stars' generally mean the planets; but, as the sun and moon and planets have just been mentioned, the reference may be to the well-known seven stars in Ursa Major commonly called Charles's Wain. In later English, the seven stars sometimes mean the Pleiades; see Pleiade in Cotgrave's French Dictionary, and G. Douglas, ed. Small, iii. 147. 15. The phrase is, in fact, ambiguous; see note to P. Plowman, C. xviii. 98.

831. Referring to Christ and His twelve apostles.

835-7. Resembles Le Roman de la Rose, 1689-91—

'Li Diex d'Amors, qui, l'arc tendu,
Avoit toute jor atendu
A moi poursivre et espier.'

849. Carole, dance round, accompanying the dance with a song. The word occurs in the Rom. de la Rose several times; thus at l. 747, we have :—

'Lors veissies carole aler,
Et gens mignotement baler'—

where the E. version has (l. 759)—

'Tho mightist thou karoles sene,
And folke daunce and mery bene.'

So in the same, l. 810—

'I wolde have karoled right fayn,
As man that was to daunce right blithe.'

Dante uses the pl. carole (Parad. xxiv. 16) to express swift circular movements; and Cary quotes a comment upon it to the effect that 'carolæ dicuntur tripudium quoddam quod fit saliendo, ut Napolitani faciunt et dicunt.' He also quotes the expression 'grans dances et grans karolles' from Froissart, ed. 1559, vol. i. cap. 219. That it meant singing as well as dancing appears from the Rom. de la Rose, l. 731, where we have :—

'Ceste gent dont je vous parole
S'estoient pris a la carole,
Et une dame lor chantoit;'

where the Eng. version has (l. 743) :—

'This folk, of which I telle you soo,
Upon a karole wenten thoo.
A lady karolede hem;' &c.

858. Chaucer gives Virginia golden hair; Doct. Tale, C. T. 11971. Compare the whole description of the maiden in the E. version of the Rom. of the Rose, ll. 539-561.

861. Of good mochel, of an excellent size; mochel = size, occurs in P. Plowman, B. xvi. 182. Scan the line—

'Simpl' of | good moch | el nocht | to wyde.'

894. 'In reasonable cases, that involve responsibility.'

908. Somewhat similar are ll. 9-18 of the Doctoures Tale.

916. Scan by reading—They n' shóld' hav' fóund-e, &c.

917. A wikked signe, a sign, or mark, of wickedness.

919. Imitated from Machault's Remède de Fortune (see Trial Forewords, p. 48):—

'*Et sa gracieuse parole,
Qui n'estoit diverse ne folle,
Etrange, ne mal ordenee,
Hautaine, mès bien affrenee,
Cueillie à point et de saison,
Fondée sur toute raison,
Tant plaisant et douce à oïr,
Que chascun faisoit resjoir;*' &c.

Line 922 is taken from this word for word.

927. 'Nor that scorned less, nor that could better heal,' &c.

948. Here Whyte, representing the lady's name, is plainly a translation of Blaunche. The insertion of whyte in l. 905, in the existing authorities, is surely a blunder, and I therefore have omitted it. It anticipates the climax of the description, besides ruining the scansion of the line.

950. There is here some resemblance to some lines in G. Machault's Remède de Fortune (see Trial Forewords, p. 49):—

—'ma Dame, qui est clamée
De tous, sur toutes belle et bonne,
Chascun por droit ce nom li donne.'

957. For hippes, Bell prints lippes; a comic reading.

958. The old reading means—'I knew in her no other defect;'
which, as no defect has been mentioned, is absurd. Read no maner lak, i. e. no 'sort of defect in her (to cause) that all her limbs should not be proportionate.'

964. A common illustration. See Rom. de la Rose, 7448; Alexander and Dindimus, ll. 233-5. Duke Francesco Maria had, for one of his badges, a lighted candle by which others are lighted; with the motto Non degener addam, i. e. I will give without loss; see Mrs. Palliser's Historic Devices, p. 263.

973. The accents seem to fall on She and have, the e in wold-e being elided.

982. Liddell and Scott explain Gk. φοίνιξ as 'the fabulous Egyptian bird phoenix, first in Hesiod, Fragment 50. 4; then in Herodotus, ii. 73.' Vincent of Beauvais, Speculum Naturale, bk. 16. c. 74, refers us to Isidore, Ambrosius (lib. 5), Solinus, Pliny (lib. 10), and Liber de Naturis Rerum; see Solinus, Polyhistor. c. 33. 11; A. Neckam, De Naturis Rerum, c. 34. Philip de Thau describes it in his Bestiaire, l. 1089; see Popular Treatises on Science, ed. Wright, p. 113. 'The Phœnix of Arabia passes all others. Howbeit, I cannot tell what to make of him; and first of all, whether it be a tale or no, that there is neuer but one of them in all the world, and the same not commonly seen;' Holland, tr. of Pliny, bk. 10. c. 2.

Rom. de la Rose, 16179.

'Una est, quæ reparat, seque ipsa reseminet, ales;
Assyrii phœnica uocant.'—Ovid, Met. xv. 392.

987. Chaucer refers to Esther again; e.g. in his Merchant's Tale (C. T. 9245, 9618); Leg. of G. Women, prol. 250; and in the Tale of Melibee.

997. Cf. Vergil, Æn. i. 630: 'Haud ignara mali.'

1021. In balaunce, i. e. in a state of suspense. F. en balance; Rom. de la Rose, 13871, 16770.

1024. This sending of lovers on expeditions, by way of proving them, was in accordance with the manners of the time. Gower explains the whole matter, in his Conf. Amant. lib. 4 (ed. Pauli, ii. 56):—

'Forthy who secheth loves grace,
Where that these worthy women are,
He may nought than him-selve spare
Upon his travail for to serve,
Wherof that he may thank deserve, . . .
So that by londe and ek by ship
He mot travaile for worship
And make many hastif rodes,
Somtime in Pruse, somtime in Rodes,
And somtime into Tartarie,
So that these heralds on him crie
"Vailant! vailant! lo, where he goth!"' &c.

Chaucer's Knight (in the Prologue) sought for renown in Pruce, Alisaundre, and Turkye.

There is a similar passage in Le Rom. de la Rose, 18499–18526. The first part of Machault's Dit du Lion (doubtless the Book of the Lion of which Chaucer's translation is now lost) is likewise taken up with the account of lovers who undertook feats, in order that the news of their deeds might reach their ladies. Among the places to which they used to go are mentioned Alexandres, Alemaigne, Osteriche, Behaigne, Honguerie, Danemarche, Prusse, Poulaine, Cracoe, Tartarie, &c. Some even went 'jusqu'à l'Arbre sec, Ou li oisèl pendent au bec.' This alludes to the famous Arbre sec or Dry Tree, to reach which was a feat indeed; see Yule's edition of Marco Polo, i. 119; Maundeville, ed. Halliwell, p. 68; Mätzner, Sprachproben, ii. 185

As a specimen of the modes of expression then prevalent, Warton draws attention to a passage in Froissart, c. 81, where Sir Walter Manny prefaces a gallant charge upon the enemy with the words—'May I never be embraced by my mistress and dear friend, if I enter castle or fortress before I have unhorsed one of these gallopers.'

1028. Go hoodles, travel without even the protection of a hood; by way of bravado. Warton, Hist. Eng. Poet. § 18 (ed. Hazlitt, iii. 4), says of a society called the Fraternity of the Penitents of Love—'Their object was to prove the excess of their love, by shewing with an invincible fortitude and consistency of conduct . . . that they could bear extremes of heat and cold . . . It was a crime to wear fur on a day of the most piercing cold; or to appear with a hood, cloak, gloves or muff.'

What is meant by the drye se (dry sea) is disputed; but it matters little, for the general idea is clear. Mr. Brae, in the Appendix to his edition of Chaucer's Astrolabe (p. 101), has a long note on the present passage. Relying on the above quotation from Warton, he supposes hoodless to have reference to a practice of going unprotected in winter, and says that 'dry sea' may refer to any frozen sea. But it may equally refer to going unprotected in summer, in which case he offers us an alternative suggestion, that 'any arid sandy desert might be metaphorically called a dry sea.' The latter is almost a sufficient explanation; but if we must be particular, Mr. Brae has yet more to tell us. He says that, at p. 1044 (Basle edition) of Sebastian Munster's Cosmographie, there is a description of a large lake which was dry in summer. 'It is said that there is a lake near the city of Labac, adjoining the plain of Zircknitz [Czircknitz], which in winter-time becomes of great extent. . . . But in summer the water drains away, the fish expire, the bed of the lake is ploughed up, corn grows to maturity, and, after the harvest is over, the waters return, &c. The Augspourg merchants have assured me of this, and it has been since confirmed to me by Vergier, the bishop of Cappodistria' [Capo d' Istria]. The lake still exists, and is no fable. It is the variable lake of Czircknitz, which sometimes covers sixty-three square miles, and is sometimes dry. It is situate in the province of Krain, or Carniola; Labac is the modern Laybach or Laibach, N.E. of Trieste. See the articles Krain, Czirknitz in the Engl. Cyclopædia, and the account of the lake in The Student, Sept. 1869.

That Chaucer really referred to this very lake becomes almost certain, if we are to accept Mr. Brae's explanation of the next line. See the next note.

1029. Carrenare. Mr. Brae suggests that the reference is to the 'gulf of the Carnaro or Quarnaro in the Adriatic,' to which Dante alludes in the Inferno, ix. 113, as being noted for its perils. Cary's translation runs thus:—

'As where Rhone stagnates on the plains of Arles,
Or as at Pola, near Quarnaro's gulf,
That closes Italy and laves her bounds,
The place is all thick spread with sepulchres.'

It is called in Black's Atlas the Channel of Quarnërolo, and is the gulf which separates Istria from Croatia. The head of the gulf runs up towards the province of Carniola, and approaches within forty miles (at the outside) of the lake of Czirknitz (see note above). I suppose that Quarnaro may be connected with Carn-iola and the Carn-ic Alps, but popular etymology interpreted it to mean 'charnel-house,' from its evil reputation. This appears from the quotations cited by Mr. Brae; he says that the Abbé Fortis quotes a Paduan writer, Palladio Negro, as saying—'E regione Istriæ, sinu Palatico, quem nautæ carnarium vocitant;' and again, Sebastian Munster, in his Cosmographie, p. 1044 (Basle edition) quotes a description by Vergier, Bishop of Capo d' Istria—'par deça le gouffre enragé lequel on appelle vulgairement Carnarie, d'autantque le plus souvent on le voit agité de tempestes horribles; et là s'engloutissent beaucoup de navires et se perdent plusieurs hommes.' In other words, the true name Quarnaro or Carnaro was turned by the sailors into Carnario, which means in Italian 'the shambles;' see Florio's Dict., ed. 1598. This Carnario might become Careynaire or Carenare in Chaucer's English, by association with the M. E. careyne or caroigne, carrion. This word is used by Chaucer in the Kn. Tale, 1155 (Six-text, A. 2013), where the Ellesmere MS. has careyne, and the Cambridge and Petworth MSS. have careyn.

For myself, I am well satisfied with the above explanation. It is probable, and it suffices; and stories about this dry sea may easily have been spread by Venetian sailors. I may add that Maundeville mentions 'a gravely see' in the land of Prestre

John, 'that is alle gravele and sonde, with-outen any drope of watre ; and it ebbethe and flowethe in grete wawes, as other sees don : ' ed. Halliwell, p. 272. This curious passage was pointed out by Prof. Hales, in a letter in the Academy, Jan. 28, 1882, p. 65.

We certainly ought to reject the explanation given with great assurance in the Saturday Review, July, 1870, p. 143, col. 1, that the allusion is to the chain of mountains called the Carena or Charenal, a continuation of the Atlas Mountains in Africa. The writer says—'Leonardo Dati (A. D. 1470), speaking of Africa, mentions a chain of mountains in continuation of the Atlas, 300 miles long, "commonly called Charenal." In the fine chart of Africa by Juan de la Coxa (1500), this chain is made to stretch as far as Egypt, and bears the name of Carena. La Salle, who was born in 1398, lays down the same chain, which corresponds, says Santarem (Histoire de la Cosmographie, iii. 456), to the Kaphyn of Ptolemy. These allusions place it beyond doubt [?] that the drie see of Chaucer was the Great Sahara, the return from whence [sic] homewards would be by the chain of the Atlas or [sic] Carena.' On the writer's own shewing, the Carena was not the Atlas, but a chain stretching thence towards Egypt ; not an obvious way of returning home ! Whereas, if the 'dry sea' were the lake of Czirknitz, the obvious way of getting away from it would be to take ship in the neighbouring gulf of Quarnaro. And how could Chaucer come to hear of this remote chain of mountains ?

1034. 'But why do I tell you my story?' I. e. let me go on with it, and tell you the result.

1037. Again imitated from Machault's Remède de Fortune :—

'Car c'est mes cuers, c'est ma creance,
C'est mes desirs, c'est m'esperaunce,
C'est ma santé
C'est toute ma bonne éürté,
C'est ce qui me soustient en vie,' &c.

Line 1039 is closely translated. See Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 48.

1040. I here substitute lisse for goddesse, as in the authorities. The blunder is obvious ; goddesse clogs the line with an extra syllable, and gives a false rime such as Chaucer never makes. He rimes blisse with kisse, lisse, misse, and wisse. Thus in the Frankelein's Tale (Group F, l. 1237)—

'What for his labour and his hope of blisse,
His woful herte of penaunce had a lisse.'

Lisse is alleviation, solace, comfort; and l. 1040, as emended, fairly corresponds to Machault's 'C'est ce qui me soustient en vie,' i. e. it is she who sustains my life. The word goddesse was probably substituted for lisse, because the latter was obsolescent.

1041. I change hoolly hers into hers hoolly, and omit the following and. In the next line we have—By'r lord; as before (ll. 544, 651, 690).

1047. Leve (i. e. believe) is here much stronger than trowe, which merely expresses general assent.

1050. Read—'And to | behold | e th'alder | fayrest | e.' After beholde comes the cæsural pause, so that the final e in beholde does not count.

1057. The spelling Alcipiades occurs in the Roman de la Rose, 8981, where he is mentioned as a type of beauty—'qui de biauté avoit adès'—on the authority of 'Boece.' The ultimate reference is to Boethius, Cons. Phil. b. iii. pr. 8; ed. Morris, l. 2237—'the body of Alcibiades that was ful fayr.'

1058. Hercules is also mentioned in Le Rom. de la Rose, 9223, 9240. See also Ho. Fame, 1413.

1061. See note to l. 310.

1067. He, i. e. Achilles himself; see next note.

1069. Antilogus, a corruption of Antilochus; and again, Antilochus is a mistake for Archilochus, owing to the usual medieval confusion of proper names. For the story, see next note. Benoit and Guido both have Antilogus.

1070. Dares Frigijs, i. e. Dares Phrygius, or Dares of Phrygia. Chaucer again refers to him near the end of Troilus, and in Ho. Fame, 1467 (on which see the note). The works of Dares and Dictys are probably spurious. The reference is really to the very singular, yet popular, medieval version of the story of the Trojan war which was written by Guido of Colonna, and is entitled 'Historia destructionis Troie, per iudicem Guidonem de Columpna Messaniensem.' Guido's work was derived from the Roman de Troie, written by Benoit de Sainte-Maure; of which romance there is a late edition by M. Joly. In Mr. Panton's introduction to his edition of the Gest Historiale of the Destruction of Troy (Early Eng. Text Society), p. ix., we read—'From the exhaustive reasonings and proofs of Mons. Joly as to the person and age and country of his author, it is sufficiently manifest that the Roman de Troie appeared between the years 1175 and 1185. The translation, or version, of the Roman by Guido de Colonna was finished, as he tells us at the end of his Historia Troiana, in 1287. From one or other, or both, of these works, the various Histories, Chronicles, Romances, Gestes, and Plays of The Destruction of Troy, The Prowess and Death of Hector, The Treason of the Greeks, &c., were translated, adapted, or amplified, in almost every language of Europe.'

The fact is, that the western nations of Europe claimed connexion, through Æneas and his followers, with the Trojans, and repudiated Homer as favouring the Greeks. They therefore re-wrote the story of the Trojan war after a manner of their own; and, in order to give it authority, pretended that it was derived from two authors named Dares Phrygius (or Dares of Phrygia) and Dictys Cretensis (or Dictys of Crete). Dares and Dictys were real names, as they were cited in the time of Ælian (A.D. 230); and it was said that Dares was a Trojan who was killed by Ulysses. See further in Mr. Panton's introduction, as above; Morley's English Writers, ii. 432; and Warton, Hist. Eng. Poetry, ed. Hazlitt, ii. 127 (sect. 3). But Warton does not seem to have known that Guido mainly followed Benoit de Sainte-Maure.

The story about the death of Achilles is taken, accordingly, not from Homer but from Guido de Colonna and his predecessor Benoit. It may be found in the alliterative Geste Hystorial, above referred to (ed. Panton and Donaldson, p. 342). Hecuba invites Achilles and Archilochus to meet her in the temple of Apollo. When they arrive, they are attacked by Paris and a band of men and soon killed, though Achilles first slays seven of his foes with his own hand.

'There kyld was the kyng, and the knight bothe,
And by treason in the temple tymyt to dethe.'

Here 'the kyng' is Achilles, and 'the knyght' is Archilochus. It may be added that Achilles was lured to the temple by the expectation that he would there meet Polyxena, and be wedded to her; as Chaucer says in the next line. Polyxena was a daughter of Priam and Hecuba; she is alluded to in Shakespeare's Troilus, iii. 3. 208. According to Ovid, Metam. xiii. 448, she was sacrificed on the tomb of Achilles.

1075. Trewely is properly (though not always) trisyllabic. It was inserted after nay, because nede and gabbe were thought to be monosyllables. Even so, the 'amended' line is bad. It is all right if trewely be omitted; and I omit it accordingly.

1081. Penelope is accented on the first e and on o, as in French. Chaucer copies this form from the Roman de la Rose, l. 8694, as appears from his coupling it with Lucrece, whilst at the same time he borrows a pair of rimes. The French has :—

‘Si n’est-il mès nule Lucrece,
Ne Penelope nule en Grece.’

In the same passage, the story of Lucretia is told in full, on the authority of Livy, as here. The French has : ‘ce dit Titus Livius ;’ l. 8654. In the prologue to the Legend of Good Women, Chaucer alludes again to Penelope (l. 252), Lucrece of Rome (l. 257), and Polixene (l. 258) ; and he gives the Legend of Lucrece in full. He again alludes to Lucrece and Penelope in the lines preceding the Man of Lawes Prologue (Group B. 63, 75) ; and in the Frankelein’s Tale (Cant. Tales, 11717, 11755).

1085. This seems to mean—‘she (Blanche) was as good (as they), and (there was) nothing like (her), though their stories are authentic (enough).’ But the expression ‘nothing lyke’ is extremely awkward, and seems wrong. Nothing also means ‘not at all ;’ but this does not help us. In l. 1086, stories should perhaps be storie ; then her storie would be the story of Lucrece ; cf. l. 1087.

1087. ‘Any way, she (Blanche) was as true as she (Lucrece).’

1090. Yong is properly monosyllabic. We should therefore read—‘I was right yong, the soth to sey.’ In l. 1095 yong-e is the definite form.

1096. Accent besette (= besett’) on the prefix.

1108. Yit, still. Sit, sitteth ; pres. tense.

1113. I.e. you are like one who confesses, but does not repent.

1118. Achitofel, Ahitophel ; see 2 Sam. xvii.

1119. According to the Historia Troiana of Guido (see note to l. 1070) it was Antenor (also written Anthenor) who took away the Palladium and sent it to Ulysses, thus betraying Troy. See the Geste Hystoriale, p. 379 ; or see the extract from Caxton in my Specimens of English from 1394 to 1579, p. 89. Or see Chaucer’s Troilus, bk. iv ; not far from the beginning.

1121. Genelon ; also Genylon, as in The Monkes Tale, Group B, l. 3579 (see my Prioresses Tale, p. 45). He is mentioned again in the Nonne Preestes Tale (C. T. 15233) and in the Shipmannes Tale (C. T. 13124), where he is called ‘Genelon of France.’ Tyrwhitt’s note on Genelon in his Glossary is as follows : ‘One of Charlemagne’s officers, who, by his treachery, was the cause of the defeat at Roncevaux, the death of Roland, &c., for which he was torn to pieces by horses. This at least is the account of the author who calls himself

Archbishop Turpin, and of the Romancers who followed him; upon whose credit the name of Genelon or Ganelon was for several centuries a synonymous expression for the worst of traitors. See the Chanson de Roland, ed. Gautier; Dante, Inf. xxxii. 122, where he is called Ganellone; and Wheeler's Noted Names of Fiction. Cf. also the Roman de la Rose, l. 7902-4:—

'Qu'onques Karles n'ot por Rolant,
Quant en Ronceval mort reçut
Par Guenelon qui les deçut.'

1123. Rowland and Oliver, the two most celebrated of Charlemagne's Twelve Peers of France; see Roland in Wheeler's Noted Names of Fiction, and Ellis's Specimens of Early Eng. Metrical Romances, especially the account of the Romance of Sir Otuel.

1126. I supply right. We find right tho in C. T. 6398, 8420.

1133. Knew-e (disyllabic), might know; subjunctive mood.

1137. Accent thou. This and the next line are repeated, nearly, from ll. 743, 744. See also ll. 1305-6.

1139. I here insert the word sir, as in all the other places where the poet addresses the stranger.

1152-3. Cf. Rom. de la Rose, 2006-7:—

'Il est asses sires du cors
Qui a le cuer en sa commande.'

1159. For this, B. has thus. Neither this nor thus seems wanted; I therefore pay no regard to them.

The squire Dorigen, in the Franklein's Tale, consoled himself in the same way (C. T. 11259):—

'Of swich matere made he many layes,
Songes, compleintes, roundels, virelayes.'

1162. Tubal; an error for Jubal; see Gen. iv. 21. But the error is Chaucer's own, and is common. See Higden's Polychronicon, lib. iii. c. 11, ed. Lumby, iii. 202; Higden cites the following from Isidorus, lib. ii. c. 24:—'Quamvis Tubal de stirpe Cayn ante diluuium legatur fuisse musicæ inventor, . . tamen apud Græcos Pythagoras legitur ex malleorum sonitu et chordarum extensione musicam reperisse.' In Genesis, it is Jubal who 'was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ;' and Tubal-cain who was 'an instructor of every artificer in brass and iron.' The notion of the discovery of music by the former from the observation of the sounds struck upon the anvil of the latter is borrowed from the usual fable about Pythagoras. This fable is also given by Higden, who copies it from Macrobius. It will be found in the Commentary by Macrobius on the Somnium Scipionis, lib. ii. c. 1; and is to the effect that Pythagoras, observing some smiths at work, found that the tones struck upon their anvils varied according to the weights of the hammers used by them; and, by weighing these hammers, he discovered the relations to each other of the various notes in the gamut. The story is open to the objection that the facts are not so; the sound varies according to variations in the anvil or the thing struck, not according to the variation in the striking implement. However, Pythagoras is further said to have made experiments with stretched strings of varying length; which would have given him right results. See Mrs. Somerville's Connection of the Physical Sciences, sect. 16 and 17.

1169. Aurora. The note in Tyrwhitt's Glossary, s. v. Aurora, runs thus:—'The title of a Latin metrical version of several parts of the Bible by Petrus de Riga, Canon of Rheims, in the twelfth century. Leyser, in his Hist. Poet. Med. Ævi, pp. 692-736, has given large extracts from this work, and among others the passage which Chaucer seems to have had in his eye (p. 728):—

'Aure Jubal varios ferramenti notat ictus.

Pondera librat in his. Consona quæque facit.

Hoc inventa modo prius est ars musica, quamvis

Pythagoram dicant hanc docuisse prius.'

Warton speaks of 'Petrus de Riga, canon of Rheims, whose Aurora, or the History of the Bible allegorised, in Latin verses . . . was never printed entire.'—Hist. E. Poet. 1871, iii. 136.

1175. A song in six lines; compare the eleven-line song above, at l. 475. Lines 1175-6 rime with lines 1179-80.

1200. 'With (tones of) sorrow and by compulsion, yet as though I never ought to have done so.'

1206. Dismalle. See the article on Dismal in my Etym. Dict., and in the Supplement to it. Whatever be the etymology of this difficult word, it is tolerably certain that in this particular passage the phrase in the dismalle means 'on an unlucky day,' with reference to an etymology which connected dismal with the Latin dies malus. It has precisely the same sense in the Pystyll of Swete Susan, ed. Laing, l. 305. I still hold that we cannot derive dismal immediately from the Lat. dies malus, but it is now known that there really was an O. F. phrase dis mal (=Lat. dies mali, plural) in use in Anglo-French. The usual

O. F. form for 'day'—is di (= Lat. diem), still preserved in F. Mar-di, O. F. di-mars (Godefroy); the form dis is scarce (except in the plural), but we find 'fu clers li dis,' i. e. the day was clear; see Di in Godefroy, and dis in Bartsch, Chrestomathie Française.

We can now see the connection with the next line. The whole sentence means: 'I think it must have been in the evil days (i. e. on an unlucky day), such as were the days of the ten plagues of Egypt;' and the allusion is clearly to the so-called dies Ægyptiaci, or unlucky days; and woundes is merely a rather too literal translation of Lat. plaga, which we generally translate by plague. In Vincent of Beauvais, Speculum Naturale, lib. xv. c. 83, we find:—'In quolibet mense sunt duo dies, qui dicuntur Ægyptiaci, quorum unus est a principio mensis, alter a fine.' He goes on to shew how they are calculated, and says that, in January, the Egyptian days are the 1st, and the 7th from the end, i. e. the 25th; and he expressly refers the name Ægyptiaci to the plagues of Egypt, which (as some said) took place on Egyptian days; for it was asserted that there were minor plagues besides the ten. See also Brand's Pop. Antiquities, ed. Ellis, from which I extract the following. Barnabe Googe thus translates the remarks of Naogeorgus on this subject [of days]:—

'But some of them Egyptian are, and full of jeopardce,
And some again, beside the rest, both good and luckie bee.'

Brand (as above), ii. 45.

'The Christian faith is violated when, so like a pagan and apostate, any man doth observe those days which are called Ægyptiaci,' &c.—Melton's Astrologaster, p. 56; in Brand, ii. 47. 'If his Journey began unawares on the dismal day, he feares a mischiefe;' Bp. Hall, Characters of Virtues and Vices; in Brand, ii. 48. 'Alle that take hede to dysmal dayes, or use nyce observaunces in the newe moone,' &c.; Dialogue of Dives and Pauper (1493); in Brand, i. 9. Compare also the following:—

'Her disemale daies, and her fatal houres;'

Lydgate, Storie of Thebes, pt. iii (ed. 1561, fol. 370).

In the Pistil of Swete Susan (Laing's Anc. Pop. Poetry of Scotland), l. 305, Daniel reproves one of the elders in these terms:—

'Thou hast i-be presedent, the people to steere,
Thou dotest now on thin olde tos, in the dismale.'

In Langtoft's Chronicle, l. 477 (in Wright's Polit. Songs, p. 303), in Baliol is attacked in some derisive verses, which conclude thus:—'Rede him at ride in the dismale;' i. e. advise him to ride on an unlucky day. Many more illustrations might be given.

The consequence of 'proposing' on an unlucky day was a refusal; see l. 1243.

1208. A priest who missed words in chanting a service was called an overskipper, overleper, forskipper, or overhipper; see my note to P. Plowman, C. xiv. 123.

1219. Similarly, Troilus was reduced to saying—

'Mercy, mercy, O my swete herte!'—Troil. iii. 98.

1234. 'Unless I am dreaming,' i. e. unintentionally.

1246. Cassandra. The prophetic lamentation of Cassandra over the impending fate of Troy is given in the alliterative Geste Hystoriale (E. E. T. S.), p. 88; from Guido de Colonna; cf. Vergil, Æn. ii. 246.

1248. Chaucer treats Ilion as if it were different from Troye; cf. Nonne Prestes Tale, 535 (C. T. 15360). He merely follows Guido de Colonna and others, who made Ilion the name of the citadel of Troy; see further in note to Ho. of Fame, l. 158.

1305-6. Repeated from ll. 743, 744. Cf. ll. 1137-8.

1309. Imitated in Spenser's Daphnida, 184. The Duchess Blanche died Sept. 12, 1369. The third great pestilence lasted from July to September in that year.

1314. King, i. e. Edward III; see note to l. 368.

1318. The long castle here referred to does not mean Windsor Castle, where Edward III. frequently resided, but was a castle seen in a dream. There can be no doubt that (as the Bishop of Oxford has kindly suggested to me) there is here a very significant play upon words. Long-castel was an occasional pronunciation of Lancaster (see Barbour's Bruce, xvii. 852), being in fact a popular variant of Lon-castel, the castle on the Lon or Lune; cf. Lons-dale. In the phrase with walles whyte, there is reference to Blanche. And in l. 1319, a riche hil refers to the title Earl of Richmond (formerly spelt Richemound) borne by John of Gaunt. Richmond, at this date, always means Richmond in Yorkshire, as the name of Richmond was not conferred upon Sheen, in Surrey, till the time of Henry VII.

1322. Belle, i. e. bell of a clock, which rang out the hour. This bell, half heard in the dream, seems to be meant to be real. If so, it struck midnight; and Chaucer's chamber must have been within reach of its sound.

IV. THE COMPLAINT OF MARS.

For general remarks on this poem, see the Preface.

By consulting ll. 13 and 14, we see that the whole of this poem is supposed to be uttered by a bird on the 14th of February, before sunrise. Lines 1-28 form the proem; the rest give the story of Mars and Venus, followed by the Complaint of Mars at l. 155. The first 22 stanzas are in the ordinary 7-line stanza. The Complaint is very artificial, consisting of an Introductory Stanza, and five Terns, or sets of three stanzas, making sixteen stanzas of nine lines each, or 144 lines. Thus the whole poem has 298 lines.

Each tern is occupied with a distinct subject, which I indicate by headings, viz. Devotion to his Love; Description of a Lady in an anxiety of fear and woe; the Instability of Happiness; the story of the Brooch of Thebes; and An Appeal for Sympathy. A correct appreciation of these various 'movements' of the Complaint makes the poem much more intelligible.

1. Foules. The false reading lovers was caught from l. 5 below. But the poem opens with a call from a bird to all other birds, bidding them rejoice at the return of Saint Valentine's day. There is an obvious allusion in this line to the common proverb—'As fain as fowl of a fair morrow,' which is quoted in the Kn. Tale, 1579, in P. Plowman, B. x. 153, and is again alluded to in the Can. Yeom. Tale, Group G, l. 1342; see notes to my edition of the Man of Lawes Tale, p. 199. In l. 3, the bird addresses the flowers, and finally, in l. 5, the lovers.

2. Venus, the planet, supposed to appear as a morning-star, as it sometimes does.

Rowes, streaks or rays of light, lit. rows. In the Complaint of the Black Knight, l. 596, Lydgate uses the word of the streaks of light at eventide—'And while the twilight and the rowes rede Of Phebus light', &c. Also in Lydgate's Troy-Book, quoted by Warton, Hist. E. Poetry, 1871, iii. 84:—'Whan that the rowes and the rayes rede Estward to us full early gonnen sprede.' Hence the verb rowen, to dawn; P. Plowm. C. ii. 114, xxi. 28; see my Notes to P. Plowman. Tyrwhitt's Glossary ignores the word.

3. For day, Bell's edition has May! The month is February.

4. Uprist, upriseth. But in Kn. Tale, 193, uprist-e (with final e) is the dat. case of a sb.

7. The final e in sonn-e occurs at the cæsural pause; candle is pronounced nearly as candl'. The sun is here called the sandle of Ielosye, i. e. torch or light that discloses cause for jealousy, in allusion to the famous tale which is the foundation of the whole poem, viz. how Phœbus (the Sun) discovered the amour between Mars and Venus, and informed Vulcan of it, rousing him to jealousy; which Chaucer doubtless obtained from his favourite author Ovid (Metam. bk. iv). See the description of 'Phebus,' with his 'torche in honde' in ll. 27, 81-84 below. Gower also, who quotes Ovid expressly, has the whole story; Conf. Amant. ed. Pauli, ii. 149. The story first occurs in Homer, Odys. viii. And cf. Statius, Theb. iii. 263-316; Chaucer's Kn. Tale, 1525, &c.

8. Blewe; 'there seems no propriety in this epithet; it is probably a corruption;' Bell. But it is quite right; in M. E., the word is often applied to the colour of a wale or stripe caused by a blow, as in the phrase 'beat black and blue;' also to the gray colour of burnt out ashes, as in P. Plowman, B. iii. 97; also to the colour of lead; 'as blo as led,' Miracle-Plays, ed. Marriott, p. 148. 'Ashen-gray' or 'lead-coloured' is not a very bad epithet for tears:—

'And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles streamed.' Shak. Lucrece, 1586.

9. Taketh, take ye. With seynt Iohn, with St. John for a surety; borwe being in the dat. case; see note to Squi. Tale, 596, in my edition of the Prioresses Tale, p. 222. It occurs also in the Kingis Quair, st. 23; Blind Harry's Wallace, p. 224; &c.

13. Seynt Valentyne; Feb. 14. See note to Sect. V. l. 309.

21. Cf. 'And everiche of us take his aventure;' Kn. Tale, 328.

25. See note to line 7 above; and cf. Troilus, iii. 1450-70:—
'O cruel day,' &c.

29. In the Proem to Troilus, bk. iii, st. 1, Chaucer places Venus in the third heaven; that is, he begins to reckon from the earth outwards, the spheres being, successively, those of the Moon, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn; see the description of the planets in Gower's Confessio Amantis, bk. vii. So also, in Troilus, v. 1821, by the seventh sphere he means the outermost sphere of Saturn. But in other poems he adopts the more common ancient mode, of reckoning the spheres in the reverse order, taking Saturn first; in which case Mars comes third. In this he follows Macrobius, who, in his Commentary on the Somnium Scipionis, lib. i. c. 19, has:—'A sphæra Saturni, quæ est prima de septem,' &c.; see further on this borrowing from Macrobius in the note to l. 69. The same mode of reckoning places Venus in the fifth sphere, as in Lenvoy to Scogan, l. 9. In the curious manual of astronomy called The Shepherds Kalendar (pr. in 1604) we find, in the account of Mars, the following: 'The planet of Mars is called the God of battel and of war, and he is the third planet, for he raigneth next vnder the gentle planet of Jupiter . . . And Mars goeth about the twelue signes in two years.' The account of Venus has:—'Next after the Sun raigneth the gentle planet Venus, . . and she is lady ouer all louers: . . and her two signes is Taurus and Libra . . . This planet Venus runneth in twelue months ouer the xii. signes.' Also:—'Next under Venus is the faire planet Mercury . . and his principall signes be these: Gemini is the first . . and the other signe is Virgo,' &c. See Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 121.

Hence the 'third heaven's lord' is Mars; and Chaucer tells us, that by virtue of his motion in his orbit (as well as by desert) he had won Venus. That is, Venus and Mars were seen in the sky very near each other. We may explain wonne by 'approached.'

36. At alle, in any and every case. There is a parallel passage to this stanza in Troilus, bk. iii. st. 4 of the Proem.

38. Talle, obedient, docile, obsequious. See the account of this difficult word in my Etym. Dictionary, s. v. tall.

42. Scourging, correction. Compare the phr. under your yerde; Parl. Foules, 640, and the note. I see no reason for suspecting the reading.

49. 'Unless it should be that his fault should sever their love.'

51. Loking, aspect; a translation of the Latin astrological term aspectus. They regard each other with a favourable aspect.

54. Her nexte paleys, the next palace (or mansion), which belonged to Venus. In astrology, each planet was said to have two mansions, except the sun and moon, which had but one apiece. A mansion, or house, or palace, is that Zodiacal sign in which, for some imaginary reason, a planet was supposed to be peculiarly at home. (The whole system is fanciful and arbitrary.) The mansions of Venus were said to be Taurus and Libra; those of Mars, Aries and Scorpio; and those of Mercury, Gemini and Virgo. See the whole scheme in my edition of Chaucer's Astrolabe, p. lvi. The sign here meant is Taurus (cf. l. 86); and the arrangement was that Mars should 'glide' or pass out of the sign of Aries into that of Taurus, which came next, and belonged specially to Venus.

55. A-take, overtaken; because the apparent motion of Venus is swifter than that of Mars. This shews that Mars was, at first, further advanced than Venus along the Zodiac.

61. Actually repeated in the Nonne Prestes Tale, l. 340:—
‘For whan I see the beaute of your face.’ Compare also l. 62 with the same, l. 342; and l. 63 with the same, l. 350.

69. That is, the apparent motion of Venus was twice as great as that of Mars. Chaucer here follows Macrobius, Comment. in Somnium Scipionis, lib. i. ch. 19, who says:—‘Rursus tantum a love sphaera Martis recedit, ut eundem cursum biennio peragat. Venus autem tanto est regione Martis inferior, ut ei annus satis sit ad zodiacum peragrandum;’ that is, Mars performs his orbit in two years, but Venus in one; accordingly, she moves as much in one day as Mars does in two days. Mars really performs his orbit in rather less than two years (about 687 days), and Venus in less than one (about 225 days), but Chaucer’s statement is sufficiently near to facts, the apparent motion of the planets being variable.

71. This line resembles one in the Man of Lawes Tale, Group B, 1075:—‘And swich a blisse is ther bitwix hem two;’ and ll. 71, 72 also resemble the same, ll. 1114, 1115:—

‘Who can the pitous Ioye tellen al
Bitwix hem thre, sin they ben thus ymette?’

73. I here substitute a line, made up out of half-lines from Troilus.

81. Phebus here passes the palace-gates; in other words, the sun enters the sign of Taurus, and so comes into Venus’ chamber, within her palace. Cf. note to l. 54.

In Chaucer’s time, the sun entered Taurus on the twelfth of April; see Fig. 1 in my edition of Chaucer’s Astroliabe. This is actually mentioned below, in l. 139.

84. Knokkedden, knocked at the door, i. e. demanded admission.

86. That is, both Mars and Venus are now in Taurus. The entry of Venus is noticed in l. 72.

89. The latter syllable of Venus comes at the cæsural pause. But the scansion would be mended by omitting nigh.

96. In the Shepheards Kalendar, Mars is said to be ‘hot and dry;’ and Venus to be ‘moist and colde.’ Thus Mars was supposed to cause heat, and Venus to bring rain. The power of Venus in causing rain is fully alluded to in Lenvoy to Scogan, st. 2.

100. Girt, short for girdeth; not girte, pt. t.
104. Nearly repeated in Kn. Tale, 1091:—'Ne may with Venus holde champartye.'
105. Bad her fleen, bade her flee; because her motion in her orbit was faster than his. Cf. L. 112.
107. 'In the palace (Taurus) in which thou wast disturbed.'
111. Stremes, beams, rays; for the eyes of Mars emitted streams of fire (L. 95). Venus is already half past the distance to which Mars's beams extend. Obscure and fanciful.
113. Cylenius, Cyllenius, i.e. Mercury, who was born on Mount Cyllene in Arcadia; Vergil, Æn. viii. 139. Tour, tower; another word for mansion. The tower of Cyllenius, or mansion of Mercury, is the sign Gemini; see note to L. 29. Venus passes out of Taurus into the next sign Gemini. 'The sign Gemini is also domus Mercurii, so that when Venus fled into "the tour" of Cyllenius, she simply slipped into the next door to her own house of Taurus, leaving poor Mars behind to halt after her as he best might;' A. E. Brae, in Notes and Queries, 1st Series, iii. 235.
114. Voide, solitary; Mars is left behind in Taurus. Besides (according to L. 116) there was no other planet in Gemini at that time.

117. But litil myght. A planet was supposed to exercise its greatest influence in the sign which was called its exaltation; and its least influence in that which was called its depression. The exaltation of Venus was in Pisces; her depression, in Virgo. She was now in Gemini, and therefore halfway from her exaltation to her depression. So her influence was slight, and waning.

119. A cave. In L. 122 we are told that it stood only two paces within the gate, viz. of Gemini. The gate or entrance into Gemini is the point where the sign begins. By paces we must understand degrees; for the F. word pas evidently represents the Lat. gradus. Venus had therefore advanced to a point which stood only two degrees within (or from the beginning of) the sign. In plain words, she was now in the second degree of Gemini, and there fell into a cave, in which she remained for a natural day, that is (taking her year to be of nearly the same length as the earth's year) for the term during which she remained within that second degree. Venus remained in the cave as long as she was in that second degree of the sign; - from the moment of entering it to the moment of leaving it.

A natural day means a period of twenty-four hours, as distinguished from the artificial day, which was the old technical name for the time from sunrise to sunset. This Chaucer says plainly, in his Treatise on the Astrolabe, pt. ii. § 7, l. 12—'the day natural, that is to seyn 24 hours.'

We thus see that the cave here mentioned is a name for the second degree of the sign Gemini.

This being so, I have no doubt at all, that cave is here merely a translation of the Latin technical astrological term puteus. In Vincent of Beauvais, Speculum Naturale, lib. xv. c. 42, I find :— 'Et in signis sunt quidam gradus, qui dicuntur putei; cum fuerit planeta in aliquo istorum, dicitur esse in puteo, vt 6 gradus Arietis, et 11, etc.' There are certain degrees in the signs called putei; and when a planet is in one of these, it is said to be in puteo; such degrees, in Aries, are the 6th, 11th, &c. Here, unfortunately, Vincent's information ceases; he refers us, however, to Alcabitius.

Alcabitius (usually Alchabitius), who should rather be called Abd-el-Aziz, was an Arabian astrologer who lived towards the middle of the 10th century. His treatise on judicial astrology was translated into Latin by Johannes Hispalensis in the thirteenth century. This translation was printed at Venice, in quarto, in 1481, 1482, and 1502; see Didot, Nouv. Biograph. Universelle.

I found a copy of the edition of 1482 in the Cambridge University Library, entitled Libellus ysagogicus abdilazi .i. serui gloriosi dei. qui dicitur alchabitius ad magisterium iudiciorum astrorum: interpretatus a ioanne hispalensi. At sign. a 7, back, I found the passage quoted above from Vincent, and a full list of the putei. The putei in the sign of Gemini are the degrees numbered 2, 12, 17, 26, 30. After this striking confirmation of my conjecture, I think no more need be said.

But I may add, that Chaucer expressly mentions 'Alkabucius' by name, and refers to him; Treat. on Astrolabe, i. 8. 9. The passage which he there quotes occurs in the same treatise, sign. a 1, back¹.

120. Derk, dark. I think it is sufficient to suppose that this word is used, in a purely astrological sense, to mean inauspicious; and the same is true of l. 122, where Venus remains under this sinister influence as long as she remained in the ill-omened second degree of Gemini. There is no need to suppose that the planet's light was really obscured.

129. The Fairfax MS. and some editions have the false reading sterre. As Mars was supposed to complete his orbit (360 degrees) in two years (see note to l. 69), he would pass over one degree of it in about two days. Hence Mr. Brae's note upon this line, as printed in Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 121:—'The mention of dayes two is so specific that it cannot but have a special meaning. Wherefore, either sterre is a metonym for degree; or which is more probable, Chaucer's word was originally steppe (gradus), and was miscopied sterre by early scribes.' Here Mr. Brae was exceedingly near the right solution; we now see that sterre was miswritten (not for steppe, but) for steyre, by the mere alteration of one letter. If the scribe was writing from dictation, the mistake was still more easily made, since steyre and sterre would sound very nearly alike, with the old pronunciation. As to steyre, it is the exact literal translation of Lat. gradus, which meant a degree or stair. Thus Minsheu's Dict. has:—'a Staire, Lat. gradus.' This difficulty, in fact, is entirely cleared up by accepting the reading of the majority of the MSS.

131. He foloweth her, i. e. the motions of Mars and Venus were in the same direction; neither of them had a 'retrograde' motion, but advanced along the signs in the direction of the sun's apparent motion.

133. Brennyng, burning in the fire of the sun's heat.

137. 'Alas; that my orbit has so wide a compass;' because the orbit of Mars is so very much larger than that of Venus. Still larger was the orbit of Saturn; Kn. Tale, 1596. Spere is sphere, orbit.

139. Twelfth, twelfth. The false reading twelve arose from misreading the symbol '.xij.,' which was used as an abbreviation both for twelfth and for twelve. See Furnivall, Trial Forewords, p. 88. As a fact, it was on the 12th day of April that the sun entered Taurus; see note to l. 81.

144. Cylenius, Mercury; as in l. 113. Chevauche, equestrian journey, ride. Used ludicrously to mean a feat of horsemanship in l. 50 of the Manciple's Prologue. The closely related word chivachie, in Prologue to C. T. 85, means a military (equestrian) expedition. In the present case it simply means 'swift course,' with reference to the rapid movement of Mercury, which completes its orbit in about 88 days. Thus the line means—'Mercury, advancing in his swift course.'

145. Fro Venus valance. This is the most difficult expression in the poem, but I explain it by reading fallance, which of course is only a guess. I must now give my reasons, as every preceding commentator has given up the passage as hopeless.

The readings of the MSS. all point back to a form valance (as in Ar.) or valauns (as in Tn.); whence the other readings, such as Valaunses, valanus (for valauns), balance, balauance, are all deduced, by easy corruptions. But, as no assignable sense has been found for valance, I can only suppose that it is an error for falance or fallance. I know of no instance of its use in English, but Godefroy gives examples of fallance and falence in O. French, though the usual spelling is faillance. The change from faillance or fallance to vallance or valance would easily be made by scribes, from the alliterative influence of the initial letter of the preceding word Venus. Moreover, we have v for f in E. vixen (for fixen), and in Southern English generally. Even in a Chaucer MS., the curious spelling vigour or vigur for figure occurs over and over again; see my edition of Chaucer's Astrolabe, pp. viii, 62.

The sense of fallance or faillance is failure, defection. Cotgrave gives us: 'Faillance, f. a defection, failing, decaying.' The numerous examples in Godefroy shew that it was once a common word. It represents a Lat. fem. fallentia*.

I hold it to be the exact literal translation into French of the Lat. technical (astrological) term detrimentum. In my edition of Chaucer's Astrolabe, p. lxxvii., I have already explained that every planet had either one or two mansions, and one or two detrimenta. The detrimentum is the sign of the Zodiac opposite to the planet's mansion. The mansions of Venus were Taurus and Libra (see note to l. 54); and her detrimenta were Scorpio and Aries. The latter is here intended; so that, after all, this apparently mysterious term 'Venus valance' is nothing but another name for the sign Aries, which, from other considerations, must necessarily be here intended.

If the correction of valance to fallance be disallowed, I should still plead that valance might be short for avalance (mod. E. avalanche, literally descent), just as every reader of our old literature knows that vale is a common form instead of avale, to descend or lower, being the verb from which avalance is derived. This valance (= avalance) is a fair translation of the Lat. occasus, which was an alternative name for the sign called detrimentum; see my edition of the Astrolabe, as above. The result would then be just the same as before, and would bring us back to the sign of Aries again.

But we know that Aries is meant, from purely astronomical considerations. For the planet Mercury is always so near the sun that it can never have a greater elongation, or angular distance, from it than 29° , which is just a little less than the length of a sign, which was 30° . But, the sun being (as said) in the 1st degree of Taurus on the 12th of April, it is quite certain that Mercury was either in Taurus or in Aries. Again, as there was no mention of Mercury being in Taurus when Mars and Venus were there and were undisturbed (see note to l. 114), we can only infer that Mercury was then in Aries.

Moreover, he continued his swift course, always approaching and tending to overtake the slower bodies that preceded him, viz. the Sun, Mars, and Venus. At last, he got so near that he was able to 'see' or get a glimpse of his mansion Gemini, which was not so very far ahead of him. This I take to mean that he was swiftly approaching the end of Aries.

We can now tell the exact position of all the bodies on the 14th of April, two days after the sun had burst into Taurus, where he had found Mars and Venus at no great distance apart. By that time, Venus was in the second degree of Gemini, Mars was left behind in Taurus, the sun was in the third degree of Taurus, and Mercury near the end of Aries, sufficiently near to Venus to salute and cheer her with a kindly and favourable aspect.

I will add that whilst the whole of the sign of Aries was called the occasus or detrimentum of Venus, it is somewhat curious that the last ten degrees of Aries (degrees 20 to 30) were called the face of Venus. Chaucer uses this astrological term face elsewhere with reference to the first ten degrees of Aries, which was 'the face of Mars' (see my note to Squieres Tale, l. 47). Hence another possible reading is Fro Venus facē mighte, &c.

In any case, I think we are quite sufficiently near to Chaucer's meaning; especially as he is, after all, only speaking in allegory, and there is no need to strain his words to suit rigid astronomical calculations.

I only give this as a guess, for what it is worth; I should not care to defend it.

150. Remembreth me, comes to my memory; the nom. case being the preceding part of the sentence. Me, by the way, refers to the extraordinary bird who is made responsible for the whole poem, with the sole exception of lines 13 and 14, and half of l. 15. The bird tells us he will say and sing the Complaint of Mars, and afterwards take his leave.

155. We now come to the part of the poem which exhibits great metrical skill. In order to shew the riming more clearly, I have 'set back' the 3rd, 6th, and 7th lines of each stanza. Each stanza exhibits the order of rimes aabaabbcc; i.e. the first rime belongs to lines 1, 2, 4, 5; the second rime to lines 3, 6, 7; and the last rime to lines 8 and 9. The first stanza forms an Introduction or Proem. The rest form five Terns, or sets of three stanzas, as has been already said. Each Tern has its own subject, quite separate from the rest.

The first line can only be scanned by reading The ordre as Th'ordr' (monosyllable).

164. The first Tern expresses his Devotion to his love's service. I gave my love, he says, to her for ever; She is the very source of all beauty; and now I will never leave her, but will die in her service.

170. That is—who ever approaches her, but obtains from her no favour, loses all joy in love, and only feels its bitterness.

176. Men, people; men hit selle = it is sold. This parenthetical ejaculation is an echo to that in l. 168.

185. Hette, promised (incorrectly). The M. E. haten, to promise, is a complicated verb; see the excellent examples in Mätzner's Dictionary, and in Grein's A. S. Dict., s. v. hátan. It had two past tenses; the first heet, a strong form, meaning 'promised, commanded,' answering to A. S. héht and Goth. haihait; and the second hette, hatte, a weak form, meaning 'I was named,' answering to A. S. hátte (used both as a present and a past tense without change of form) and to the Goth. present passive haitada. Chaucer has here used the intransitive weak past tense with the sense of the transitive strong one; just as he uses lernen with the sense of 'teach.' The confusion was easy and common.

190. But grace be, unless favour be shewn me. Se, shall see; present as future.

191. Tern 2. Shall I complain to my lady? Not so; for she is in distress herself. Lovers may be as true as new metal, and yet suffer. To return: my lady is in distress, and I ought to mourn for her, even though I knew no other sorrow.

197. 'But if she were safe, it would not matter about me.'

205. 'They might readily leave their head as a pledge,' i.e. might devote themselves to death.

206. Horowe, foul, unclean, filthy, scandalous; pl. of horow, an adj. formed from the A. S. sb. horu (gen. horwes), filth; cf. A. S. horweht, filthy, from the same stem horw-. The M. E. adj. also takes the form hori, hory, from A. S. horig, an adj.

formed from the closely related A. S. sb. horh, horg, filth. As the M. E. adj. is not common, I give some examples (from Mätzner). 'Hit nis bote a hori felle,' 'it is only a dirty skin;' Early Eng. Poems, ed. Furnivall, p. 19, l. 13. 'Thy saule . . thorough fulthe of synne Sone is mad wel hory wythinne,' thy soul, by filth of sin, is soon made very foul within; Reliquiæ Antiquæ, ii. 243. 'Eny uncleene, whos touchynge is hoory,' any unclean person, whose touch is defiling; Wyclif, Levit. xxii. 5. 'Still used in Devon, pronounced horry;' Halliwell.

218. Tern 3. Why did the Creator institute love? The bliss of lovers is so unstable, that in every case lovers have more woes than the moon has changes. Many a fish is mad after the bait; but when he is hooked, he finds his penance, even though the line should break.

219. Love other companye, love or companionship.

229. Read put'th; as a monosyllable.

245. Tern 4. The brooch of Thebes had this property, that every one who saw it desired to possess it; when he possessed it, he was haunted with constant dread; and when he lost it, he had a double sorrow in thinking that it was gone. This was due, however, not to the brooch itself, but to the cunning of the maker, who had contrived that all who possessed it should suffer. In the same way, my lady was as the brooch; yet it was not she who caused me wo, but it was He who endowed her with beauty.

The story referred to occurs in the account of the war between Eteocles and Polynices for the possession of Thebes, as related in the Thebaid of Statius.

In the second book of that poem, the story relates the marriage of Polynices and Tydeus to the two daughters of Adrastus, king of Argos. The marriage ceremony was marred by inauspicious omens, which was attributed to the fact that Argia, who was wedded to Polynices, wore at the wedding a magic bracelet (here called a brooch) which had belonged to Harmonia, a daughter of Mars and Venus, and wife of Cadmus. This ornament had been made by Vulcan, in order to bring an evil fate upon Harmonia, to whom it was first given, and upon all women who coveted it or wore it. See the whole story in Statius, Thebais, ii. 265; or in Lewis's translation of Statius, ii. 313.

246. It must be remembered that great and magical virtues were attributed to precious stones and gems. See further in the note to Ho. of Fame, l. 1352.

259. Enfortuned hit so, endued it with such virtues. 'He that wrought it' was Vulcan; see note to l. 245.

262. Covetour, the one who coveted it. Nyce, foolish.

270. 'For my death I blame Him, and my own folly for being so ambitious.'

272. Tern 5. I appeal for sympathy, first to the knights who say that I, Mars, am their patron; secondly, to the ladies who should compassionate Venus their empress; lastly, to all lovers who should sympathise with Venus, who was always so ready to aid them.

273. Of my divisioun, born under my influence. The same word is used in the same way in Kn. Tale, 1166. Of course Mars was the special patron of martial knights.

280. 'That ye lament for my sorrow.'

293. Compleyneth her, lament for her.

298. 'Therefore display, on her behalf, some kindly feeling.'

The Complaint of Venus, which formerly used to be printed as a part of this poem, is really a distinct piece. See Sect. XVIII.

V. THE PARLEMENT OF FOULES.

TITLE. Gg. has Here begynyth the parlement of Foulys; Harl. has The Parlament of Foules; Tn. has The Parlement of Briddis; Trin. has Here foloweth the parlement of Byrdes reducyd to loue, &c. We also find, at the end of the poem, such notes as these: Gg. Explicit parliamentum Auium in die sancti Valentini tentum secundum Galfridum Chaucer; Ff. Explicit parliamentum Auium; Tn. Explicit tractatus de Congregacione volucrum die Sancti Valentini; and in MS. Arch. Seld. B. 24—Here endis the parliament of foulis Quod Galfride Chaucere.

1. Part of the first aphorism of Hippocrates is—'Ὁ βίος βραχύς, ἡ δὲ τέχνη μακρὴ.' This is often quoted in the Latin form—Ars longa, uita brevis. Longfellow, in his Psalm of Life, well renders it by—'Art is long, but life is fleeting.'

2. Several MSS. transpose hard and sharp; it is of small consequence.

3. Slit, the contracted form of slideth, i. e. passes away; cf. 'it slit away so faste,' Can. Yeom. Tale; C. T., Group G, l. 682. The false reading flit arose from mistaking a long s for f.

4. By, with respect to. In l. 7, wher = whether.

5. Evidently this disclaimer is a pretended one; the preceding stanza and ll. 13, 14 contradict it. So does l. 160. In this stanza we have an early example of Chaucer's humour, of which there are several instances below, as e. g. in ll. 567-570, 589, 599, 610, &c. Cf. Troilus, i. 15, where Chaucer again says he is no lover himself, but only serves Love's servants.

15. Cf. Prol. to Legend of Good Women, 29-39.

22. Men is here a weakened form of man, and is used as a singular sb., with the same force as the F. on or the G. man. Hence the vb. seith is in the singular. This construction is extremely common in Middle English. In ll. 23 and 25 com'th is monosyllabic.

31. Tullius, i. e. M. Tullius Cicero, who wrote a piece entitled Somnium Scipionis, which originally formed part of the sixth book of the De Republica. Warton (Hist. Eng. Poetry, ed. Hazlitt. iii. 65) remarks:—'Had this composition descended to posterity among Tully's six books De Republica, to the last of which it originally belonged, perhaps it would have been overlooked and neglected. But being preserved and illustrated with a prolix commentary by Macrobius, it quickly attracted the attention of readers who were fond of the marvellous, and with whom Macrobius was a more admired classic than Tully. It was printed [at Venice] subjoined to Tully's Offices, in [1470]. It was translated into Greek by Maximus Planudes, and is frequently [i. e. four times] quoted by Chaucer . . . Nor is it improbable that not only the form, but the first idea, of Dante's Inferno was suggested by this apologue.' The other allusions to it in Chaucer are in the Nonnes Prestes Tale, l. 303; Book of the Duchesse, 284; Ho. of Fame, 514. See also l. 111 below, where Macrobie is expressly mentioned. In the E. version of the Romance of the Rose, l. 7, he is called Macrobes.

Aurelius Theodosius Macrobius, about A. D. 400, not only preserved for us Cicero's Somnium Scipionis, but wrote a long commentary on it in two books, and a work called Saturnalia in seven books. The commentary is not very helpful, and discusses collateral questions rather than the dream itself.

32. Chaucer's MS. copy was, it appears, divided into seven chapters. A printed copy now before me is divided into nine chapters. As given in an edition of Macrobius printed in 1670, it is undivided. The treatise speaks, as Chaucer says, of heaven, hell, and earth, and men's souls.

35. The grete, the substance. Accordingly, in the next seven stanzas, we have a fair summary of the general contents of the Somnium Scipionis. I quote below such passages as approach most closely to Chaucer's text.

36. Scipioun, i.e. P. Cornelius Scipio Æmilianus Africanus Minor, the hero of the third Punic War. He went to Africa in B.C. 150 to meet Masinissa, King of Numidia, who had received many favours from Scipio Africanus Major in return for his fidelity to the Romans. Hence Masinissa received the younger Africanus joyfully, and so much was said about the elder Africanus that the younger one dreamt about him after the protracted conversation was over, and all had retired to rest. The younger Africanus was the grandson, by adoption, of the elder.

'Cum in Africam venissem, . . nihil mihi potius fuit, quam ut Masinissam convenirem . . Ad quem ut veni, complexus me senex collacrymavit. . . multisque verbis . . habitis, ille nobis consumptus est dies . . . me . . somnus complexus est . . mihi . . Africanus se ostendit ;' &c.

43. 'Ostendebat autem Carthaginem de excelso, et pleno stellarum . . loco . . . tu eris unus, in quo nitatur civitatis salus, &c. . . Omnibus qui patriam conservârint, adjuverint, auxerint, certum esse in cælo definitum locum, ubi beati ævo sempiterno fruuntur.'

50. 'Quæsivi tamen, viveretne ipse et Paullus pater et alii, quos nos extinctos arbitraremur. Immo vero, inquit, ii vivunt . . . vestra vero, quæ dicitur vita, mors est corpore laxati illum incolunt locum, quem vides. Erat autem is splendissimo candore inter flammæ circus elucens, quem vos, ut a Graiis accepistis, orbem lacteum nuncupatis.'

56. Galaxye, milky way ; see note to Ho. Fame, 936.

57. 'Stellarum autem globi terræ magnitudinem facile vincebant. Jam ipsa terra ita mihi parva visa est, &c. . . Novem tibi orbibus, vel potius globis, connexa sunt omnia . . . Hic, inquam, quis est, qui complet aures meas, tantus et tam dulcis sonus ? . . . impulsu et motu ipsorum orbium conficitur.'

59. The 'nine spheres' are the spheres of the seven planets (Moon, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn), that of the fixed stars, and the primum mobile ; see Chaucer's Astrolabe, ed. Skeat, Plate V, fig. 10.

61. This is an allusion to the so-called 'harmony of the spheres.' Chaucer makes a mistake in attributing this harmony to all of the nine spheres. Cicero plainly excludes the primum mobile, and says that, of the remaining eight spheres, two sound alike, so that there are but seven tones made by their revolution.

'Ille autem octo cursus, in quibus eadem vis est duorum, septem efficiunt distinctos intervallis sonos.' He proceeds to notice the peculiar excellence of the number seven. By the two that sounded alike, the spheres of Saturn and the fixed stars must be meant; in fact, it is usual to ignore the sphere of fixed stars, and consider only those of the seven planets. Macrobius, in his Commentary, lib. ii. c. 4, quite misses this point, and clumsily gives the same note to Venus and Mercury. Each planetary sphere, in its revolution, gives out a different note of the gamut, so that all the notes of the gamut are sounded; and the result is, that the 'music of the spheres' cannot be heard at all, just as the dwellers by the cataract on the Nile fail to hear the sound of its fall. 'Hoc sonitu oppletæ aures hominum obsurduerunt; nec est ullus hebetior sonus in vobis; sicut ubi Nilus ad illa, quæ Catadupa [καταδουποι] nominantur, præcipitat ex altissimis montibus, ea gens, quæ illum locum accolit, propter magnitudinem sonitus, sensu audiendi caret.' Macrobius tries to explain it all in his Commentary, lib. ii. c. 1-4. The fable arose from a supposed necessary connection between the number of the planets and the number of musical notes in the scale. It breaks down when we know that the number of the planets is more than seven. Moreover, modern astronomy has exploded the singular notion of revolving hollow concentric spheres, to the surface of which each planet was immoveably nailed. These 'spheres' have disappeared, and their music with them, except in poetry.

Shakespeare so extends the old fable as to give a voice to every star. See Merch. of Venice, v. 60:—

'There's not the smallest orb which thou behold'st,
But in his motion like an angel sings,' &c.

The notion of the music of the spheres was attributed to Pythagoras. It is denied by Vincent of Beauvais, Speculum Naturale, lib. xv. c. 32—Falsa opinio de concentu cæli. Vincent puts the old idea clearly—'Feruntur septem planetæ, et hi septem orbes (vt dicitur) cum dulcissima harmonia mouentur, ac suavissimi concentus eorum circumitione efficiuntur. Qui sonus ad aures nostras ideo non peruenit, quia vltra aerem fit:—a sufficient reason. He attributes the notion to the Pythagoreans and the Jews, and notes the use of the phrase 'concentum cæli' in Job xxxviii. 37, where our version has 'the bottles of heaven,' which the Revised Version retains. Cf. also—'Cum me laudarent simul astra matutina;' Job xxxviii. 7.

Near the end of Chaucer's Troilus, we have the singular passage:—

‘And ther he saw with ful avisement
The erratick sterres, herkening armonie
With sounes fulle of hevenes melodie;’ &c.

This passage, by the way, is a translation from Boccaccio, Teseide, xi. 1.

See also Longfellow's poem on the Occultation of Orion, where the poet (heretically but sensibly) gives the lowest note to Saturn, and the highest to the Moon; whereas Macrobius says the contrary; lib. ii. c. 4.

A. Neckam (De Naturis Rerum, lib. i. c. 15) seems to say that the sound of an eighth sphere is required to make up the octave.

64. ‘Sentio, inquit, te sedem etiam nunc hominum ac domum contemplari: quæ si tibi parva, ut est, ita videtur, hæc cælestia semper spectato; illa humana contemnito. . . Cum autem ad idem, unde semel profecta sunt, cuncta astra redierint, eandemque totius anni descriptionem longis intervallis retulerint, tum ille vere vertens annus appellari potest. . . Sermo autem omnis ille. . . obruitur hominum interitu, et oblivione posteritatis exstinguitur.’

The great or mundane year, according to Macrobius, Comment. lib. 2. c. 11, contained 15000 common years. In the Roman de la Rose, l. 17018, Jeun de Meun makes it 36,000 years long; and in the Complaint of Scotland, ed. Murray, p. 33, it is said, on the authority of Socrates, to extend to 37,000 years. It is not worth discussion.

71. ‘Ego vero, inquam, o Africane, siquidem bene meritis de patria quasi limes ad cæli aditum patet,’ &c. ‘Et ille, Tu vero enitere, et sic habeto, non esse te mortalem, sed corpus hoc. . . Hanc [naturam] tu exerce in optimis rebus; sunt autem optimæ curæ de salute patriæ: quibus agitatus et exercitatus animus velocius in hanc sedem et domum suam pervolabit.’

78. ‘Nam eorum animi, qui se corporis voluptatibus dediderunt, . . . corporibus elapsi circum terram ipsam volutantur; nec hunc in locum, nisi multis exagitati sæculis, revertentur.’ We have here the idea of purgatory; compare Vergil, Æn. vi.

80. Whirle aboute, copied from volutantur in Cicero; see last note. It is remarkable that Dante has copied the same passage, and has the word voltando; Inf. v. 31-8. Cf. ‘blown with restless violence round about The pendent world;’ Meas. for Meas. iii. 1. 125; and ‘The sport of winds;’ Milton, P. L. iii. 493.

85. Imitated from Dante, Inf. ii. 1-3. Cary's translation has—

'Now was the day departing, and the air,
Imbrowned with shadows, from their toils released
All animals on earth.'

90. 'I had what I did not want,' i. e. care and heaviness. 'And I had not what I wanted,' i. e. my desires. I do not think there is any particular personal reference, of which anything can be made. At the same time, the same idea is repeated, but in clearer language, in the 'Complaint to his Lady' (see Appendix, p. 215, ll. 47-49); and again, in the Complaint to Pity, ll. 99-104. It is copied from Boethius (see Addit. Note).

99. Chaucer discusses dreams elsewhere; see Ho. of Fame, 1-52; Nonne Prestes Tale, 76-336; Troil. v. 358. Macrobius, Comment. in Somn. Scipionis, lib. i. c. 3, distinguishes five kinds of dreams, giving the name ἐνύπνιον to the kind of which Chaucer here speaks. 'Est enim ἐνύπνιον quotiens oppressi animi corporisve sive fortunæ, qualis vigilantem fatigaverat, talem se ingerit dormienti: animi, si amator deliciis suis aut fruentem se videat aut carentem: . . . corporis, si . . . esuriens cibum aut potum sitiens desiderare, quærere, vel etiam invenisse videatur: fortunæ, cum se quis æstimat vel potentia vel magistratu aut augeri pro desiderio, aut exui pro timore.' But Chaucer also had in mind a passage from Claudian (see the Additional Note). Cf. Vincent of Beauvais, lib. xxvi. c. 62 and c. 63. And see the famous passage in Romeo and Juliet, i. 4. 53; especially ll. 70-88. The Roman de la Rose begins with remarks concerning dreams; and again, at l. 18564, there is a second passage on the same subject, with a reference to Scipio, and a remark about dreaming of things that occupy the mind (l. 18601). Similarly we find:—'Præterea dicit Auicenna quod magis somniat homo de his circa quæ sollicitus et attentus est magis;' Vincent of Beauvais, Spec. Nat. lib. xxvi. c. 46. And again:—'The fearfull dream, that they flye daunger; the couetous, that they imbrace riches; . . . the wrathfull, that they are fighting, killing, robbing and brauling; the carelesse, that they are piping, singing, whisteling, hawking, hunting, dauncing and such like.'—Batman upon Bartholome, ed. 1582, fol. 84.

109. Compare Dante, Inf. i. 83; which Cary translates—

'May it avail me, that I long with zeal
Have sought thy volume, and with love immense
Have conn'd it o'er. My master thou, and guide!'

III. 'Of which Macrobius recked (thought) not a little.' In fact, Macrobius concludes his commentary with the words—

'Vere igitur pronuntiandum est nihil hoc opere perfectius, quo universa philosophiæ continetur integritas.'

113. Cithærea, Cytherea, i. e. Venus; see Kn. Tale, 1357, 8.

114. In the Roman de la Rose, 15980, Venus speaks of her bow (F. arc) and her firebrand or torch (brandon).

117. 'As surely as I saw thee in the north-north-west.' He here refers to the planet Venus. As this planet is never more than 47° from the sun, the sun must have been visible to the north of the west point at sunset; i. e. the poem must have been written in the summer-time. The same seems to be indicated by l. 21 (the longe day), and still more clearly by ll. 85-88; Chaucer would hardly have gone to bed at sunset in the winter-time. It is true that he dreams about saint Valentine's day, but that is quite another matter. Curiously enough, the landscape seen in his dream is quite a summer landscape; see ll. 172, 184-210.

120. African, Africanus; as above.

122. Grene stone, mossy or moss-covered stone; an expression copied by Lydgate, Complaint of the Black Knight, l. 42.

Prof. Hales, in the Gent. Magazine, April, 1882, has an interesting article on 'Chaucer at Woodstock.' He shews that there was a park there, surrounded by a stone wall; and that Edward III. often resided at Woodstock, where the Black Prince was born. It is possible that Chaucer was thinking of Woodstock when writing the present passage. See the account of Woodstock Palace in Abbeys, Castles, &c. by J. Timbs; vol. ii. But I suspect that, after l. 120, we are introduced to sights that existed only in dreamland; just as in the Roman de la Rose, where we find, near the beginning, an allusion to Scipio's dream, and the following lines (129-131):—

'Quant j'oi ung poi avant alé
Si vi ung vergier grant et lé,
Tot clos d'ung haut mur bataillié;' &c.

125. On eyther halfe, on either side; to right and left.

127. Imitated from Dante, Inf. iii. 1; Cary's translation has—

'Through me you pass into the city of woe: . . .
Such characters, in colour dim, I mark'd
Over a portal's lofty arch inscribed.'

See also l. 134. The gate is the entrance into Love, which is to some a blessing, and to some a curse; see ll. 158, 159. Thus men gon is, practically, equivalent to 'some men go;' and so in l. 134. The idea is utterly different from that of the two gates in Vergil, Æn. vi. 893. The successful lover finds 'the well of Favour,' l. 129. The unsuccessful one encounters the deadly wounds caused by the spear (or dart) guided to his heart by Disdain and Power-to-harm (Daunger); for him, the opened garden bears no fruit, and the alluring stream leads him only to a fatal weir, wherein imprisoned fish are left lying dry.

Cf. 'As why this fish, and nat that comth to were;'

Troil. iii. 35.

140. 'Avoiding it is the only remedy.' This is only another form of a proverb which also occurs as 'Well fights he who well flies.' See Proverbs of Hending (in Spec. of English), l. 77; Owl and Nightingale, l. 176. Sir T. Wiat has—'The first eschue is remedy alone;'
Spec. of Eng. Part III. p. 235. It is probable that Chaucer took it from the Roman de la Rose, l. 16818, where it appears in the form—'Sol foir en est medicine.'
(O. F. foir = Lat. fugere).

141. All the MSS. have blak or blake; ed. 1561 has Asure. The alluring message (127-133) was written in gold; the forbidding one (134-140) in black.

142. A stounde, for a while (rightly); the reading astoned is to be rejected. The attitude is one of deliberation.

143. That oon, the one, the latter. But, in l. 145, that oon means the former.

148. An adamant was, originally, a diamond; then the name was transferred to the loadstone; lastly, the diamond was credited with the properties of the loadstone. Hence we find, at the end of ch. 14 of Mandeville's Travels, this remarkable experiment:—'Men taken the Ademand, that is the Schipmanes Ston, that drawethe the Nedle to him, and men leyn the Dyamand upon the Ademand, and leyn the Nedle before the Ademand; and yif the Dyamand be good and vertuous, the Ademand drawethe not the Nedle to him, whils the Dyamand is there present.' Cf. A. Neckam, De Naturis Rerum, lib. ii. c. 98, where the story is told of an iron statue of Mahomet, which, being surrounded by adamants (lapides adamantini), hangs suspended in the air. The modern simile is that of a donkey between two bundles of hay.

156. Errour, doubt; see l. 146 above.

158. 'This writing is not at all meant to apply to thee.'

159. Servant was, so to speak, the old technical term for a lover; cf. serveth, Kn. Tale, 2220, 2228; and servant in Two Gent. of Verona, ii. 1. 106, 114, 140, &c.

163. I.e. 'at any rate you can come and look on.'

169. Imitated from Dante, Inf. iii. 19. Cary has—

‘And when his hand he had stretch’d forth
To mine, with pleasant looks, whence I was cheer’d,
Into that secret place he led me on.’

176. Imitated by Spenser, F. Q. i. 1. 8, 9. Chaucer’s list of trees was suggested by a passage in the Teseide, xi. 22–24; but he extended his list by help of one in the Roman de la Rose, 1338–1368; especially ll. 1361–8, as follows—

‘Et d’oliviers et de cipres,
Dont il n’a gaires ici pres;
Ormes y ot branchus et gros,
Et avec ce charmes et fos,
Codres droites, trembles et chesnes,
Erables haus, sapins et fresnes.’

Here ormes are elms; charmes, horn-beams; fos, beeches; codres, hazels; trembles, aspens; chesnes, oaks; erables, maples; sapins, firs; fresnes, ashes. Hence this list contains seven kinds of trees out of Chaucer’s thirteen. See also the list of 21 trees in Kn. Tale, 2063–5. Spenser has—

‘The builder oake, sole king of forrests all.’

This tree-list is, in fact, a great curiosity. It was started by Statius, Thebaid, vi. 98; who was followed by Boccaccio, Tes. xi. 22–24; Rom. de la Rose, 1361; Chaucer (twice); Tasso, Gier. Lib. iii. 75; and Spenser. Cf. Vergil, Æn. vi. 179.

I here quote several notes from Bell’s Chaucer, marked ‘Bell.’—

‘The reader will observe the life and spirit which the personification of the several trees gives to this catalogue. It is common in French, even in prose; as, for instance, the weeping willow is le saule pleureur, the weeper willow. The oak is called builder, because no other wood was used in building in this country in the middle ages, as may be seen in our old churches and farm-houses, in which the stairs are often made of solid blocks of the finest oak.’—Bell.

177. ‘The elm is called piler, perhaps because it is planted as a pillar or support to the vine [cf. Spenser’s ‘vine-prop elme’]; and cofre unto careyne, because coffins for carrion or corpses were [and are] usually made of elm.’—Bell. In fact, Boccaccio has—‘E l’olmo, che di viti s’innamora;’ Tes. xi. 24.

178. Piper, suitable for pipes or horns. ‘The box, being a hard, fine-grained wood, was used for making pipes or horns, as in the Nonne Prestes Tale, l. 577—“Of bras they broughten bemes [trumpets] and of box."—Bell. Boxwood is still used for flutes and flageolets.

Holm to whippes lasshe; 'the holm used for making handles for whip-lashes.'—Bell. Spenser calls it 'The carver holm,' i. e. the holm suitable for carving.

179. The sayling frr; this 'alludes to the ship's masts and spars being made of fir.'—Bell. Spenser substitutes for it 'The sailing pine.' He also has 'the cypress funeral.'

180. The sheter ew. 'The material of our [ancient] national weapon, the bow, was yew. It is said that the old yews which are found in country churchyards were planted in order to supply the yeomanry with bows.'—Bell. Spenser has—'The eugh, obedient to the benders will.'

'The asþ is the aspen, or black poplar, of which shafts or arrows were made.'—Bell. Spenser has—'The aspine good for staves;' and 'The birch for shaftes.'

181. The olive is the emblem of peace; and the palm, of victory. Boccaccio has—'e d' ogni vincitore Premio la palma;' Tes. xi. 24.

182. 'The laurel (used) for divination,' or 'to divine with.' It was 'sacred to Apollo; and its branches were the decorations of poets, and of the flamens. The leaves, when eaten, were said to impart the power of prophesying; Tibull. 2. 5. 63; Juvenal, 7. 19.'—Lewis and Short's Lat. Dict., s. v. laurus.

183. In a note to Cant. Tales, l. 1920, Tyrwhitt says—'Chaucer has [here] taken very little from Boccaccio, as he had already inserted a very close imitation of this part of the Teseide in his Assemblée of Foules, from verse 183 to verse 287.' In fact, eleven stanzas (183-259) correspond to Boccaccio's Teseide, Canto vii. st. 51-60; the next three stanzas (260-280) to the same, st. 63-66; and the next two (281-294) to the same, st. 61, 62. See the whole extract from Boccaccio, as translated in the Preface.

On the other hand, this passage in Chaucer is imitated in the Kingis Quair, st. 31-33, 152, 153; and ll. 680-9 are imitated in the same, st. 34.

The phrase 'blosmy bowes' occurs again in Troilus, ii. 821.

185. 'There where is always sufficient sweetness.'

214. According to Boccaccio, the name of Cupid's daughter was Voluttade (Pleasure). In the Roman de la Rose, ll. 913, 927 (Eng. version, 923, 939), Cupid has two bows and ten arrows.

218. This company answer to Boccaccio's Grace, Adornment, Affability, Courtesy, Arts (plural), Vain Delight, and Gentleness.

Instead of Craft, Boccaccio speaks of 'the Arts that have power to make others perforce do folly, in their aspect much disfigured.' Hypocritical Cajolery seems to be intended. Cf. 'Charmes and Force;' Kn. Tale, 1069.

225. Ed. 1561 has with a nice atire, but wrongly; for compare Boccaccio. Cf. Kn. Tale, 1067-9.

226. Cf. 'Jest and youthful Jollity;' L'Allegro, 26.

228. Messagerye and Mede represent the sending of messages and giving of bribes. For this sense of Mede, see P. Plowman, C. iv. (or B. iii.). The other three are Audacity (too forward Boldness), Glozings (Flatteries), and Pimps; all of bad reputation, and therefore not named. Boccaccio's words are—'il folle Ardire Con Lusinghe e Ruffiani.'

231. Bras, brass. Boccaccio has rame, i. e. copper, the metal which symbolised Venus; see Can. Yeom. Tale, 829. In fact, this temple is the very temple of Venus which Chaucer again describes in the Knightes Tale, ll. 1060-1108; which see.

234. Faire, beautiful by nature; gay, adorned by art.

236. Office, duty; viz. to dance round.

237. These are the dowves flikering in Kn. Tale, 1104.

243. Sonde, sand. 'Her [Patience's] chief virtue is quiet endurance in the most insecure and unhopeful circumstances;' Bell.

245. Answering to Boccaccio's 'Promesse ad arte,' i. e. 'artful Promises.'

246. Cf. Kn. Tale, 1062-1066; 1070.

255. 'The allusion is to the adventure of Priapus, related by Ovid in the Fasti, lib. i. 415;' Bell. The ass, by braying, put Priapus to confusion.

261. But in Kn. Tale, 1082, the porter of Venus is Idleness, as in the Rom. de la Rose, 636 (E. version, 643).

272. Valence, explained by Urry as Valentia in Spain. But perhaps it may refer to Valence, near Lyons, in France; as Lyons is especially famous for the manufacture of silks, and there is a considerable trade in silks at Valence also. Probably 'thin silk' is here meant. Boccaccio merely speaks of 'texture so thin,' or, in the original 'Testa, tanto sottil,' which accounts for Chaucer's 'subtil.' Coles's Dict. (1684) gives: 'Valence, -tia, a town in Spain, France, and Milan.' In the Unton Inventories, for the years 1596 and 1620, ed. J. G. Nichols, I find: 'one covering for a fiede bedde of green and valens,' p. 4; 'one standinge bedsteed with black velvett testern, black vallance fringed and laced,' p. 21; 'one standinge bed with yellow damaske testern and vallence,’ p. 21 ; ‘vallance fringed and laced,’ p. 22 ; ‘one bedsteed and testern, and valance of black velvett,’ p. 22 ; ‘one bedsteed . . with vallance imbroydered with ash couler,’ p. 23 ; ‘one bedsteed, with . . vallance of silke,’ p. 29. It is the mod. E. valance, and became a general term for part of the hangings of a bed ; Shakespeare has ‘Valance of Venice gold,’ spelt Vallens in old editions, Tam. Shrew, ii. 1. 356. Spenser imitates this passage, F. Q. ii. 12. 77.

275. Compare the well-known proverb—‘sine Cerere et Libero friget Venus ;’ Terence, Eun. 2. 3. 4.

277. Read Cipryde, not Cupide ; for in l. 279 we have her twice, once in the sense of ‘their,’ but secondly in the sense of ‘her.’ Boccaccio also here speaks of Venus, and refers to the apple which she won from Paris. Cipride is regularly formed from the accus. of Cypris (gen. Cypridis), an epithet of Venus due to her worship in Cyprus. Chaucer found the genitive Cypridis in Alanus de Planctu Naturæ (ed. Wright, p. 438) ; see note to l. 298. Cf. ‘He curseth Bacus, Ceres, and Cipride ;’ Troilus, v. 208.

281. The best way of scansion is perhaps to read despyt-e with final e, preserved by cæsura, and to pronounce Diane as Dián. So in Kn. Tale, 1193, which runs parallel with it.

282. ‘Trophies of the conquest of Venus ;’ Bell.

283. Maydens ; of these Callisto was one (so says Boccaccio) ; and this is Chaucer’s Calixte (l. 286), and his Calystope in the Kn. Tale (l. 1197). She was the daughter of the Arcadian king Lycaon, and mother of Arcas by Jupiter ; changed by Juno, on account of jealousy, into a she-bear, and then raised to the heavens by Jupiter in the form of the constellation Helice or Ursa Major ; see Ovid, Fasti, ii. 156 ; Metamorph. ii. 401 ; &c. (Lewis and Short).

286. Athalaunte, Atalanta. There were two of this name ; the one here meant (see Boccaccio) was the one who was conquered in a footrace by the lover who married her ; see Ovid, Metam. x. 565. The other, who was beloved by Meleager, and hunted the Calydonian boar, is the one mentioned in the Kn. Tale, 1212 ; see Ovid, Metam. viii. 318. It is clear that Chaucer thought they were one and the same.

287. I wante, I lack ; i. e. I do not know. Boccaccio here mentions the mother of Parthenopæus, whose name Chaucer did not know. She was the other Atalanta, the wife of Meleager ; and Boccaccio did not name her, because he says ‘that other proud one,’ meaning the other proud one of the same name. See the story in Dryden ; tr. of Ovid’s Metamorphoses, bk. viii.

288. Boccaccio only mentions 'the spouse of Ninus,' i. e. Semiramis, the great queen of Assyria, Thisbe and Pyramus, 'Hercules in the lap of Iole,' and Byblis. The rest Chaucer has added. Compare his lists in Prol. to Leg. of Good Women, 250, and in C. T., Group B, 63; see the note in my edition of the Prioresses Tale, p. 135. See the Legend for the stories of Dido, Thisbe and Pyramus, and Cleopatra. Paris, Achilles, Troilus, and Helen are all mentioned in his Troilus.

Candace is mentioned again in the Legend of Good Women, Prol. l. 265, and in the Ballade on Newfangelnesse, l. 16. There was a Candace, queen of Meroë, mentioned by Pliny, vi. 29; and there is the Candace in the Acts of the Apóstles, viii. 27. But the Candace here intended is the queen mentioned in the medieval romance of Alexander, who is said to have captured that famous conqueror by a plot; see the Wars of Alexander, ed. Skeat, 5090. Sometimes confused with the Canace of Ovid's Heroides, epist. xi., wholly translated by Dryden. In fact, we have sufficient proof of this confusion; for one MS. actually reads Candace in the Legend of Good Women, where five other MSS. have Canace or Canacee. Biblis is Byblis, who fell in love with Caunus, and, being repulsed, was changed into a fountain; Ovid, Metam. ix. 452.

Tristram and Isoude are the Tristran (or Tristan) and Ysolde (or Ysolt) of French medieval romance; cf. Ho. Fame, 1796. Gower, in his Conf. Amantis, bk. 8 (ed. Pauli, iii. 359) includes Tristram and Bele Isolde in his long list of lovers, and gives an outline of the story in the same, bk. 6 (iii. 17). Ysolde was the wife of King Mark of Cornwall, and the mistress of her nephew Sir Tristram, of whom she became passionately enamoured from having drunk a philter by mistake; see Wheeler, Noted Names of Fiction, s. v. Isolde. The Romance of Sir Tristram was edited by Sir W. Scott, and has been re-edited by Kölbing, and by G. P. McNeill (for the Scottish Text Society). The name Ysoude is constantly misprinted Ysonde, even by the editors. Chaucer mentions her again; see Leg. G. Women, 254; Ho. of Fame, 1796.

292. Silla, Scylla; daughter of Nisus, of Megara, who, for love of Minos, cut off her father's hair, upon which his life depended, and was transformed in consequence into the bird Ciris; see Ovid, Metam. viii. 8. Another Scylla was changed by Circe into a sea-monster; Ovid, Metam. xiv. 52. Their stories shew that the former is meant.

Moder of Romulus, Ilia (also called Rhæa Silvia), daughter of Numitor, dedicated to Vesta, and buried alive for breaking her vows; see Livy, bk. 1; Verg. Æn. i. 274.

The quotation from Boccaccio ends here.

296. Of spak, spake of; see l. 174.

298. This quene is the goddess Nature (l. 303). We now come to a part of the poem where Chaucer makes considerable use of the work which he mentions in l. 316, viz. the Planctus Naturæ (Complaint of Nature) by Alanus de Insulis, or Alain Delille, a poet and divine of the 12th century. This work is printed in vol. ii. of T. Wright's edition of the Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets (Record Series), which also contains the poem called Anticlaudianus by the same author. The description of the goddess is given at great length (pp. 431-456), and at last she declares her name to be Natura (p. 456). This long description of Nature and of her vesture is a very singular one; indeed, all the fowls of the air are supposed to be depicted upon her wonderful garments (p. 437). Chaucer substitutes a brief description of his own, and represents the birds as real live ones, gathering around her; which is much more sensible. As Prof. Morley says (Eng. Writers, ii. 200)—'Alain describes Nature's changing robe as being in one of its forms so ethereal that it is like air, and the pictures on it seem to the eye a Council of Animals (Animalium Concilium). Upon which, beginning, as Chaucer does, with the Eagle and the Falcon, Alain proceeds with a long list of the birds painted on her transparent robe that surround Nature as in a council, and attaches to each bird the most remarkable point in its character.' Professor Hales, in the Academy, Nov. 19, 1881, quoted the passages from Alanus which are here more or less imitated, and drew attention to the remarkable passage in Spenser's F. Q. bk. vii. c. 7. st. 5-10, where that poet quotes and copies Chaucer. Dunbar imitates Chaucer in his Thrissill and Rois, and describes Dame Nature as surrounded by beasts, birds, and flowers; see stanzas 10, 11, 18, 26, 27 of that poem.

The phrase 'Nature la déesse' occurs in Le Roman de la Rose, l. 16480.

309. Birds were supposed to choose their mates on St. Valentine's day (Feb. 14); and lovers thought they must follow their example, and then 'choose their loves.' Mr. Douce thinks the custom of choosing valentines was a survival from the Roman feast of the Lupercalia. See the articles in Brand, Pop. Antiq. i. 53; Chambers, Book of Days, i. 255; Alban Butler, Lives of Saints, Feb. 14; &c. The custom is alluded to by Lydgate, Shakespeare, Herrick, Pepys, and Gay; and in the Paston Letters, ed. Gairdner, iii. 169, is a letter written in Feb. 1477, where we find: 'And, cosyn, uppon Fryday is Sent Volentynes Day, and every brydde chesyth hym a make.' See also the Cuckoo and Nyghtingale, l. 80.

316. Aleyn, Alanus de Insulis; Pleynt of Kynde, Comp'laint of Nature, Lat. Planctus Naturæ; see note to l. 298. Chaucer refers us to Aleyn's description on account of its unmerciful length; it was hopeless to attempt even an epitome of it.

323. Foules of ravyne, birds of prey. Chaucer's division of birds into birds of prey, birds that eat worms and insects, water-fowl, and birds that eat seeds, can hardly be his own. In Vincent of Beauvais, lib. xvi. c. 14, Aristotle is cited as to the food of birds:—'quædam comedunt carnem, quædam grana, quædam utrumque; . . . quædam vero comedunt vermes, vt passer. . . . Vivunt et ex fructu quædam aues, vt palumbi, et turtures. Quædam viuunt in ripis aquarum lacuum, et cibantur ex eis.'

330. Royal; because he is often called the king of birds, as in Dunbar's Thrissill and Rois, st. 18. Vincent of Beauvais, Spec. Nat., lib. xvi. c. 32, quotes from Iorath (sic):—'Aquila est auis magna regalis.' And Philip de Thau, Bestiary, 991 (in Wright's Pop. Treatises, p. 109) says:—'Egle est rei de oisel. . . En Latine raisun cler-veant le apellum, Ke le solail verat quant il plus cler serat.'

331. See the last note, where we learn that the eagle is called in Latin 'c'ear-seeing,' because 'he will look at the sun when it will be brightest.' This is explained at once by the remarkable etymology given by Isidore (cited by Vincent, as above), viz.:—'Agu-ila ab ac-umine oculorum vocata est.'

332. Pliny, Nat. Hist. bk. x. c. 3, enumerates six kinds of eagles, which Chaucer leaves us to find out; viz. Melænaetos, Pygargus, Morphnos, which Homer (Il. xxiv. 316) calls perknos, Percnopterus, Gnesios (the true or royal eagle), and Haliaetos (osprey). This explains the allusion in l. 333.

334. Tyraunt. This epithet was probably suggested by the original text in Alanus, viz.—'Illic ancipiter [accipiter], civitatis præfectus aeris, violenta tyrannide a subditis redditus exposcebat.' Sir Thopas had a 'grey goshawk;' C. T. Group B, 1928.

337. See note on the faucon peregrin, Squi. Tale, 428, in my edition of the Prioresses Tale, p. 220. 'Beautifully described as "distreining" the king's hand with its foot, because carried by persons of the highest rank;' Bell.

339. Merlion, merlin. 'The merlin is the smallest of the long-winged hawks, and was generally carried by ladies;' Bell.

342. From Alanus, as above:—'Illic olor, sui funeris præco, mellitæ citherizationis organo vitæ prophetabat apocopam.' The same idea is mentioned by Vincent of Beauvais, Spec. Nat. lib. xvi. c. 50; Pliny says he believes the story to be false, Nat. Hist. lib. x. c. 23. See Compl. of Anelida, l. 346. 'The wild swan's death-hymn;' Tennyson, The Dying Swan. Cf. Ovid, Heroid. vii. 2.

343. From Alanus:—'Illic bubo, propheta miseris, psalmodias funereæ lamentationis præcinebat.' So in the Rom. de la Rose, 5999:—

'Li chahuan . . .
Prophetes de male aventure,
Hideus messagier de dolor.'

Cf. Vergil, Æn. iv. 462; Ovid, Metam. v. 550; Shakespeare, Mid. Nt. D. v. 385. And see Chaucer's Troilus, v. 319.

344. Geaunt, giant. Alanus has:—'grus . . . in gigantea quantitatis evaderebatur excessum.' Vincent (lib. xvi. c. 91) quotes from Isidore:—'Grues nomen de propria voce sumpserunt, tali enim sono susurrant.'

345. 'The chough, who is a thief.' From Alanus, who has:—'Illic monedula, latrocinio laudabili reculas thesaurizans, innatæ avaritiæ argumenta monstrabat.' 'It was an old belief in Cornwall, according to Camden (Britannia, tr. by Holland, 1610; p. 189) that the chough was an incendiary, "and thievish besides; for oftentimes it secretly conveyeth fire-sticks, setting their houses a-fire, and as closely filcheth and hideth little pieces of money."—Prov. Names of Brit. Birds, by C. Swainson, p. 75. So also in Pliny, lib. x. c. 29, choughs are called thieves. Vincent of Beauvais quotes one of Isidore's delicious etymologies:—'Monedula dicitur quasi mone-tula, quæ cum aurum inuenit aufert et occultat;' i. e. from monetam tollere. 'The Jackdaw tribe is notoriously given to pilfering;' Stanley, Hist. of Birds, ed. 1880, p. 203.

Jangling, talkative; so Alanus:—'Illic pica . . . curam logices perennabat insomnem.' So in Vincent—'pica loquax'—'pica garrula,' &c.; and in Pliny, lib. x. c. 42.

346. Scorning, 'applied to the jay, probably, because it follows and seems to mock at the owl, whenever the latter is so unfortunate as to be caught abroad in the daylight; for this reason, a trap for jays is always baited with a live owl;' Bell.

'The heron will stand for hours in the shallow water watching for eels;' Bell. Vincent quotes from Isidore :—'Ciconeæ . . . serpentium hostes.' So also A. Neckam, De Naturis Rerum, lib. i. c. 64 :—'Ranarum et locustarum et serpentum hostis est.'

347. Trecherye, trickery, deceit. 'During the season of incubation, the cock-bird tries to draw pursuers from the nest by wheeling round them, crying and screaming, to divert their attention . . . while the female sits close on the nest till disturbed, when she runs off, feigning lameness, or flaps about near the ground, as if she had a broken wing; cf. Com. Errors, iv. 2. 27; Much Ado, iii. 1. 24;' Prov. Names of Brit. Birds, by C. Swainson, p. 185. And cf. 'to seem the lapwing and to jest, Tongue far from heart;' Meas. for Meas. i. 4. 32.

348. Stare, starling. As the starling can speak, there is probably 'an allusion to some popular story like the Manciple's Tale, in which a talking starling betrays a secret;' Bell. The same story is in Ovid, Metam. bk. ii. 535; and in Gower, Conf. Amant. bk. iii. 'Germanicus and Drusus had one stare, and sundry nightingales, taught to parle Greeke and Latine;' Holland's Pliny, bk. x. c. 42. In the Seven Sages, ed. Weber, p. 86, the bird who 'bewrays counsel' is a magpie.

349. Coward kyte. See Squi. Tale, 624; and note. 'Miluus . . . fugatur a niso, quamuis in triplo sit maior illo;' Vincent of Beauvais, lib. xvi. c. 108.

350. Alanus has :—'Illic gallus, tanquam vulgaris astrologus, suæ vocis horologio horarum loquebatur discrimina.' Cf. Nonne Prestes Tale, l. 33. We also see whence Chaucer derived his epithet of the cock—'common astrologer'—in Troilus, iii. 1415. Tusser, in his Husbandry, ed. Payne, § 74, says the cock crows—'At midnight, at three, and an hower ere day.' Hence the expressions 'first cock' in K. Lear, iii. 4. 121, and 'second cock' in Macbeth, ii. 3. 27.

351. The sparrow was sacred to Venus, from its amatory disposition (Meas. for Meas. iii. 2. 185). In the well-known song from Lyly's Alexander and Campaspe, Cupid 'stakes his quiver, bow, and arrows, His Mother's doves, and team of sparrows;' Songs from the Dramatists, ed. R. Bell, p. 50.

352. Cf. Holland's Pliny, bk. x. c. 29—'The nightingale . . . chauntheth continually, namely, at that time as the trees begin to put out their leaves thicke.'

353. 'Nocet autem apibus sola inter animalia carnem habentia et carnem comedentia;' Vincent of Beauvais, De hyrundine; Spec. Nat. lib. xvi. c. 17. 'Culicum et muscarum et apicularum infestatix ;' A. Neckam, De Naturis Rerum (De Hirundine), lib. i. c. 52. Cf. Vergil, Georg. iv. 15.

'The swallow stopt as he hunted the bee ;'

Tennyson, The Poet's Song.

355. Alanus has :—'Illic turtur, suo viduata consorte, amorem pigolare dedignans, in altero bigamiæ refutabat solatia.' 'Etiam vulgo est notum turturem et amoris veri prærogativa nobilitari et castitatis titulis donari ;' A. Neckam, i. 59. Cf. An Old Eng. Miscellany, ed. Morris, p. 22.

356. 'In many medieval paintings, the feathers of angels' wings are represented as those of peacocks ;' Bell.

357. Perhaps Chaucer mixed up the description of the pheasant in Alanus with that of the 'gallus silvestris, privatoris galli deridens desidiæ,' which occurs almost immediately below. Vincent (lib. xvi. c. 72) says :—'Fasianus est gallus syluaticus.' Or he may allude to the fact, vouched for in Stanley's Hist. of Birds, ed. 1880, p. 279, that the Pheasant will breed with the common Hen.

358. 'The Goose likewise is very vigilant and watchfull : witness the Capitoll of Rome, which by the means of Geese was defended and saued ;' Holland's Pliny, bk. x. c. 22.

'There is no noise at all

Of waking dog, nor gaggling goose more waker then the hound.'

Golding, tr. of Ovid's Metam. bk. xi. fol. 139, back.

Unkynde, unnatural ; because of its behaviour to the hedge-sparrow ; K. Lear, i. 4. 235.

359. Delicasye, wantonness. 'Auis est luxuriosa nimium, bibitque vinum ;' Vincent (quoting from Liber de Naturis Rerum), lib. xvi. c. 135, De Psittaco ; and again (quoting from Physiologus)—'cum vino inebriatur.' So in Holland's Pliny, bk. x. c. 42—'She loueth wine well, and when shee hath drunk freely, is very pleasant, plaifull, and wanton.'

360. 'The farmers' wives find the drake or mallard the greatest enemy of their young ducks, whole broods of which he will destroy unless removed.' Chaucer perhaps follows the Liber de Naturis Rerum, as quoted in Vincent, lib. xvi. c. 27 (De Anate) :—'Mares aliquando cum plures fuerint simul, tanta libidinis insania feruntur, vt feminam solam . . occidunt.'

361. From A. Neckam, Liber de Naturis Rerum (ed. Wright, lib. i. c. 64) ; cited in Vincent, lib. xvi. c. 48. The story is, that a male stork, having discovered that the female was unfaithful to him, went away ; and presently returning with a great many other storks, the avengers tore the criminal to pieces. Another very different story may also be cited. 'The stork is the Embleme of a grateful Man. In which respect Ælian writeth of a storke, which bred on the house of one who had a very beautiful wife, which in her husband's absence used to commit adultery with one of her base servants: which the storke observing, in gratitude to him who freely gave him house-rome, flying in the villaines face, strucke out both his eyes.' Guillim; Display of Heraldry, sect. iii. c. 19.

In Thynne's Animadversions on Speght's Chaucer, ed. Furnivall, p. 68 (Chau. Soc.), we find:—'for Aristotle sayethe, and Bartholomeus de proprietatibus rerum, li. 12. c. 8, with manye other auctors, that yf the storke by any meanes perceve that his female hath brooked spousehedde, he will no moore dwell with her, but strykethe and so cruelly beateth her, that he will not surcease vntill he hath killed her yf he maye, to wreake and reuenge that adulterye.' Cf. Batman vppon Bartholome, ed. 1582, leaf 181, col. 2; Stanley, Hist. of Birds, 6th ed. p. 322; and story no. 82 in Swan's translation of the Gesta Romanorum.

362. 'The voracity of the cormorant has become so proverbial, that a greedy and voracious eater is often compared to this bird;' Swainson, Prov. Names of British Birds, p. 143. See Rich. II. ii. 1. 38.

363. Wys; because it could predict; it was therefore consecrated to Apollo; see Lewis and Short, s. v. corvus. Care, anxiety; hence, ill luck. 'In folk-lore the crow always appears as a bird of the worst and most sinister character, representing either death, or night, or winter;' Prov. Names of British Birds, by C. Swainson, p. 84; which see.

364. Olde. I do not understand this epithet; it is usually the crow who is credited with a long life. Frosty; i. e. that is seen in England in the winter-time; called in Shropshire the snow-bird; Swainson's Prov. Names of Brit. Birds, p. 6. The explanation of the phrase 'farewell feldefare,' occurring in Troil. iii. 863 and in Rom. Rose, 5510, and marked by Tyrwhitt as not understood, is easy enough. It simply means—'good bye, and we are well rid of you;' when the fieldfare goes, the warm weather comes.

371. Formel, perhaps 'regular' or 'suitable' companion; as F. formel answers to Lat. formalis. Tyrwhitt's Gloss. says: 'formel is put for the female of any fowl, more especially for a female eagle (ll. 445, 535 below).' It has, however, no connection with female (as he seems to suppose), but answers rather, in sense, to make, i. e. match, fit companion. Godefroy cites the expression 'faucon formel' from L'Aviculaire des Oiseaux de proie (MS. Lyon 697, fol. 221 a). He explains it by 'qui a d'amples formes,' meaning (as I suppose) simply 'large;' which does not seem to be right; though the tercel or male hawk was so called because he was a third less than the female. We want more quotations from Old French texts to settle this.

379. Vicaire, deputy. This term is taken from Alanus, De Planctu Naturæ, as above, where it occurs at least thrice. Thus, at p. 469 of Wright's edition, Nature says:—'Me igitur tanquam sui [Dei] vicariam;' at p. 511—'Natura, Dei gratia mundanæ civitatis vicaria procuratrix;' and at p. 516, Nature is addressed as—'O supracælestis Principis fidelis vicaria!' M. Sandras supposes that Chaucer took the term from the Rom. de la Rose, but it is more likely that Chaucer and Jean de Meun alike took it from Alanus.

'Cis Diex meismes, par sa grace, . . .
Tant m'ennora, tant me tint chiere,
Qu'il m'establi sa chamberiere . . .
Por chamberiere! certes vaire,
Por conestable, et por vicaire,' &c.

Rom. de la Rose, 16970, &c.

Here Nature is supposed to be the speaker. Chaucer again uses vicaire of Nature, Doct. Tale, l. 20, which see; and he applies it to the Virgin Mary in his A B C, l. 140. See also Lydgate, Compl. of Black Knight, l. 491.

380. That l. 379 is copied from Alanus is clear from the fact that ll. 380-1 are from the same source. At p. 451 of Wright's edition, we find Nature speaking of the concordant discord of the four elements—'quatuor elementorum concors discordia'—which unites the buildings of the palace of this world—'mundialis regiæ structuras conciliat.' Similarly, she says, the four humours are united in the human body:—'quæ qualitates inter elementa mediatrices conveniunt, hæ eædem inter quatuor humores pacis sanciant firmitatem;' &c.

Compare also Boethius, bk. iii. met. 9, in Chaucer's translation (ed. Morris, p. 87). 'Thou byndest the elementz by noumbres porporcionables, that the colde thinges mowen acorde with the hote thinges, and the drye thinges with the moist thinges; that the fire that is purest ne fleye nat ouer heye, ne that the heuy-nesse ne drawe nat adoun ouer lowe the erthes that ben plounged in the watres. Thou knytttest togidre the mene soule of treble kynde moeuynge alle thinges;' &c.

'Et froit, et chaut, et sec, et moiste;'

Rom. Rose, 17163.

'For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions fierce,
Strive here for mastery.' Milton, P. L. ii. 898.

386. Seynt, &c. ; i. e. on St. Valentine's day.

388. 'Ye come to choose your mates, and (then) to flee (on) your way.'

411. I believe it will be found that Chaucer sometimes actually crushes the two words this is into the time of one word only (something like the modern it's for it is). Hence I scan the line thus:—

This 's our | uság' | alwéy, | &c.

So again, in the Knight's Tale, 233:—

We mó't' | endúr' | it this 's | the shórt | and pleýn.

And again, in the same, 885:—

And seíd | e this 's | a shórt | conclú | sioun.

And frequently elsewhere. In the present case, both this and is are unaccented, which is much harsher than when this bears an accent.

I find that Ten Brink has also noted this peculiarity, in his Chaucers Sprache, § 271. He observes that, in C. T. Group E, 56, the Ellesmere and Hengwrt MSS. actually substitute this for this is; see my Prioresses Tale, &c., p. 61, footnote; and hence note that the correct reading is—'But this is his tale, which,' &c. See this in Schmidt, Shak. Lexicon.

413. Com, came. The o is long; A. S. cóm=Goth. kwam.

417. 'I choose the formel to be my sovereign lady, not my mate.'

421. 'Beseeching her for mercy,' &c.

435. Read lov'th; monosyllabic, as frequently.

464. 'Ye see what little leisure we have here.'

471. Read possíbl, just as in French.

476. Som; quite indefinite. 'Than another man.'

482. Hir-ès, hers; dissyllabic. Whether=whér.

485. 'The dispute is here called a plee, or plea, or pleading; and in the next stanza the terms of law, adopted into the Courts of Love, are still more pointedly applied; ' Bell.

499. Hye, loudly. Kek kek represents the goose's cackle; and quek is mod. E. quack.

504. For, on behalf of; see next line.

507. For comune spede, for the common benefit.

508. 'For it is a great charity to set us free.'

511. 'If it be your wish for any one to speak, it would be as good for him to be silent; it were better to be silent than to talk as you do.' That is, the cuckoo only wants to listen to those who will talk nonsense. A mild rebuke. He explains (l. 514) that it is better to be silent than to meddle with things which one does not understand.

518. Lit. 'A duty assumed without direction often gives offence.' A proverb which appears in other forms. In the Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 1066, it takes the form—'Profred seruyse stinketh;' see note on the line, in my edition of the Man of Lawes Tale. Uncommitted is not delegated, not entrusted to one. Cotgrave has: 'Commis, assigned, appointed, delegated.'

524. I Iuge, I decide, my judgment is. Folk, kind of birds; see note to l. 323.

545. Our, ours; it is the business of us who are the chosen spokesmen. The Iuge is Nature.

556. Goler in the Fairfax MS. is doubtless merely miswritten for golee, as in Ff.; Caxton turns it into golye, to keep it dissyllabic; the reading gole (in O. and Gg.) also=golee. Godefroy has: 'Golee, goulee, goullee, gulee, geulee, s. f. cri, parole; ' and gives several examples. Cotgrave has: 'Goulte, f. a throatfull, or mouthful of, &c.' One of Godefroy's examples gives the phrase—'Et si dirai ge ma goulee,' and so I shall say my say. Chaucer uses the word sarcastically: his large golee=his tedious gabble. Allied to E. gullett, gully.

564. Which a reson, what sort of a reason.

568. Cf. Cant. Tales, 5851, 5852.

572. 'To have held thy peace, than (to have) shewed.'

574. A common proverb. In the Rom. de la Rose, l. 4750 (E. version, l. 5268), it appears as: 'Nus fox ne scet sa langue taire,' i.e. No fool knows how to hold his tongue. In the Proverbs of Hendyng, it is: 'Sottes bolt is sone shote,' l. 85. In later English, 'A fool's bolt is soon shot;' cf. Henry V. iii. 7. 132, and As You Like It, v. 4. 67. Kemble quotes from MS. Harl. fol. 4—'Ut dicunt mu'ti, cito transit lancea stulti.'

578. The sothe sadde, the sober truth.

595. Another proverb. We now say—'There's as good fish in the sea as ever came out of it;' or, 'as ever was caught.'

603. 'Pushed himself forward in the crowd.'

610. Said sarcastically—'Yes! when the glutton has filled his paunch sufficiently, the rest of us are sure to be satisfied!'

Compare the following. 'Certain persones . . . sayng that Demades had now given over to bee suche an haine [niggardly wretch] as he had been in tymes past—"Yea, marie, quoth Demosthenes, for now ye see him full paunched, as lyons are." For Demades was covetous and greedie of money, and indeed the lyons are more gentle when their bealyes are well filled.'—Udall, tr. of Apothegmes of Erasmus; Anecdotes of Demosthenes. The merlin then addresses the cuckoo directly.

612. Heysugge, hedge-sparrow; see note to l. 358.

614. 'Live thou unmated, thou destruction' (i. e. destroyer) of worms.'

615. 'For it is no matter as to the lack of thy kind,' i. e. it would not matter, even if the result was the loss of your entire race.

616. 'Go! and remain ignorant for ever.'

621. Read th'eleccioun; i. e. the choice.

623. Cheest, chooseth; spelt chyest, Ayenbite of Inwyt, p. 126; spelt chest (with long e) in Shoreham's Poems, ed. Wright, p. 109, where it rimes with lest=leseth, i. e. loseth; A. S. císt, Deut. xxviii. 9.

626. Accent favour on the second syllable; as in C. T., Group B, 3881 (Monkes Tale).

630. 'I have no other (i. e. no wrongful) regard to any rank,' I am no respecter of persons.

633. 'I would counsel you to take;' two infinitives.

640. 'Under your rod,' subject to your correction. So in the Schipmannes Tale, C. T. 13028.

641. The first accent is on As.

653. Manér-e is trisyllabic.

657. For tarying, to prevent tarrying; see note to C. T. Group B, 2052; in my edition of the Prioress Tale, p. 165.

664, 5. 'Whatever may happen afterwards, this intervening course is ready prepared for all of you.'

670. They embraced each other with their wings and by intertwining their necks.

675. Gower, Conf. Amant. bk. i. (ed. Pauli, i. 134) speaks of 'Roundel, balade, and virelay.' Johnson, following the Dict. de Trevoux, gives a fair definition of the roundel; but I prefer to translate that given by Littré, s. v. rondeau. '1. A short poem, also called triolet, in which the first line or lines recur in the middle and at the end of the piece. Such poems, by Froissart and Charles d'Orleans, are still extant. 2. Another short poem peculiar to French poetry, composed of thirteen lines broken by a pause after the fifth and eighth lines, eight having one rime and five another. The first word or words are repeated after the eighth line and after the last, without forming part of the verse ; it will readily be seen that this rondeau is a modification of the foregoing ; instead of repeating the whole line, only the first words are repeated, often with a different sense.' The word is here used in the former sense ; and the remark in Morley's Eng. Writers (ii. 283), that the Roundel consists of thirteen lines, eight having one rime, and five another, is not to the point here, as it relates to the later French rondeau only. An examination of Old French roundels shews us that Littré's definition of the triolet is quite correct, and is purposely left somewhat indefinite ; but we can apply a somewhat more exact description to the form of the roundel as used by Machault, Deschamps, and Chaucer.

The form adopted by these authors is the following. First come three lines, rimed abb ; next two more, rimed ab, and then the first refrain ; then three more lines, rimed abb, followed by the second refrain. Now the first refrain consists of either one, or two, or three lines, being the first line of the poem, or the first two, or the first three ; and the second refrain likewise consists of either one, or two, or three lines, being the same lines as before, but not necessarily the same number of them. Thus the whole poem consists of eight unlike lines, three on one rime, and five on another, with refrains of from two to six lines. Sometimes one of the refrains is actually omitted, but this may be the scribe's fault. However, the least possible number of lines is thus reduced to nine ; and the greatest number is fourteen. For example, Deschamps (ed. Tarbé) has roundels of nine lines—second refrain omitted—(p. 125) ; of ten lines (p. 36) ; of eleven lines (p. 38) ; of twelve lines (p. 3) ; and of fourteen lines (pp. 39, 43). But the prettiest example is that by Machault (ed. Tarbé, p. 52), which has thirteen lines, the first refrain being of two, and the second of three lines. And, as thirteen lines came to be considered as the normal length, I here follow this as a model ; merely warning the reader that he may make either of his refrains of a different length, if he pleases.

There is a slight art in writing a roundel, viz. in distributing the pauses. There must be a full stop at the end of the third and fifth lines ; but the skilful poet takes care that complete sense can be made by the first line taken alone, and also by the first two lines taken alone. Chaucer has done this.

Todd, in his Illustrations of Chaucer, p. 372, gives a capital example of a roundel by Occleve ; this is of full length, both refrains being of three lines, so that the whole poem is of fourteen lines. This is quite sufficient to shew that the definition of a roundel in Johnson's Dictionary (which is copied from the Dict. de Trevoux, and relates to the later rondeau of thirteen lines) is quite useless as applied to roundels written in Middle English.

677. The note, i. e. the tune. Chaucer adapts his words to a known French tune. The words Qui bien aime, a tard¹ oublie (he who loves well is slow to forget) probably refer to this tune; though it is not quite clear to me how lines of five accents (normally) go to a tune beginning with a line of four accents. In Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 55, we find:—'Of the rondeau of which the first line is cited in the Fairfax MS., &c., M. Sandras found the music and the words in a MS. of Machault in the National Library, no. 7612, leaf 187. The verses form the opening lines of one of two pieces entitled Le Lay de plour:—

'Qui bien aime, a tart oublie,
Et cuers, qui oublie a tart,
Ressemble le feu qui art,' &c.

M. Sandras also says (Étude, p. 72) that Eustache Deschamps composed, on this burden slightly modified, a pretty ballad, inedited till M. Sandras printed it at p. 287 of his Étude; and that, a long time before Machault, Moniot de Paris began, by this same line, a hymn to the Virgin that one can read in the Arsenal Library at Paris, in the copy of a Vatican MS., B. L. no. 63, fol. 283:—

'Ki bien aime a tart oublie;
Mais ne le puis oublier,
La douce vierge Marie.'

683. See note above, to l. 309.

693. This last stanza is imitated at the end of the Court of Love, and of Dunbar's Thrissill and Rois.

VI. MERCILESS BEAUTY.

The title 'Mercilesse Beaute' is given in the Index to the Pepys MS. As it is a fitting title, and no other has been suggested, it is as well to use it.

I think this Roundel was suggested by one written in French, in the thirteenth century, by Willamme d'Amiens, and printed in Bartsch, Chrestomathie de l'ancien Français. It begins—

¹ In old French, a tard means 'slowly, late;'; later French drops a, and uses tard only.

'Jamais ne serai saous
 D'esguarder les vairs ieus dous
 Qui m'ont ocis';—

i. e. I shall never be sated with gazing on the gray soft eyes which have slain me.

1. The MS. has Your two yen; but the scribe lets us see that this ill-sounding arrangement of the words is not the author's own; for in writing the refrain he writes 'Your yen, &c.' But we have further evidence: for the whole line is quoted in Lydgate's Ballade of our Ladie, printed in Chaucer's Works, ed. 1561, fol. 330, in the form—'Your iyen twoo woll slea me sodainly.' The same Ballad contains other imitations of Chaucer's language. Cf. also Kn. Tale, 260.

3. So woundeth hit . . . kene, so keenly it (your beauty) wounds (me). The MS. has wondeth, which is another M. E. spelling of woundeth. Percy miscopied it wendeth, which gives but poor sense; besides, Chaucer would probably have used the contracted form went, as his manner is. In l. 5, the scribe writes wound (better wounde).

4. And but, and unless. For word Percy printed words, quite forgetting that the M. E. plural is dissyllabic (word-es). The final d has a sort of curl to it, but a comparison with other words shews that it means nothing; it occurs, for instance, at the end of wound (l. 5), and escaped (l. 27).

Wounde (MS. wounde) is dissyllabic in Mid. English, like mod. G. Wunde. See wunde in Stratmann.

6. I give two lines to the first refrain, and three to the second. The reader may give three lines to both, if he pleases; see note to sect. V, l. 675. We cannot confine the first refrain to one line only, as there is no stop at the end of l. 14.

8. Trowth-e is dissyllabic; see treouth in Stratmann.

15. Ne availleth; with elided e. MS. nauailleth; Percy prints n'availleth.

16. Halt, i. e. holdeth; see Bøok of Duch. 621.

17. MS. han ye me, correctly; Percy omits me, and so spoils both sense and metre.

28. MS. neuere; Percy prints neve; but the syllables in his occupy the time of one syllable. I suspect that the correct reading is thenke ben; to is not wanted, and thenke is better with a final e, though it is sometimes dropped in the pres. indicative. Percy prints thinke, but the MS. has thenk; cf. A.S. pencan. With l. 29 cf. Troil. v. 363.

31. I do no fors, I don't care; as in Cant. Ta. 6816.

VII. ANELIDA AND ARCITE.

This Poem consists of several distinct portions. It begins with a Proem, of three stanzas, followed by a part of the story, in twenty-seven stanzas, all in seven-line stanzas. Next follows the Complaint of Anelida, skilfully and artificially constructed; it consists of a Proem in a single stanza of nine lines; next, what may be called a Strophe, in six stanzas, of which the first four consist of nine lines, the fifth consists of sixteen lines (with only two rimes), and the sixth, of nine lines (with internal rimes). Next follows what may be called an Antistrophe, in six stanzas arranged precisely as before; wound up by a single concluding stanza corresponding to the Proem at the beginning of the Complaint. After this, the story begins again; but the poet had only written one stanza when he suddenly broke off, and left the poem unfinished; see note to l. 357.

The name of Arcite naturally reminds us of the Knightes Tale; but the 'false Arcite' of the present poem has nothing beyond the name in common with the 'true Arcite' of the Tale. However, there are other connecting links, to be pointed out in their due places, which tend to shew that this poem was written before the Knightes Tale, and was never finished; it is also probable that Chaucer actually wrote an earlier draught of the Knightes Tale, with the title of Palamon and Arcite, which he afterwards partially rejected; for he mentions 'The Love of Palamon and Arcite' in the prologue to the Legend of Good Women as if it were an independent work. However this may be, it is clear that, in constructing or rewriting the Knightes Tale, he did not lose sight of 'Anelida,' for he has used some of the lines over again; moreover, it is not a little remarkable that the very lines from Statius which are quoted at the beginning of the fourth stanza of Anelida are also quoted, in some of the MSS., at the beginning of the Knightes Tale.

But this is not all. For Dr. Koch has pointed out the close agreement between the opening stanzas of this poem, and those of Boccaccio's Teseide, which is the very work from which Palamon and Arcite was, of course, derived, as it is the chief source of the Knightes Tale also. Besides this, there are several stanzas from the Teseide in the Parliament of Foules; and even three near the end of Troilus, viz. the seventh, eighth, and ninth from the end of the last book. Hence we should be inclined to suppose that Chaucer originally translated the Teseide rather closely, substituting a seven-line stanza for the ottava rima of the original; this formed the original Palamon and Arcite, a poem which he probably never finished (as his manner was). Not wishing, however, to abandon it altogether, he probably used some of the lines in this present poem, and introduced others into his Parliament of Foules. At a later period, he rewrote, in a complete form, the whole story in his own fashion, which has come down to us as The Knightes Tale. Whatever the right explanation may be, we are at any rate certain that the Teseide is the source of (1) sixteen stanzas in the Parliament of Foules; (2) of part of the first ten stanzas in the present poem; (3) of the original Palamon and Arcite; (4) of the Knights Tale; and (5) of three stanzas near the end of Troilus (Tes. xi. 1-3).

1. In comparing the first three stanzas with the Teseide, we must reverse the order of the stanzas in the latter poem. Stanza 1 of Anelida answers to st. 3 of the Italian; stanza 2, to st. 2; and stanza 3 to st. 1. The first two lines of lib. 1. st. 3 (of the Italian) are:—

‘Siate presenti, O Marte rubicondo,
Nelle tue arme rigido e feroce.’

1. e. Be present, O Mars the red, strong and fierce in thy arms (battle-array). For the words Be present, see l. 6.

2. Trace, Thrace. Cf. Kn. Tale, 1114-6. Chaucer was here thinking of Statius, Theb. lib. vii. 40, where there is a description of the temple of Mars on Mount Hæmus, in Thrace, described as having a frosty climate. In bk. ii, l. 719, Pallas is invoked as being superior to Bellona.

6, 7. Partly imitated from Tes. i. 3:—

‘E sostenete la mano e la voce
Di me, che intendo i vostri effecti dire.’

8-10. Imitated from Tes. i. 2:—

‘Chè m’è venuta voglia con pietosa
Rima di scriver una storia antica,
Tanto negli anni riposta e nascosa,
Che latino autor non par ne dica,
Per quel ch’io senta, in libro alcuna cosa.’

Thus it appears that, when speaking of his finding an old story in Latin, he is actually translating from an Italian poem which treats of something else! That is, his words give no indication whatever of the source of his poem; but are merely used in a purely conventional manner. The 'old story' is really that of the siege of Thebes; and his Latin is the Thebais of Statius. And neither of them speak of Anelida!

15. Read favourabl'. Imitated from Tes. i. 1:—

'O sorelle Castalie, che nel monte
Elicona contente dimorate
 D' intorno al sacro gorgoneo fonte,
 Sottesso l' ombra delle frondi amate
 Da Febo, delle quali ancor la fronte
 I' spero ornarmi sol che 'l concediate
 Gli santi orecchi a' miei prieghi porgete,
 E quegli udite come voi volete.'

Polymnia, Polyhymnia, also spelt Polymnia, Gk. Πολυμνία; one of the nine Muses. Chaucer invokes the muse Clio in Troil. bk. ii, and Calliope in bk. iii. Cf. Ho. of Fame, 520-2. Parnaso, Parnassus, a mountain in Phocis sacred to Apollo and the Muses, near which were Delphi and the Castalian spring. Elicon, mount Helicon in Bœotia; Chaucer seems to have been thinking rather of the Castalian spring, as he uses the prep. by, and supposes Elicon to be near Parnaso. See the Italian, as quoted above; and note that, in the Ho. of Fame, 522, he says that Helicon is a well.

A similar confusion occurs in Troilus, iii. 1809:—

'Ye sustren nine eek, that by Helicone
 In hill Parnaso, listen for tabide.'

17. Cirrea, Cirra. Chaucer was thinking of the adj. Cirraeus. Cirra was an ancient town near Delphi, under Parnassus. Dante mentions Cirra, Parad. i. 36; and Parnaso just above, l. 16. Perhaps Chaucer took it from him.

20. A common simile. So Spenser, F. Q. i. 12. 1, 42; and at the end of the Thebaid and the Teseide both.

21. Stace, Statius; i.e. the Thebaid; whence some of the next stanzas are more or less borrowed. Chaucer epitomises the general contents of the Thebaid in his Troilus; v. 1478, &c.

Corinne, not Corinna (as some have thought, for she has nothing to do with the matter), but Corinnus. Corinnus was a disciple of Palamedes, and is said to have written an account of the Trojan War, and of the war of the Trojan king Dardanus against the Paphlagonians, in the Dorian dialect. Suidas asserts that Homer made some use of his writings. See Zedler, Universal Lexicon; and Biog. Universelle. How Chaucer met with this name, is not known. Possibly, however, Chaucer was thinking of Colonna, i.e. Guido di Colonna, author of the medieval Bellum Trojanum. But this does not help us, and it is at least as likely that the name Corinne was merely introduced by way of flourish; for no source has been discovered for the latter part of the poem, which may have been entirely of his own invention. Cf. note to l. 8 above.

22. The verses from Statius, preserved in the MSS., are the three lines following; from Thebais, xii. 519:—

‘Jamque domos patrias Scythicæ post aspera gentis
Prælia laurigero subeuntem Thesea curru,
Lætifici plausus missusque ad sidera vulgi,’ &c.

The first line and half the second appear also in the MSS. of the Canterbury Tales, at the head of the Knights Tale, which commences, so to speak, at the same point (l. 765 in Lewis’s translation of the Thebaid). Comparing these lines of Statius with the lines in Chaucer, we at once see how he came by the word aspre and the expression With laurer crowned. The whole of this stanza (ll. 22–28) is expanded from the three lines here quoted.

23. Cithe, Scythia; see last note. See Kn. Tale, 9.

24. Cf. Kn. Tale, 169, 121.

25. Contre-houses, houses of his country, homes (used of Theseus and his army). It exactly reproduces the Lat. domos patrias. See Kn. Tale, 11.

29–35. Chaucer merely takes the general idea from Statius, and expands it in his own way. Lewis’s translation of Statius has:—

‘To swell the pomp, before the chief are borne
The spoils and trophies from the vanquish’d torn;’

but the Lat. text has—

‘Ante ducem spolia et duri Mauortis imago,
Virginei currus, cumulataque fercula cristis.’

And, just below, is a brief mention of Hippolyta, who had been wedded to Theseus.

30, 31. Cf. Kn. Tale, 117, 118. See note above.

36, 37. Cf. Kn. Tale, 23, 24; observe the order of words.

38. Repeated in Kn. Tale, 114; changing With to And.

Emelye is not mentioned in Statius. She is the Emilia of the Teseide; see lib. ii. st. 22 of that poem.

43–46. Cf. Kn. Tale, 14, 15, 169.

47. Here we are told that the story is really to begin. Chaucer now returns from Statius (whom he has nearly done with) to the Teseide, and the next three stanzas, ll. 50-70, are more or less imitated from that poem, lib. ii. st. 10-12.

50-56. Boccaccio is giving a sort of summary of the result of the war described in the Thebaid. His words are :—

‘Fra tanto Marte i popoli lernei
 Con furioso corso avie commossi
 Sopra i Tebani, e miseri trofei
 Donati avea de’ Principi percossi
 Più volte già, e de’ greci plebei
 Ritenuti tal volta, e tal riscossi
 Con asta sanguinosa fieramente,
 Trista avea fatta l’ una e l’ altra gente.’

57-63. Imitated from Tes. ii. 11 :—

‘Perciò che dopo Anfiarao, Tideo
 Stato era ucciso, e ’l buon Ippomedone,
 E similmente il bel Partenopeo,
 E più Teban, de’ qua’ non fo menzione,
 Dinanzi e dopo al fiero Capaneo,
 E dietro a tutti in doloroso agone,
 Eteocle e Polinice, ed ispedito
 Il solo Adraastro ad Argo era fuggito.’

See also Troilus, v. 1511-7.

57. Amphiorax; so in Troilus, ii. 105, v. 1512; Cant. Tales, 6323; and in Lydgate’s Siege of Thebes. Amphiaras is meant; he accompanied Polynices, and was swallowed up by the earth during the siege of Thebes; Statius, Thebais, lib. vii. (at the end); Dante, Inf. xx. 34. Tydeus and Polynices married the two daughters of Adrastus. The heroic acts of Tydeus are recorded in the Thebaid. See Lydgate, Siege of Thebes; or the extract from it in my Specimens of English.

58. Ippomedon, Hippomedon; one of the seven chiefs who engaged in the war against Thebes. Parthonopee, Parthenopæus, son of Meleager and Atalanta; another of the seven chiefs. For the account of their deaths, see the Thebaid, lib. ix.

59. Campaneus; spelt Cappaneus, Capaneus in Kn. Tale, 74; Troil. v. 1516. Thynne, in his Animadversions on Speght’s Chaucer (ed. Furnivall, p. 43), defends the spelling Campaneus on the ground that it was the usual medieval spelling; and refers us to Gower and Lydgate. In Pauli’s edition of Gower, i. 108, it is Capaneus. Lydgate has Campaneus; Siege of Thebes, pt. iii. near the beginning. Capaneus is the right Latin form; he was one of the seven chiefs, and was struck with lightning by Jupiter whilst scaling the walls of Thebes; Statius, Theb.

lib. x (at the end). Cf. Dante, Inf. xiv. 63. As to the form Campaneus, cf. Ital. Campidoglio with Lat. Capitolium.

60. 'The Theban wretches, the two brothers;' i. e. Eteocles and Polynices, who caused the war. Cf. Troil. v. 1518.

61. Adrastus, king of Argos, who assisted his son-in-law Polynices, and survived the war; Theb. lib. xi. 441.

63. 'That no man knew of any remedy for his (own) misery.' Care, anxiety, misery. At this line Chaucer begins upon st. 12 of the second book of the Teseide, which runs thus:—

'Onde il misero gente era rimasto
 Vôto¹ di gente, e pien d' ogni dolore;
 Ma a picciol tempo da Creonte invaso
 Fu, che di quello si fe' re e signore,
 Con tristo augurio, in doloroso caso
 Recò insieme il regno suo e l' onore,
 Per fiera crudeltà da lui usata,
 Mai da null' altro davanti pensata.'

Cf. Knights Tale, 80-4.

71. From this point onward, Chaucer's work is, as far as we know at present, original. He seems to be intending to draw a portrait of a queen of Armenia who is neglected by her lover, in distinct contrast to Emilia, sister of the queen of Scythia, who had a pair of lovers devoted to her service.

72. Ermony, Armenia; the usual M. E. form.

78. Of twenty yeer of elde, of twenty years of age; so in MSS. F., Tn., and Harl. 372. See note to l. 80.

80. Behelde; so in MSS. Harl., F.; and Harl. 372 has beheelde. I should hesitate to accept this form instead of the usual beholde, but for its occurrence in Gower, Conf. Amant., ed. Pauli, iii. 147:—

'The wine can make a creple sterte
 And a deliver man unwelde;
 It maketh a blind man to behelde.'

So also in the Moral Ode, l. 288, the Trinity MS. has the infin. behealde, and the Lambeth MS. has bihelde. It appears to be a Southern form, adopted here for the rime, like ken for kin in Book of the Duch. 438.

There is further authority; for we actually find helde for holde in five MSS. out of six, riming with welde (wolde); C. T., Group D, l. 272.

82. Penelope and Lucretia are favourite examples of constancy ; see C. T., Group B, 63, 75 (in my edit. of Prioresses Tale) ; Book Duch. 1081-2 ; Leg. Good Women, 252, 257.

84. Amended. Compare what is said of Zenobia ; C. T., B. 3444.

85. I have supplied Arcite, which the MSS. strangely omit. It is necessary to name him here, to introduce him ; and the line is else too short. Chaucer frequently shifts the accent upon this name, so that there is nothing wrong about either Arcite here, or Arcite in l. 92. See Kn. Tale, 173, 344, 361, &c. on the one hand ; and lines 1297, 1885 on the other. And see l. 140 below.

98. 'As, indeed, it is needless for men to learn such craftiness.'

105. A proverbial expression ; see Squi. Tale, 537. The character of Arcite is precisely that of the false tercelet in Part II. of the Squieres Tale ; and Anelida is like the falcon in the same. Both here and in the Squieres Tale we find the allusions to Lamech, and to blue as the colour of constancy ; see notes to ll. 146, 150, 161-9 below.

119. Cf. Squi. Tale, 569.

141. New-fungelnesse ; see p. 199, l. 1, and Squi. Tale, 610.

145. In her hewe, in her colours : he wore the colours which she affected. This was a common method of shewing devotion to a lady's service.

146. Observe the satire in this line. Arcite is supposed to have worn white, red, or green ; but he did not wear blue, for that was the colour of constancy. Cf. Squi. Tale, 644, and the note ; and see l. 330 below ; also p. 199, l. 7.

150. Cf. Squi. Tale, 550. I have already drawn attention to the resemblance between this poem and the Squieres Tale, in my note to l. 548 of that Tale. Cf. also Cant. Tales, 5636. The reference is to Gen. iv. 19—'And Lamech took unto him two wives.' In l. 154, Chaucer curiously confounds him with Jabal, Lamech's son, who was 'the father of such as dwell in tents' ; Gen. iv. 20.

155. Arcit-e ; trisyllabic, as frequently in Kn. Tale.

157. 'Like a wicked horse, which generally shrieks when it bites ;' Bell. This explanation is clearly wrong. The line is repeated, with the slight change of pleyne to whine, in C. T. 5968. To pleyne or to whine means to utter a plaintive cry, or to whinny ; and the sense is—'Like a horse, (of doubtful temper), which can either bite or whinny (as if wanting a caress).

161. Theef, false wretch ; cf. Squi. Tale, 537.

162. Cf. Squi. Tale, 462, 632.

166. Cf. Squi. Tale, 448.

169. Cf. Squi. Tale, 412, 417, 430, 631.

171. Al crampissheth, she draws all together, contracts compulsively; formed from cramp. I know of but four other examples of the use of this word.

In Lydgate's Flour of Curtesie, st. 7. printed in Chaucer's Works, ed. 1561, fol. 248, we have the lines:—

'I gan complayne min inwarde deedly smert
That aye so sore crampeshe at min hete.'

As this gives no sense, it is clear that crampeshe at is an error for crampisheth, which Lydgate probably adopted from the present passage, or else for crampished at (see below).

Again, I have a note that, in Lydgate's Life of St. Edmund, in MS. Harl. 2278, fol. 101, are the lines:—

'By pouert spoiled, which made hem sore smerte,
Which, as they thouhte, crampysshed at her herte.'

Skelton has encraumpysshed, Garland of Laurell, 16; and Dyce's note gives an example of crampfishing from Lydgate's Wars of Troy, bk. iv. sig. Xv. ed. 1555.

Once more, Lydgate, in his Fall of Princes, bk. i. c. 9 (pr. by Wayland, leaf 18, col. 2), has the line—

'Deth crampfishing into their hert gan crepe.'

175. In Kn. Tale, 1950, it is Arcite who says 'mercy!'

176. Read endur'th. Mate, exhausted.

177. Read n'hath. Sustene, support herself; cf. C. T. 11173.

178. Forth is here equivalent to 'continues'; is or dwelleth is understood. Read languitsshing.

180. Grene, fresh; probably with a reference to green as being the colour of inconstancy.

182. Nearly repeated in Kn. Tale, 1539.

183. If uþ is to be retained before so, change holdeth into halt. 'His new lady reins him in by the bridle so tightly, keeping him at the same time at the end of her stick, that he fears every word like an arrow.' The image is that of a horse, threatened continually by the end of a whip or stick, and so hardly reined in that he fears every word of the rider; he expects a cut with the whip, and he cannot get away.

193. Fee or shipe, fee or reward. The form shipe being scarce, many MSS. give corrupt readings. But it occurs in the Persones Tale, Group I, 568, where Chaucer explains it by 'hyre'; and in the Ayenbite of Inwyt, p. 33. It is the A.S. scipe. We find 'Stipendium, scipe'; Wright's Vocabularies, 113. 34.

194. Sent, short for sendeth; cf. serveth above. Cf. Book of Duch. 1024.

202. Also, as; 'as may God save me.'

206. Her ne gat no geyn, she obtained for herself no advantage.

211. The metre now becomes extremely artificial. The first stanza is introductory. Its nine lines are rimed aabaabbab, with only two rimes. I set back lines 3, 6, 7, 9, to shew the arrangement more clearly. The next four stanzas are in the same metre. The construction is obscure, but is cleared up by l. 350, which is its echo, and again by ll. 270-1. Swerd is the nom. case, and thirleth is its verb; 'the sword of sorrow, whetted with false complaisance, so pierces my heart, (now) bare of bliss and black in hue, with the (keen) point of (tender) recollection.' Chaucer's 'with . . . remembrance' is precisely Dante's 'Per la puntura della rimembranza'; Purg. xii. 20.

214. Cf. p. 215, l. 55.

215. Awhaped, amazed, stupified. To the examples in Murray's Dict. add—'Sole by himself, awhaped and amate'; Compl. of the Black Knight, 168. See the Glossary.

216. Cf. p. 217, l. 123.

218. That, who: relative to her above.

220. Observe how the stanza, which I here number as 1, is echoed by the stanza below, ll. 281-289; and so of the rest.

222. Nearly repeated below, p. 214, l. 35.

241. Founde, seek after; A. S. fundian. For founde, all the MSS. have be founde, but the be is merely copied in from be more in l. 240. If we retain be, then befounde must be a compound verb, with the same sense as before; but there is no known example of this verb, though the related strong verb befinden is not uncommon. But see l. 47 above.

247. Cf. p. 217, ll. 107, 108.

256-271. This stanza is in the same metre as that marked 5 below, ll. 317-332. It is very complex, consisting of 16 lines of varying length. The lines which I have set back have but four accents; the rest have five. The rimes in the first eight lines are arranged in the order aaabaaab; in the last eight lines this order is precisely reversed, giving bbbabbbba. There are but two rimes throughout. The difficulty of it is considerable.

260. Namely, especially, in particular.

262. 'Offended you, as surely as (I hope that) He who knows everything may free my soul from woe.'

265. This refers to ll. 113-5 above.

267. Read sav-e, mek-e; or the line will be too short.

270. Refers to ll. 211-3 above.

272. This stanza answers to that marked 6 below, ll. 333-341. It is the most complex of all, as the lines contain internal rimes. The lines are of the normal length, and arranged with the end-rimes aabaabbaab, as in the stanzas marked 1 to 4 above. Every line has an internal rime, viz. at the second and fourth accents. In ll. 274, 280, this internal rime is a feminine one, which leaves but one syllable (viz. nay, may) to complete these lines.

The expression 'swete fo' occurs again at p. 214, l. 41; also in Troil. v. 228. And cf. p. 215, ll. 64, 65.

279. 'And then shall this, which is now wrong, (turn) into a jest; and all (shall be) forgiven, whilst I may live.'

281. The stanza here marked 1 answers to the stanza so marked above; and so of the rest. The metre has already been explained.

286. 'There are no other fresh intermediate ways.'

299. 'And must I pray (to you), and so cast aside womanhood?' It is not for the woman to sue to the man. Compare l. 332.

302. 'And if I lament as to what life I lead.'

306. 'Your demeanour may be said to flower, but it bears no seed.' There is much promise, but no performance.

309. Holde, keep back. The spelling Averyll (or Auerill) occurs in MS. Harl. 7333, MS. Addit. 16165, and MSS. T. and P. It is much better than the Aprill or Aprille in the rest. I would also read Averill in Troil. i. 156.

313. Who that, whosoever. Fast, trustworthy.

315. If an animal is easily startled, it shews that it has not been properly tamed.

320. Chaunte-pleure. Godefroy says that there was a celebrated poem of the 13th century named Chantepleure or Pleure-chante; and that it was addressed to those who sing in this world and will weep in the next. Hence also the word was particularly used to signify any complaint or lament, or a chant at the burial-service. One of his quotations is:—'Heu brevis honor qui vix duravit per diem, sed longus dolor qui usque ad mortem, gallicè la chantepleure'; J. de Aluet, Serm., Richel. l. 14961, fol. 195, verso. And again:—

'Car le juge de vérité
Pugnira nostre iniquité
Par la balance d'équité

Qui où val de la chantepleure
 Nous boute en grant adversité
 Sanz fin à perpetuité,
 Et y parsevere et demeure.'

J. de Meung, Le Tresor, l. 1350; ed. Méon.

Tyrwhitt says:—'A sort of proverbial expression for singing and weeping successively [rather, little singing followed by much weeping]. See Lydgate, Trag. [i. e. Fall of Princes] st. the last; where he says that his book is 'Lyke Chantepleure, now singing now weeping.' In MS. Harl. 4333 is a Ballad which turns upon this expression. It begins: 'Moult vaut mieux pleure-chante que ne fait chante-pleure.' Clearly the last expression means, that short grief followed by long joy is better than brief joy followed by long grief. The fitness of the application in the present instance is obvious.

Another example occurs in Lydgate's Fall of Princes, bk. i. c. 7, lennyoy:—

'It is like to the chaunte-pleure,
 Beginning with ioy, ending in wretchednes.'

328. A furlong-wey meant the time during which one can walk a furlong, at three miles an hour. A mile-way is twenty minutes; a furlong-wey is two minutes and a half; and the double of it is five minutes. Such is the strict sense; which is, of course, not to be insisted on here.

330. Asure, true blue; the colour of constancy; see l. 332.

'Her habyte was of manyfolde colours,
 Watchet-blewe of fayned stedfastnesse,
 Her golde allayed like son in watry showres,
 Meynt with grenc, for chaunge and doublenesse.'

Lydgate's Fall of Princes, bk. vi. c. 1. st. 7.

So in Troil. iii. 885—'bere to him this blewe ring.' And see p. 199, l. 7, and the note.

332. 'And to pray to me for mercy.' Cf. ll. 299, 300.

338. They, i. e. your ruth and your truth.

341. 'My wit cannot reach, it is so weak.'

342. Here follows the concluding stanza of the Complaint.

344. Read—For I shal ne'er (or nev'r) est pütten.

346. See note to Parl. of Foules, 342.

350. This line re-echoes l. 211.

357. The reason why the Poem ends here is sufficiently obvious. Here must have followed the description of the temple of Mars, written in seven-line stanzas. But it was all rewritten in a new metre, and is preserved to us, for all time, in the famous passage in the Knights Tale; ll. 1109-1192. We have nothing to regret.

VIII. CHAUCERS WORDES UNTO ADAM.

Only extant in MS. T., written by Shirley, and in Stowe's edition of 1561. Dr. Koch says—'It seems that Stowe has taken his text from Shirley, with a few modifications in spelling, and altered Shirley's Scriveyn into scrivener, apparently because that word was out of use in his time. Scriveyn is O. Fr. escrivain, F. écrivain. Lines 3 and 4 are too long [in MS. T. and Stowe], but long and more are unnecessary for the sense, wherefore I have omitted them.' Mr. Sweet omits long, but retains more, though it sadly clogs the line. Again, in l. 2, we find for to, where for is superfluous.

2. Boece, Chaucer's translation of Boethius, an excellent edition of which has been published by Dr. Morris; it also occurs in the old editions of Chaucer's works. The treatise by Boethius is entitled De Consolatione Philosophiæ. Troilus, Chaucer's poem of Troilus and Creseyde; in 5 books, all in seven-line stanzas. It is partly taken from an Italian poem in eight-line stanzas called Filostrato, written by Boccaccio; but with many variations and large additions.

3. 'Thou oughtest to have an attack of the scab under thy locks, unless thou write exactly in accordance with my composition.'

IX. HOUSE OF FAME: BOOK I.

Written in three Books; but I number the lines consecutively throughout, for convenience; at the same time giving the separate numbering within marks of parenthesis. The title of the poem is expressly given at l. 663. The author gives his name as Geoffrey, l. 729.

Lydgate's Temple of Glass is partly imitated from the House of Fame; Warton, Hist. E. Poet. 1871, iii. 61.

For further remarks see the Preface.

ARGUMENT: BOOK I. A discussion on dreams. I will tell you my dream on the 10th of December. But let me first invoke Morpheus. May those who gladly hear me have joy; but may those who dislike my words have as evil a fate as Cræsus, king of Lydia! (1-110).

I slept, and dreamt I was in a temple of glass, dedicated to Venus. On a tablet of brass I found the opening words of Vergil's Æneid, after which I saw the destruction of Troy, the death of Priam, the flight of Æneas, the loss of Creusa, the voyage of Æneas to Italy, the storm at sea sent by Juno, the arrival of Æneas at Carthage, how kindly Dido received him, how Æneas betrayed and left her, causing Dido's lament and suicide. Similar falsehood was seen in Demophon, Achilles, Paris, Jason, Hercules, and Theseus. Next Æneas sailed to Italy, and lost Palinurus; he visited the lower regions, and there saw Anchises, Palinurus, Dido, and Deiphobus. Afterwards he warred in Italy, slew Turnus, and won Lavinia (111-467).

After this I went out of the temple, and found a large plain. Looking up, I saw an eagle above me, of enormous size and with golden feathers (468-508).

BOOK II. Such a strange vision as mine was never seen by Scipio, Nebuchadnezzar, Pharaoh, or Turnus. O Venus and Muses, help me to tell it! The great eagle swooped down upon me, seized me, and bore me aloft, and told me (in a man's voice) not to be afraid. I thought I was being borne up to the stars, like Enoch or Ganymede. The eagle then addressed me, and told me some events of my own life, and said that he would bear me to the House of Fame, where I should hear many wonderful things (509-710).

The House stood in the midst, between heaven, earth, and sea, and all sounds travelled thither. 'Geoffrey,' said he, 'you know how all things tend to seek their own proper place; a stone sinks down, whilst smokes flies up. Sound is merely broken air, and if you would know how all sounds come to Fame's House, observe how, when a stone is thrown into water, the rings made by the ripples extend from the spot where it fell till they reach the shore. Just so all earthly sounds travel till they reach Fame's House.' He then bade me look downwards, and asked me what I saw. I saw fields, hills, rivers, towns, and sea; but soon, he had soared so high that the whole earth dwindled to a point. I told him I was higher up than ever was Alexander, Scipio, Dædalus, or Icarus. He then bade me look upward; and I saw the zodiac and the milky way, and clouds, mist, snows, rains, and winds gathered beneath me. Then I thought of Boethius and Marcian, and their descriptions of heaven. The eagle would have taught me the names of the stars, but I cared not to learn. He then asked me if I could now hear the sounds that murmured in the House of Fame. I said they sounded like the beating of the sea on rocks (711-1045).

Then he set me down upon my feet in a way that led to the House, and bade me go forward; observing that I should find that the words that flew about in Fame's House assumed the outward forms of the men upon earth who uttered them (1046-90).

BOOK III. Apollo, aid me to write this last book! My rime is artless; I aim at expressing my thoughts only (1091-1109).

The House of Fame stood high upon a lofty rock, which I climbed laboriously. The rock was formed of ice. On the southern side it was covered with names, many of the letters of which were melted away. On the northern side, it was likewise covered with names, which remained unmelted and legible. On the top of the mountain I found a beautiful House, which I cannot describe though I remember it. It was all of beryl, and full of windows. In niches round about were harpers and minstrels, such as Orpheus, Arion, Chiron, and Glasgerion. Far from these, by themselves, was a vast crowd of musicians. There were Marsyas, Misenus, Joab, and others. In other seats were jugglers, sorcerers, and magicians; Medea, Circe, Hermes, and Coll Tregetour. I next beheld the golden gates. Then I heard the cries of those that were heralds to the goddess Fame. How shall I describe the great hall, that was plated with gold, and set with gems? High on a throne of ruby sat the goddess, who at first seemed but a dwarf, but presently grew so that she reached from earth to heaven. Her hair was golden, and she was covered with innumerable ears and tongues. Her shoulders sustained the names of famous men, such as Alexander and Hercules. On either side of the hall were huge pillars of metal. On the first of these, composed of lead and iron, was the Jew Josephus; the iron was the metal of Mercury, and the lead, of Saturn. Next, on an iron pillar, was Statius; and on other iron pillars were Homer, Dares, Dictys, Guido, and the English Geoffrey, who upbore the fame of Troy. On a pillar of iron, but covered over with tin, was Vergil; and beside him Ovid and Lucan. On a pillar of sulphur stood Claudian (1110-1512).

Next I saw a vast company, all worshipping Fame. These she rejected, but would say of them neither good nor bad. She then sent a messenger to fetch Æolus, the god of wind, who should bring with him two trumpets, namely of Praise and Slander. Æolus, with his man Triton, came to Fame. Then, as many undeserving suppliants approached her, she bade Æolus blow his black trump of Slander. He did so, and from it there issued a stinking smoke; and so this second company got renown, but it was evil. A third company sued to her, and she bade Æolus blow his golden trump of Praise. Straightway he did so, and the blast had a perfume like that of balm and roses. A fourth company, a very small one, asked for no fame at all, and their request was granted. A fifth company modestly asked for no fame, though they had done great things; but Fame bade Æolus blow his golden trumpet, till their praise resounded everywhere. A sixth company of idle men, who had done no good, asked for fame; and their request was granted. A seventh company made the same request; but Fame reviled them; Æolus blew his black trump, and all men laughed at them. An eighth company, of wicked men, prayed for good fame; but their request was refused. A ninth company, also of wicked men, prayed for a famous but evil name, and their request was granted. Among them was the wretch who set on fire the temple at Athens (1513-1867).

Then some man perceived me, and began to question me. I explained that I had come to learn strange things, and not to gain fame. He led me out of the castle and into a valley, where stood the house of Dædalus (i. e. the house of Rumour). This strange house was made of basket-work, and was full of holes, and all the doors stood wide open. All sorts of rumours entered there, and it was sixty miles long. On a rock beside it I saw my eagle perched, who again seized me, and bore me into it through a window. It swarmed with people, all of whom were engaged in telling news; and often their stories would fly out of a window. Sometimes a truth and a lie would try to fly out together, and became commingled before they could get away. Every piece of news then flew to Fame, who did as she pleased with each. The house of Dædalus was thronged with pilgrims, pardoners, couriers, and messengers, and I heard strange things. In one corner men were telling stories about love, and there was a crush of men running to hear them. At last I saw a man whom I knew not; but he seemed to be one who had great authority—(here the poem ends, being incomplete); ll. 1868-2158).

The general idea of the poem was plainly suggested by the description of Fame in Vergil, the house of Fame as described near the beginning of the twelfth book of Ovid's Metamorphosis, and various hints in Dante's Divina Commedia. For a close and searching comparison between the House of Fame and Dante's great poem, see the article by A. Rambeau in Engl. Studien, iii. 209.

1. For this method of commencing a poem with a dream, compare The Book of the Duchesse, Parl. of Foules, and The Romance of the Rose.

For discourses on dreams, compare the Nonne Preestes Tale, and the remarks of Pandarus in the fifth book of Troilus. Chaucer here propounds several problems; first, what causes dreams (a question answered at some length in the Nonne Preestes Tale, 103-118); why some come true and some do not (discussed in the same, 151-336); and what are the various sorts of dreams (see note to l. 7 below).

There is another passage in Le Roman de la Rose, which bears some resemblance to the present passage. It begins at l. 18699:—

'Ne ne revoil dire des songes,
S'il sunt voirs, ou s'il sunt mençonges;
Se l'en les doit du tout eslire,
Ou s'il sunt du tout à despire:
Porquoi li uns sunt plus orribles,
Plus bel li autre et plus paisible,
Selonc lor apparicions
En diverses complexions,
Et selonc lors divers corages
Des meurs divers et des aages:
Ou se Diex par tex visions
Envoie revelacions,
Ou li malignes esperiz,
Por metre les gens en periz;
De tout ce ne m'entremetrai.'

2. This long sentence ends at line 52.

7. This opens up the question as to the divers sorts of dreams. Chaucer here evidently follows Macrobius, who, in his Commentary on the Somnium Scipionis, lib. i. c. 3, distinguishes five kinds of dreams, viz. somnium, visio, oraculum, insomnium, and visum. The fourth kind, insomnium, was also called fantasma; and this provided Chaucer with the word fantome in l. 11. In the same line, oracles answers to the Lat. oracula. Cf. Ten Brink, Studien, p. 101.

18. The gendres, the (various) kinds. This again refers to Macrobius, who subdivides the kind of dream which he calls somnium into five species, viz. proprium, alienum, commune, publicum, and generale, according to the things to which they relate. Distauce of tymes, i. e. whether the thing dreamt of will happen soon, or a long time afterwards.

20. 'Why this is a greater (more efficient) cause than that.'

21. This alludes to the four chief complexions of men; cf. Nonne Prestes Tale, 104. The four complexions were the sanguine, phlegmatic, melancholy, and choleric; and each complexion was likely to have certain sorts of dreams. Thus, in the Nonne Preestes Tale, 108, the choleric man is said to dream of arrows, fire, fierce carnivorous beasts, strife, and dogs; whilst the melancholy man will dream of bulls and bears and black devils.

22. Reflexiouns, the reflections or thoughts to which each man is most addicted; see Parl. of Foules, 99-105.

24. 'Because of too great feebleness of their brain (caused) by abstinence,' &c.

43. Of propre kynde, owing to its own nature.

48. The y in By is run on to the a into avisións.

53. 'As respects this matter, may good befall the great clerks that treat of it.' Of these great clerks, Macrobius was one, and Jean de Meun another. Vincent of Beauvais has plenty to say about dreams in his Speculum Naturale, lib. xxvi.; and he refers us to Aristotle, Gregory (Moralia, lib. viii.), Johannes de Rupella, Priscianus (ad Cosdroe regem Persarum), Augustinus (in Libro de diuinatione dæmonum), Hieronimus (super Matheum, lib. ii.), Thomas de Aquino, Albertus, &c.

58. Repeated (nearly) from l. 1.

63. I here give the text as restored by Willert, who shows how the corruptions in ll. 62 and 63 arose. First of all dide was shifted into l. 62, giving as dide I; as in Caxton's print. Next, an additional now was put in place of dide in l. 63; as in P., B., F., and Th., and dide was dropped altogether. After this, F. turned the now of l. 64 into yow, and Cx. omitted it. See also note to l. 111.

64. 'Which, as I can (best) now remember.'

68. Pronounced fully:—With spē-ci-ál de-vó-ci-óun.

69. Morpheus; see Book of Duch. 137. From Ovid, Met. xi. 592-612; esp. ll. 602, 3:—

'Saxo tamen exit ab imo
Rivus aquæ Lethes.'

73. 'Est prope Cimmerios,' &c.; Met. xi. 592.

75. See Ovid, Met. xi. 613-5; 633.

76. That . . her is equivalent to whose; cf. Kn. Tale, 1852.

81. Cf. 'Colui, che tutto move,' i. e. He who moves all; Parad. i. 1.

88. Read pouért'; cf. Clerkes Tale, 816.

92. Read misdém-e; final e not elided.

93. Read málicibus.

98. 'That, whether he dream when bare-footed or when shod'; whether in bed by night or in a chair by day; i. e. in every case. The that is idiomatically repeated in l. 99.

105. The dream of Cræsus, king of Lydia, and his death vpon a gallows, form the subject of the last story in the Monkes Tale. Chaucer got it from the Rom. de la Rose, which accounts for the form Lyde. The passage occurs at l. 6513:—

'Cresus . . .
Qui refu roi de toute Lyde. . .
Qu'el vous vuet faire au gibet pendre.'

109, 110. The rime is correct, because abreyd is a strong verb. Chaucer does not rime a pp. with a weak pt. tense, which should have a final e. It is a point as to which he is very particular. According to Mr. Cromie's Rime-Index, there is just one exception, viz. in the Kn. Tale, 525, 526, where the pt. t. seyde is rimed with the 'pp. leyde.' But Mr. Cromie happens to have overlooked the fact that leyde is here not the pp., but the past tense! In other words, there is really no exception to Chaucer's usual practice in the whole of the Cant. Tales. Cf. Book of the Duchess, 192. In l. 109, he refers to l. 65.

111. Here again, as in l. 63, is a mention of Dec. 10. Ten Brink (Studien, p. 151) suggests that it may have been a Thursday; cf. the mention of Jupiter in ll. 608, 642, 661. If so, the year was 1383.

115. 'Like one that was weary with having overwalked himself by going two miles on pilgrimage.' The difficulty was not in the walking two miles, but in doing so under difficulties, such as going barefoot for penance.

117. Corseynt; O.F. cors seint, lit. holy body; hence a saint or sainted person, or the shrine where a saint was laid. See Robert of Brunne, Handlyng Synne, 8739:—

'And hys ymage ful feyre depeynte,
Ryzt as he were a cors seynt.'

See also P. Plowman, B. v. 539; Morte Arthure, 1164; and (the spurious) Chaucer's Dream, 942.

118. 'To make that soft (or easy) which was formerly hard.' The allusion is humorous enough; viz. to the bonds of matrimony. Here again Chaucer follows Jean de Meun, Rom. de la Rose, 8871 :—

‘Mariages est maus liens,
Ainsinc m’aist saint Juliens
Qui pelerins errans herberge,
Et saint Lienart qui defferge
Les prisonniers bien repentans,
Quant les voit à soi démentans;’

i. e. ‘Marriage is an evil bond—so may St. Julian aid me, who harbours wandering pilgrims; and St. Leonard, who frees from their fetters (lit. un-irons) such prisoners as are very repentant, when he sees them giving themselves the lie (or recalling their word).’ The ‘prisoners’ are married people, who have repented, and would recal their plighted vow.

St. Leonard was the patron-saint of captives, and it was charitably hoped that he would extend his protection to the wretched people who had unadvisedly entered into wedlock, and soon prayed to get out of it again. They would thus exchange the hard bond for the soft condition of freedom. ‘St. Julian is the patron of pilgrims; St. Leonard and St. Barbara protect captives’; Brand, Pop. Antiquities, i. 359. And, at p. 363 of the same, Brand quotes from Barnabee Googe :—

‘But Leonerd of the prisoners doth the bandes asunder pull,
And breaks the prison-doores and chaines, wherewith his church is full.’

St. Leonard’s day is Nov. 6.

119. The MSS. have slept-e, which is dissyllabic. Read sleep, as in C. T. Prol. 397.

120. Hence the title of one of Lydgate’s poems, the Temple of Glass, which is an imitation of the present poem.

130. Cf. the description of Venus’ temple (Kn. Tale, 1060), which is imitated from that in Boccaccio’s Teseide.

133. Cf. ‘naked fletyng in the large see . . . And on hire heed, ful semely for to see, A rose garland fresh and wel smellyng’; Kn. Tale, 1098.

137. ‘Hir dowves’; Kn. Tale, 1104. ‘Cupido’; id. 1105.

138. Vulcano, Vulcan; note the Italian forms of these names: Boccaccio’s Teseide has Cupido (vii. 54), and Vulcano (vii. 43). His face was brown with working at the forge.

143. A large portion of the rest of this First Book is taken up with a summary of the earlier part of Vergil’s Aeneid. We have here a translation of the well-known opening lines :—

'Arma virumque cano, Troiæ qui primus ab oris
Italiæ, fato profugus, Lauinia uenit
Littora.'

152. Synoun, Sinon; Aen. ii. 195.

153. With, i. e. who with; who is understood.

155. Made the hors broght, caused the horse to be brought. On this idiom, see my note to Man of Lawes Tale, 171.

158. Ilioun, Ilium. Ilium is only a poetical name for Troy; but the medieval writers often use it in the restricted sense of the citadel of Troy, where was the temple of Apollo and the palace of Priam. Thus, in the alliterative Troy-book, 11958, ylion certainly has this sense; and Caxton speaks of 'the palays of ylion'; see Spec. of English, ed. Skeat, p. 94. See also the parallel passage in the Nonne Preestes Tale, 535. Still more clearly, in the Leg. Good Women (Dido, 13), Chaucer says, of 'the tour Ilioun,' that it 'of the citee was the cheef dungeoun.'

160. Polite, Polites; Aen. ii. 526. Also spelt Polite in Troil. iv. 53.

163. Brende, was on fire; used intransitively, as in l. 537.

164-173. See Aen. ii. 589-733.

174. His refers to Aeneas; Aen. ii. 736.

177. Iulus and Ascanius were one and the same person; see Aen. i. 267. On the other hand, Brutus was not the same person as Cassius; see Monkes Tale, B. 3887.

182. Wente, foot-path; Aen. ii. 737. Cf. Book Duch. 398.

184. 'So that she was dead, but I know not how.' Vergil does not say how she died.

185. Gost, ghost; see Aen. ii. 772.

198. Here Chaucer returns to the first book of the Æneid, which he follows down to l. 256.

204. 'To blow forth, (with winds) of all kinds'; cf. Aen. i. 85.

219. Ioves, Jove, Jupiter. This curious form occurs again, ll. 586, 597, 630; see note to l. 586. It is an O. F. nominative, with the usual suffixed s which marks that case. Boccaccio has Giove.

226. Achate (trisyllabic), Achates, Aen. i. 312; where the abl. form Achate occurs.

239. The story of Dido is told at length in Le Rom. de la Rose, 13378; in The Legend of Good Women; and in Gower, Conf. Amantis, bk. iv., ed. Pauli, ii. 4. Chaucer now passes on to the fourth book of the Æneid, till he comes to l. 268 below.

272. 'It is not all gold that glistens.' A proverb which Chaucer took from Alanus de Insulis; see my note to Can. Yeoman's Tale, 962.

273. 'For, as sure as I hope to have good use of my head.' Brouke is, practically, in the optative mood. Cf. 'So mot I brouke wel myn eye tweye'; Nonne Preest. Tale, 479. The phrase occurs several times in the Tale of Gamelyn; see note to l. 334 of that poem in my edition.

280-283. These four lines occur in Thynne's edition only, but are probably quite genuine. It is easy to see why they dropped out; viz. owing to the repetition of the word fynde at the end of ll. 279 and 283. This is a very common cause of such omissions. See note to l. 504.

286. By, with reference to.

288. Gest, guest; Lat. aduena, Æn. iv. 591.

290. 'He that fully knows the herb may safely lay it to his eye.' So in Cotgrave's Dict., s.v. Herbe, we find; 'L'herbe qu'on cognoist, on la doit lier à son doigt'; Prov. Those, or that, which a man knowes best, he must use most.'

305. In the margin of MSS. F. and B. is here written:—'Cauete uos, innocentes mulieres.'

315. Swete herte; hence E. sweetheart; cf. l. 326.

329. I have no hesitation in inserting I after Agilte, as it is absolutely required to complete the sense. Read—Agilt' I yôw, &c.

343. Pronounce déterminen (i as ee in beet).

350. 'Fama, malum quo non aliud uelocius ullum,' Æn. iv. 174; quoted in the margin of MSS. F. and B.

351. 'Nichil occultum quod non reueletur'; Matt. x. 26: quoted in the margin of MSS. F. and B.

355. Seyd y-shamed be, said to be put to shame.

359. Eft-sones, hereafter again. In the margin of MSS. F. and B. we here find:—'Cras poterunt turpia fieri sicut heri.' By reading fieri turpia, this becomes a pentameter; but it is not in Ovid, nor (I suppose) in classical Latin.

361. Doon, already done. To done, yet to be done.

366. I read in for into (as in the MSS.). For similar instances, where the scribes write into for in, see Einkenkel, Streifzüge durch die Mittelengl. Syntax, p. 145.

367. In the margin of MSS. F. and B. is an incorrect quotation of Æn. iv. 548-9:—'tu prima furentem His, germana, malis oneras.'

378. Eneidos; because the books are headed Æneidos liber primus, &c.

379. See Ovid, Heroides, Epist. vii—Dido Æneæ.

380. Or that, ere that, before.

381. Only Th. has the right reading, viz. And nere it to longe to endyte (where longe is an error for long). The expressions And nor hyt were and And nere it were are both ungrammatical. Nere = ne were, were it not.

388. In the margin of F. and B. we find:—'Nota: of many vntrewe louers. Hospita, Demaphoon, tua te R[h]odopeia Phyllis Ultra promissum tempus abesse queror.' These are the first two lines of Epistola ii. in Ovid's Heroides, addressed by Phyllis to Demophoon. All the examples here given are taken from the same work. Epist. iii. is headed Briseis, Achilli; Epist. v., Oenone Paridi; Epist. vi., Hypsipyle Iasoni; Epist. xii., Medeu Iasoni; Epist. ix., Deianira Herculi; Epist. x., Ariadne Theseo. These were evidently suggested by the reference above to the same work, l. 379. See the long note to Group B, l. 61, in my edition of the Prioresses Tale.

Demophoon, son of Theseus, was the lover of Phyllis, daughter of king Sithon in Thrace; she was changed into an almond-tree.

392. His terme pace, pass beyond or stay behind his appointed time. He said he would return in a month, but did not do so. See the story in The Legend of Good Women. Gower (ed. Pauli, iii. 361) alludes to her story, in a passage much like the present one.

397. In the margin of F. and B.—'Ouidius. Quam legis a rapta Briseide litera venit'; Heroid. Ep. iii. 1.

401. In the same:—'Ut [miswritten Vbi] tibi Colc[h]orum memini regina uacauj'; Heroid. Ep. xii. 1.

402. In the margin of F. and B.:—'Gratulor Oechaliam'; Heroid. Ep. ix. 1; but Oechaliam is miswritten yotholia.

405. Gower also tells this story; ed. Pauli, ii. 306.

407. In F. and B. is quoted the first line of Ovid, Heroid. x. 1. Adriane, Ariadne; just as in C. T., Group B, l. 67. Gower has Adriagne.

409. 'For, whether he had laughed, or whether he had frowned'; i. e. in any case. Cf. l. 98.

411. 'If it had not been for Ariadne.' We have altered the form of this idiom.

416. Yle, isle of Naxos; see note to C. T. Group B, l. 68, in my edition of the Prioresses Tale.

429. The book, i. e. Vergil; Æn. iv. 252.

434. Go, gone, set out; correctly used. Chaucer passes on to Æneid, bk. v. The tempest is that mentioned in Æn. v. 10; the steersman is Palinurus, who fell overboard; Æn. v. 860.

439. See Æn. bk. vi. The isle intended is Crete, Æn. vi. 14, 23; which was not at all near (or 'besyde') Cumæ, but a long way from it. Æneas then descends to hell; sees Anchises (vi. 679); Palinurus (337); Dido (450); Deiphobus, son of Priam (495); and the tormented souls (580).

447. Which refers to the various sights in hell.

449. Claudian, Claudius Claudianus, who wrote De raptu Proserpinae about A.D. 400. Daunte is Dante, with reference to his Inferno.

451. Chaucer goes on to Æn. vii-xii, of which he says but little.

458. Lavyna is Lavinia; the form Lavina occurs in Dante, Purg. xvii. 37.

468. Accent Whan; compare the next line.

474. 'But I do not know who caused them to be made.'

475. Read ne in as nin; as in Squi. Tale, 35.

482. This waste space corresponds to Dante's 'gran diserto,' Inf. i. 64; or, still better, to his 'landa' (Inf. xiv. 8), which was too sterile to support plants. So again, l. 486 corresponds to Dante's 'arena arida e spessa,' which has reference to the desert of Libya; Inf. xiv. 13.

487. 'As fine [said of the sand] as one may see still lying.' Jephson says yet must be a mistake, and would read yt. But it makes perfect sense. Cx. Th. read at eye (put for at yë) instead of yet lye, which is perhaps better. At yë means 'as presented to the sight.'

498. Kenne, discern. The offing at sea has been called the kenning; and see Kenning in Halliwell.

500. More, greater. Imitated from Dante, Purgat. ix. 19, which Cary translates thus:—

'Then, in a vision, did I seem to view
A golden-feather'd eagle in the sky,
With open wings, and hovering for descent.'

Cf. also the descent of the angel in Purg. ii. 17-24.

504-7. The omission of these lines in F. and B. is simply due to the scribe slipping from bright in l. 503 to brighte in l. 507. Cf. note to l. 280.

HOUSE OF FAME: BOOK II.

511. Listeth, pleases, is pleased; the alteration (in MS. F.) to listeneth is clearly wrong, and due to confusion with herkneth above.

514. Isaye, Isaiah; actually altered, in various editions, to I saye, as if I meant 'I say.' The reference is to 'the vision of Isaiah'; Isa. i. 1; vi. 1. Scipioun, Scipio; see note to Parl. Foules, 31, and cf. Book of the Duch. 284.

515. Nabugodonosor, Nebuchadnezzar. The same spelling occurs in the Monkes Tale (Group B, 3335), and is a mere variant of the form Nabuchodonosor in the Vulgate version, Dan. i-iv. Gower has the same spelling; Conf. Amant. bk. i., near the end.

516. Pharo; spelt Pharao in the Vulgate, Gen. xli. 1-7. See Book of the Duchesse, 280-3.

Turnus; alluding to his vision of Iris, the messenger of Juno; Æneid ix. 6. Elcanor; this somewhat resembles Elkanah (in the Vulgate, Elcana), 1 Sam. i. 1; but I do not know where to find any account of his vision, nor do I at all understand who is meant.

518. Cipris, Venus, goddess of Cyprus; called Cipryde in Parl. Foules, 277. Dante has Ciprigna; Par. viii. 2.

519. Favour, favourer, helper, aid; not used in the ordinary sense of Lat. fauor, but as if it were formed from O. F. faver, Lat. fauere, to be favourable to. Godefroy gives an example of the O. F. verb faver in this sense.

521. Parnaso; the spelling is imitated from the Ital. Parnaso, i. e. Parnassus, in Dante, Par. i. 16. So also Elicon is Dante's Elicon, i. e. Helicon, Purg. xxix. 40. But the passage in Dante, which Chaucer here especially imitates is that in Inf. ii. 7-9:—

'O Muse, o alto ingegno, or m' aintate;
O mente, che scrivesti ciò ch' io vidi,
Qui si parrà la tua nobilitate.'

This Cary thus translates:—

'O Muses! O high genius, now vouchsafe
Your aid. O mind, that all I saw hast kept
Safe in a written record, here thy worth
And eminent endowments come to proof.'

Hence ye in l. 520 answers to Dante's Muse, the Muses; and Thought in l. 523 answers to Dante's mente. Cf also Parad. xviii. 82-87. And see the parallel passage in Anelida, 15-19.

The reason why Chaucer took Helicon to be a well rather than a mountain is because Dante's allusion to it is dubiously worded; see Purg. xxix. 40.

528. Engyne is accented on the latter syllable, as in Troil. ii. 565, iii. 274.

529. Egle, the eagle in l. 499; cf. ll. 503-7.

534. Partly imitated from Dante, Purg. ix. 28-30:—

'Poi mi parea che, più rotata un poco,
Terribil come fulgor discendesse,
E me rapisse suso infino al foco.'

Cary's translation is:—

'A little wheeling in his æry tour,
Terrible as the lightning, rushed he down,
And snatch'd me upward even to the fire.'

But Chaucer follows still more closely, and verbally, a passage in Machault's Jugement du Roi de Navarre, ed. Tarbé, 1849, p. 72, which has the words—

'la foudre
Que mainte ville mist en poudre';

i. e. literally, 'the foudre (thunder-bolt) which reduces many a town to powder.'

Curiously enough, almost the same words occur in Boethius, bk. i. met. 4, where Chaucer's translation has:—'ne þe wey of þonder-lyzt, þat is wont to smyte heyze toures.' It hence appears that Chaucer copies Machault, and Machault translates Boethius. There are some curious M. E. verses on the effects of thunder in Popular Treatises on Science, ed. Wright, p. 136.

Foudre represents the Lat. fulgur. One of the queer etymologies of medieval times is, that fulgur is derived a feriendo; Vincent of Beauvais, Spec. Nat. iv. 59. It was held to be quite sufficient, that both fulgur and ferire begin with f.

537. Brende, burnt, was set on fire. The idea is that of a falling thunderbolt, which seems to have been conceived of as being a material mass, set on fire by the rapidity of its passage through the air; thus confusing the flash of lightning with the fall of a meteoric stone. See Mr. Aldis Wright's note on thunder-stone, Jul. Cæs. i. 3. 49.

543. Hente, caught. We find a similar use of the word in an old translation of Map's Apocalypsis Goliæ, printed in Morley's Shorter Eng. Poems, p. 13:—

'And by and by I fell into a sudden trance,
And all along the air was marvellously hent.'

544. Sours, sudden ascent, a springing aloft. It is well illustrated by a passage in the Somp. Tale (C. T. 7520):—

'Therfor right as an hawk upon a sours
Up springeth into the aire, right so praieres
Of charitable and chast besy freres
Maken hir sours to Goddes eres two.'

It is precisely the same word as M. E. sours, mod. E. source, i. e. rise, spring (of a river). Etymologically, it is the feminine of O. F. sors, pp. of sordre, to rise (Lat. surgere). At a later period, the r was dropped, and the word was strangely confused in sound with the verb souse, to pickle. Moreover, the original sense of 'sudden ascent' was confused with that of 'sudden descent,' for which the correct term was (I suppose) swoop. Hence the old verb to souse, in the sense 'to swoop down,' or 'to pounce upon,' or 'to strike,' as in Shak. K. John, v. 2. 150; Spenser, F. Q. i. 5. 8; iii. 4. 16; iv. 3. 19, 25; iv. 4. 30; iv. 5. 36; iv. 7. 9. The sense of 'downward swoop' is particularly clear in Spenser, F. Q. ii. 11. 36:—

'Eft fierce retourning, as a faulcon fayre,
That once hath failed of her souse full neare,
Remounts againe into the open ayre,
And unto better fortune doth her-selfe prepayre.'

Such is the simple solution of the etymology of mod. E. souse, as used by Pope (Epilogue to Satires, Dial. ii. 15)—'Spread thy broad wing, and souse on all the kind.'

557. Cf. Dante, Inf. ii. 122:—'Perchè tanta viltà nel core allette?' Also Purg. ix. 46:—'Non aver tema.'

562. 'One that I could name.' This personal allusion can hardly refer to any one but Chaucer's wife. The familiar tone recalls him to himself; yet the eagle's voice sounded kindly, whereas the poet sadly tells us that his wife's voice sounded far otherwise: 'So was it never wont to be.' See Ward's Chaucer, pp. 84, 85; and cf. l. 2015 below.

573. It would appear that, in Chaucer, sēynt is sometimes dissyllabic; but it may be better here to use the feminine form seynt-e, as in l. 1066. Observe the rime of Mârie with cârie.

576. 'For so certainly may God help me, as thou shalt have no harm.'

586. Ioves, Jove, Jupiter; cf. l. 597. This remarkable form occurs again in Troil. ii. 1607, where we find the expression 'Ioves let him never thrive'; and again in Troil. iii. 3—'O Ioves doghter dere'; and in Troil. iii. 15, where Ioves is in the vocative case. The form is that of an O.F. nominative; cf. Charles, Jacques, Jules.

Stellifye, make into a constellation; 'whether will Jupiter turn me into a constellation.' This alludes, of course, to the numerous cases in which it was supposed that such heroes as Hercules and Perseus, or such heroines as Andromeda and Callisto were changed into constellations; see Kn. Tale, 1198. Cf. 'No wonder is thogh Iove hir stellife'; Leg. Good Women, prol. 525.

588. Perhaps imitated from Dante, Inf. ii. 32, where Dante says that he is neither Æneas nor Paul. Chaucer here refers to various men who were borne up to heaven, viz. Enoch (Gen. v. 24), Elijah (2 Kings ii. 11), Romulus, and Ganymede. Romulus was carried up to heaven by Mars; Ovid, Metam. xiv. 824. Ganymede was carried up to heaven by Jupiter in the form of an eagle; see Ovid, Metam. x. 160, where Ovid adds:—

'qui nunc quoque pocula miscet, invitaque Iovi nectar Iunone ministrat.'

In the passage in Dante (Purg. ix. 19-30) already alluded to above (note to l. 534), there is a reference to Ganymede (l. 23).

592. Boteler, butler. No burlesque is here intended. 'The idea of Ganymede being butler to the gods appears ludicrous to us, who are accustomed to see the office performed by menial servants. But it was not so in the middle ages. Young gentlemen of high rank carved the dishes and poured out the wine at the tables of the nobility, and grace in the performance of these duties was highly prized. One of the oldest of our noble families derives its surname from the fact that its founder was butler to the king'; Bell. So also, the royal name of Stuart is merely steward.

597. Therabout, busy about, having it in intention.

600-4. Imitated from Vergil's words of reassurance to Dante; Inf. ii. 49.

608. The eagle says he is Jupiter's eagle; 'Iouis ales,' Æn. i. 394.

614-640. A long sentence of 27 lines.

618. I supply goddesse, to complete the line. Cf. 'In worship of Venús, goddess of love'; Kn. Tale, 1046; and again, 'goddess,' id. 243, 299.

621. The necessity for correcting lytel to lyte is obvious from the rime, since lyte is rimes with dyltees. Chaucer seems to make lyte dissyllabic; it rimes with Arcite, Kn. Ta. 476, 1769, 1816; and with hermyte in l. 659 below. In the present case, the e is elided—lyt'is. For similar rimes, cf. nones, non is, C. T. Prol. 523; beryis, mery is, Non. Pr. Ta. 145; swevene is, id. 101.

623. In a note to Cant. Ta. 17354, Tyrwhitt says that perhaps cadence means 'a species of poetical composition distinct from riming verses.' But it is difficult to shew that Chaucer ever composed anything of the kind, unless it can be said that his translation of Boethius or his Tale of Melibeus is in a sort of rhythmical prose. It seems to me just possible that by rime may here be meant the ordinary riming of two lines together, as in the Book of the Duchess and the House of Fame, whilst by cadence may be meant lines disposed in stanzas, as in the Parliament of Fowles. There is nothing to shew that Chaucer had, at this period, employed the 'heroic verse' of the Legend of Good Women. However, we find the following quotation from Jullien in Littré's Dictionary, s. v. Cadence. 'Dans la prose, dans les vers, la cadence n'est pas autre chose que le rythme ou le nombre: seulement on y joint ordinairement l'idée d'une certaine douceur dans le style, d'un certain art dans l'arrangement des phrases ou dans le choix des mots que le rythme proprement dit ne suppose pas du tout.' This is somewhat oracular, as it is difficult to see why rhythm should not mean much the same thing.

639, 640. Cf. Troilus, i. 517, 518.

652. In a note upon the concluding passage of the Cant. Tales, Tyrwhitt says of the House of Fame:—'Chaucer mentions this among his works in the Leg. Good Women, verse 417. He wrote it while he was Comptroller of the Custom of Wools, &c. (see Bk. ii. l. 144-8 [the present passage]), and consequently after the year 1374.' See Ward's Chaucer, pp. 76, 77, with its happy reference to Charles Lamb and his 'works'; and compare a similar passage in the Prol. to Legend of Good Women, 30-6.

662. Cf. Dante, Inf. i. 113, which Cary thus translates:—

—'and I, thy guide,

Will lead thee hence through an eternal space.'

678. Long y-served, faithfully served for a long time, i.e. after a long period of devotion; alluding to the word servant in the sense of lover.

681. Alluding to sudden fallings in love, especially 'at first sight.' Such take place at hap-hazard; as if a blind man should accidentally frighten a hare, without in the least intending it. We find in Hazlitt's collection of Proverbs—'The hare starts when a man least expects it'; p. 373.

682. Iolytee and fare, happiness and good speed. The very same words are employed, but ironically, by Theseus in the Knight's Tale; ll. 949, 951. The hare also accompanies them; id. 952.

683. 'As long as they find love to be as true as steel.' Cf. Troilus, iv. 325:—'God leve that ye fynde ay love of stele.'

689. 'And more beards made in two hours,' &c. 'Yet can a miller make a clerkes berd'; (Reves Tale), C. T. 4094. 'Yet coude I make his berd': C. T. 5943. Tyrwhitt's note on the former passage is: 'make a clerkes berd,' i. e. cheat him. Faire la barbe is to shave, or trim the beard; but Chaucer translates the phrase literally, at least when he uses it in its metaphorical sense. Boccace has the same metaphor, Decamerone, viii. 10. Speaking of some exorbitant cheats, he says that they applied themselves 'non a radere, ma a scorticare huomini' [not to shave men, but to scarify them]; and a little lower—'si a soavemente la barbiera saputo menare il rasoio' [so agreeably did the she-barber know how to handle the razor]. Barbiera has a second and a bad sense; see Florio's Dictionary.

'Myght I thaym have spyde,
I had made thaym a berd.'

Towneley Mysteries, p. 144.

692. Holding in hond means keeping in hand, attaching to oneself by feigned favours; just as to bear in hand used to mean to make one believe a thing; see my note to Man of Lawes Tale, 620.

695. Lovedayes, appointed days of reconciliation; see Morris's note to Chaucer's Prol. 258, and my note to P. Plowman, B. iii. 157. 'What, quod she, maked I not a louedaie, bitwene God and mankind, and chese a maide to be nonpere [umpire], to put the quarell at ende?' Test. of Love, bk. i. ed. 1561, fol. 287.

698. Cornes, grains of corn; see note to Monkes Tale (Group B, 3225), in my edition of the Prioresses Tale, &c.

700. Wis, certainly; cf. i-wis. The i is short.

702. Impossible (accent on i); cf. Clerkes Tale, 713.

703. Pyes, mag-pies, chattering birds; Squi. Ta. 649.

708. Worthy for to leve, worthy to believe, worthy of belief.

712. Thyn owne book, i.e. the book you are so fond of, viz. Ovid's Metamorphoses, which Chaucer quotes so continually. Libraries in those days were very small (Cant. Ta. Prol. 294); but we may be almost certain that Chaucer had a copy of the Metamorphoses of his own. The reference here is to Ovid's description of the House of Fame, Metam. xii. 39-63. See Golding's translation of this passage in the Preface.

730. Cf. Dante, Par. i. 109, which Cary thus translates:—

‘All natures lean,
In this their order, diversely,’ &c.

738. That practically goes with hit falleth down, in l. 741. The sentence is ill-constructed, and not consistent with grammar, but we see what is meant.

742. By, with reference to (as usual in M.E.). Cf. Dante, Purg. xviii. 28, which Cary thus translates:—

‘Then, as the fire points up, and mounting seeks
His birth-place and his lasting seat,’ &c.

745. At his large, unrestrained, free to move.

746. Charge, a heavy weight, opposed to light thing. The verb seke is understood from l. 744. ‘A light thing (seeks to go) up, and a weight (tends) downwards.’ In Tyrwhitt's glossary, the word charge, in this passage, is described as being a verb, with the sense ‘to weigh, to incline on account of weight.’ How this can be made to suit the context, I cannot understand. Charge occurs as a sb. several times in Chaucer, but chiefly with the secondary sense of ‘importance’; see Kn. Tale, 426, 1429, and the Glossaries to the Prioresses Tale and Man of Lawes Tale. In the Clerkes Tale, 163, it means ‘weight,’ nearly as here.

750. Skilles, reasons. The above ‘reasons’ prove nothing whatever as regards the fish in the sea, or the trees in the earth; but the eagle's mode of reasoning must not be too closely enquired into. The fault is not Chaucer's, but arises from the extremely imperfect state of science in the middle ages. Chaucer had to accept the usual account of the four elements, disposed, according to their weight, in four layers; earth being at the bottom, then water, then air, and lastly fire above the air. See the whole scheme in Gower, Conf. Amant. bk. vii.; ed. Pauli, ii. 104: or Popular Treatises on Science, ed. Wright, p. 134.

765. So also in Cant. Tales, 7814 :—

‘every soun
Nis but of eir reverberacioun,
And ever it wasteth lite and lite aweye.’

The theory of sound is treated of in Vincent of Beauvais, Speculum Naturale, lib. iv. c. 14. The ancients seem to have understood that sound is due to the vibration of the air; see ll. 775, 779. Thus, in the treatise by Boethius, De Musica (to which Chaucer expressly refers in Non. Prest. Tale, l. 472), lib. i. c. 3, I find :—‘Sonus vero præter quendam pulsum percussionemque non redditur . . . Idcirco definitur sonus, aeris percussio indissoluta usque ad auditum.’

788. Experience, i. e. experiment. The illustration is a good one; I have no doubt that it is obtained, directly or at second-hand, from Boethius. Vincent of Beauvais, Spec. Nat. lib. xxv. c. 58, says :—‘Ad quod demonstrandum inducit idem Boetius tale exemplum: Lapis proiectus in medio stagni facit breuissimum circulum, et ille alium, et hoc fit donec vel ad ripas peruenerit vel impetus defecerit.’ This merely gives the substance of what he says; it will be of interest to quote the original passage, from the treatise De Musica, lib. i. c. 14, which chapter I quote in full :—

‘*Nunc quis modus sit audiendi disseramus. Tale enim quiddam fieri consuevit in uocibus, quale cum paludibus uel quietis aquis iactum eminus mergitur saxum. Prius enim in paruissimum orbem undam colligit, deinde maioribus orbibus, undarum globos spargit, atque eo usque dum fatigatus motus ab eliciendis fluctibus conquiescat. Semperque posterior et maior undula pulsu debiliori diffunditur. Quod si quid sit, quod crescentes undulas possit offendere, statim motus ille reuertitur, et quasi ad centrum, unde profectus fuerat, eisdem undulis rotundatur. Ita igitur cum aer pulsus fecerit sonum, pellit alium proximum, et quodammodo rotundum fluctum aeris ciet. Itaque diffunditur et omnium circumstantium (sic) simul ferit auditum, atque illi est obscurior uox, qui longius steterit, quoniam ad eum debilior pulsi aeris unda peruenit.*’

792. Covercle, a. pot-lid. Cotgrave cites the proverb—‘Tel pot tel couvercle, Such pot, such potlid, like master, like man.’

794. Wheel must have been glossed by cercle (circle) in an early copy; hence MSS. F. and B. have the reading—‘That whele sercle wol cause another whele,’ where the gloss has crept into the text.

798. Roundel, a very small circle; compas, a very large circle. Roundel is still a general term for a small circular charge in heraldry; if or (golden), it is called a bezant; if argent (white), it is called a plate; and so on. In the Sec. Non. Tale, 45, compas includes the whole world.

801. Multiplying, increasing in size.

805. 'Where you do not observe the motion above, it is still going on underneath.' This seems to allude to the depression between each undulation.

808. This is an easy way of getting over a difficulty. It is no easy task to prove the contrary of every false theory!

811. An air aboute, i. e. a surrounding layer, or hollow sphere, of air.

822. I would rather 'take it in game'; and so I accept it.

826. Fele, experience, understand by experiment.

827. I here take the considerable liberty of reading the mansioun, by comparison with l. 831. Those who prefer to read sum place stide, or som styde, or some stede, can do so! The sense intended is, obviously—'And that the dwelling-place, to which each thing is inclined to resort, has its own natural stead,' i. e. position. Fishes, for example, naturally exist in water; the trees, upon the earth; and sounds, in the air; water, earth, air, and fire being the four 'elements.' Cf. the phrase—'to be in his element.'

836. Out of, i. e. not in; answering to l. 838.

846. Referring to Ovid's description, Met. xiii. 39. 40.

'Orbe locus medio est inter terrasque fretumque
Coelestesque plagas, triplicis confinia mundi.'

I suspect that Ovid's triplicis confinia mundi is the origin of Chaucer's phrase tryne compas, in Sec. Non. Tale, 45.

857. The 'terms of philosophy' are all fully and remorselessly given by Gower, Conf. Amant. bk. vii.

861. It is remarkable that Chaucer, some years later, repeated almost the same thing in the introduction to his treatise on the Astrolabe, in somewhat different words, viz. 'curious enditing and hard sentence is full heuy atones for swich a child to lerne'; l. 32.

866. Lewedly, in unlearned fashion; in his Astrolabe, l. 42. Chaucer says he is 'but a lewd compilatour of the labour of olde Astrologiens.'

868. The eagle characteristically says that his reasons are so 'palpable,' that they can be shaken by the bills, as men shake others by the hand. It is perhaps worth adding that the word bill was too vulgar and familiar to be applied to a hawk, which had only a beak (the French term, whereas bill is the A. S. bile). 'Ye shall say, this hauke has a large beke, or a shortt beke; and call it not bille;' Book of St. Alban's, fol. a 6, back. The eagle purposely employs the more familiar term.

873. Chaucer meekly allows that the eagle's explanation is a likely one. He was not in a comfortable position for contradiction in argument, and so took a wiser course. The eagle resents this mild admission, and says he will soon find out the truth, 'top, and tail, and every bit.' He then eases his mind by soaring 'upper,' resumes his good temper, and proposes to speak 'all of game.'

888. Cf. Dante, Par. xxii. 128, which Cary thus translates:

'Look downward, and contemplate, what a world
Already stretch'd under our feet there lies.'

900. Unethes, with difficulty; because large animals could only just be discerned. The graphic touches here are excellent.

901. Rivér-es, with accent on the former e (pronounced as a in bare). Cf. Ital. riviera.

907. Prikke, a point. 'Al þe envyronyng of þe erþe aboute ne halt but þe resoun of a þrykke at regard of the gretnesse of heuene'; tr. of Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 7.

'And down fro thennes faste he gan avyse
This litel spot of erthe, that with the see
Enbraced is;' Troilus, bk. v. near the end.

'Vidi questo globo
Tal, ch' io sorriso del suo vil sembiante.'

Dante, Parad. xxii. 134.

See also Parl. Foules, 57, 58; and note that the above passage from Troilus is copied from the Teseide (xi. 2).

915. The note in Gilman's Chaucer as to Alexander's dreams, is entirely beside the mark. The word dreme (l. 917) refers to Scipio only. The reference is to the wonderful mode in which Alexander contrived to soar in the air in a car upborne by four gigantic griffins.

'Now is he won þurþe þar wingis vp to the wale cloudis;
So hiþe to heuen þai him hale in a hand-quile,
Midil-erth bot as a mylnestane, na mare, to him semed.'

Wars of Alexander, ed. Skeat (E. E. T. S.), 5523.

Macedo, the Macedonian.

916. King, kingly hero; not king in the strict sense. Dan Scipio, lord Scipio. See notes to Parl. Foules, 29; Book of the Duch. 284; Ho. Fame, 514.

919. Dedalus (i. e. Dædalus) and Ycarus (Icarus) are mentioned in the Rom. de la Rose, 5242; and cf. Gower, Conf. Amant. bk. iv., ed. Pauli, ii. 36; and Dante, Inf. xvii. 109. All take the story from Ovid, Metam. viii. 183. Dædalus constructed wings for himself and his son Icarus, and flew away from Crete. The latter flew too high, and the sun melted the wax with which some of the feathers were fastened, so that he fell into the sea and was drowned. Hence Dædalus is here called wrecche, i. e. miserable, because he lost his son; and Icarus nice, i. e. foolish, because he disobeyed his father's advice, not to fly too high.

922. Malt, melted. Gower has the same word in the same story; ed. Pauli, ii. 37.

925. Cf. Dante, Par. xxii. 19, which Cary thus translates:

'But elsewhere now I bid thee turn thy view.'

930. See note to l. 986 below, where the original passage is given.

931. This line seems to have been suggested by (and to refer solely to) the word citizein in l. 930. The note in Bell's Chaucer says: 'This appears to be an allusion to Plato's Republic.' If this be not right, I know of no better explanation.

932. Eyrisshe bestes, aerial animals; alluding to the signs of the zodiac, such as the Ram, Bull, Lion, Goat, Crab, Scorpion, &c.; and to other constellations, such as the Great Bear, Eagle, Swan, Pegasus, &c. Chaucer himself explains that the 'zodiak is cleped the cercle of the signes, or the cercle of the bestes; for zodia in langage of Grek sownyth bestes in Latyn tonge'; Astrolabe, part 1, § 21, l. 35. Cf. 'beasts' in Rev. iv. 6. The phrase recurs in l. 965 below; see also ll. 1003-7.

934. Goon, march along, walk on, like the Ram or Bull; flee, fly, like the Eagle or Swan. He alludes to the apparent revolution of the heavens round the earth.

936. Galaxye, galaxy, or milky way, formed by streaks of closely crowded stars; already mentioned in the Parl. of Foules, 56. Cary, in a note to Dante, Parad. xxv. 18, says that Dante, in the Convito, p. 74, speaks of la galassia—'the galaxy, that is, the white circle which the common people call the way of St. James'; on which Biscioni remarks:—'The common people formerly considered the milky way as a sign by night to pilgrims, who were going to St. James of Galacia; and this perhaps arose from the resemblance of the word galaxy to Galicia; [which may be doubted]. I have often,' he adds, 'heard women and peasants call it the Roman road, la strada di Roma.'

The fact is simply, that the Milky Way looks like a sort of road or street; hence the Lat. name uia lactea, as in Ovid, Metam. i. 168. Hence also the Roman peasants called it strada di Roma; the pilgrims to Spain called it the road to Santiago (Quarterly Review, Oct. 1873, p. 464); and the English called it the Walsingham way, owing to this being a route much frequented by pilgrims, or else Watling-street, which was a famous old road, and probably ran (not as usually said, from Kent to Cardigan Bay, but) from Kent to the Frith of Forth, see Annals of England, p. 6. The name of Vallant Streit (Watling Street) is given to the milky way in the Complaint of Scotland, ed. Murray, p. 58; and G. Douglas calls it Watling Streit in his translation of Vergil, Æn. iii. 516, though there is no mention of it in the original; see Small's edition of the Works of G. Douglas, vol. ii. p. 151. And again, it is called Wadlyng Strete in Henrysoun's Traitie of Orpheus; see Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary. See my note to P. Plowman, C. i. 52; Florence of Worcester, sub anno 1013; and Laws of Edward the Confessor, cap. 12.

942. Gower also relates this story (Conf. Amant. ii. 34), calling the sun Phebus, and his son Pheton, and using carte in the sense of 'chariot,' as Chaucer does. Both copy from Ovid, Metam. ii. 32-328.

944. Cart-hors, chariot-horses (plural). There were four horses, named Pyroeïs, Eous, Aethon, and Phlegon; Met. ii. 153. Hence gonne and beren are in the plural form; cf. l. 952.

948. Scorpioun, the well-known zodiacal constellation and sign; called Scorpius in Ovid, Met. ii. 196.

972. Boece, Boethius. He refers to the passage which he himself thus translates: 'I have for sothe swifte fetheres that surmounten the heyght of the heuene; whan the swifte thought hath clothed it-self in tho fetheres, it dispiseth the hateful erthes, and surmounteth the heyghenesse of the greet eyir; and it sēith the cloudes by-hynde hir bak'; bk. iv. met. i.

985. Marcian. Cf. C. T. 9606 (March. Tale):—

'Hold thou thy pees, thou poet Marcian,
That wrytest us that ilke wedding murie
Of hir, Philologie, and him, Mercurie.'

Martianus Minneus Felix Capella was a satirist of the fifth century, and wrote the Nuptials of Philology and Mercury, De Nuptiis Philologiæ et Mercurii, above referred to. It consists of two books, followed by seven books on the Seven Sciences; see Warton's Hist. E. Poetry, ed. 1871, iii. 77. 'Book viii (l. 857) gives a hint of the true system of astronomy. It is quoted by Copernicus;' Gilman.

986. Anteclaudian. The Anticlaudianus is a Latin poem by Alanus de Insulis, who also wrote the De Planctu Nature, alluded to in the Parl. of Foules, 316 (see note). This poem is printed in Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets, ed. Wright, pp. 268-428; see, in particular, Distinctio Quarta, capp. 5-8, and Distinctio Quinta, cap. 1; pp. 338-347. It is from this poem that Chaucer probably borrowed the curious word citizein (l. 930) as applied to the eyrisshe bestes (l. 932). Thus, at p. 338 of Wright's edition, we find—

'Aeris occultos aditus, secreta, latebras
 Altius inquirat Phronesis, sensuque profundo
 Vestigans, videt intuitu meliore vagantes
Aerios cives.'

So again, ll. 966-969 above may well have been suggested by these lines (on p. 340), and other similar lines:—

'Aeris excurso spatio, quo nubila coeli
 Nocte sua texunt tenebras, quo pendula nubes
 In se cogit aquas, quo grandinis ingruit imber,
 Quo certant venti, quo fulminis ira tumescit,
 Æthera transgreditur Phronesis.'

1003. Or him or here, or him or her, hero or heroine; e. g. Hercules, Perseus, Cepheus, Orion; Andromeda, Callisto (the Great Bear), Cassiopeia. Cf. Man of Lawes Tale, 460.

1004. Raven, the constellation Corvus; see Ovid, Fasti, ii. 243-266. Either bere; Ursa Maior and Ursa Minor.

1005. Ariones harpe, Arion's harp, the constellation Lyra; Ovid's Fasti, i. 316; ii. 76.

1006. Castor, Polux; Castor and Pollux; the constellation Gemini. Delphyne, Lat. Delphin; the constellation Delphin (Ovid, Fasti, i. 457) or Delphinus, the Dolphin.

'Astris Delphina recepit
 Iupiter, et stellas iussit habere nouem.'

Ovid's Fasti, ii. 117.

1007. Athalante does not mean Atalanta, but represents Atlante, the ablative case of Atlas. Chaucer has mistaken the form, having taken the story of the Pleiades (the seven daughters of Atlas and Pleione) from Ovid's Fasti, v. 83:—

'Hinc sata Pleione cum coelifero Atlante iungitur, ut fama est; Pleiadasque parit.'

1021. Up the heed, up with your head; look about you.

1022. 'St. Julian (to our speed); lo! (here is) a good hostelry.' The eagle invokes or praises St. Julian, because they have come to their journey's end, and the poet may hope for a good reception in the House of Fame. St. Julian was the patron saint of hospitality; see Chaucer's Prologue, 340. In Le Roman de la Rose, 8872, I find:—

'Ainsinc m'aïst saint Juliens,
Qui pelerins errans herberge.'

In Bell's Chaucer, i. 92, is the following: "Ce fut celluy Julien qui est requis de ceux qui cheminent pour avoir bon hostel"; Legende Dorée. Having by mischance slain his father and mother, as a penance, he established a hospital near a dangerous ford, where he lodged and fed travellers gratuitously.'

See Tale xviii. in the Gesta Romanorum, in Swan's Translation; Caxton's Golden Legende; and the Metrical Lives of Saints in MS. Bodley, 1596, fol. 4. 'I pray God and St. Julian to send me a good lodging at night'; translation of Boccaccio, Decam. Second Day, nov. 2; quoted in Swan's tr. of Gesta Romanorum, p. 372. See Warton, Hist. Eng. Poet., ed. Hazlitt, i. 247; ii. 58.

1024. 'Canst thou not hear that which I hear?'

1034. Peter! By St. Peter; a common exclamation, which Warton amazingly misunderstood, asserting that Chaucer is here addressed by the name of Peter (Hist. E. P., ed. Hazlitt, ii. 331, note 6); whereas it is Chaucer himself who uses the exclamation. The Wyf of Bathe uses it also, C. T. 6028; so does the Sumpnour, C. T. 6914; and the wife in the Shipman's Tale, C. T. 13144; and see l. 2000 below. See also my note to l. 665 of the Canon's Yeoman's Tale. But Warton well compares the present passage with Ovid, Met. xii. 49-52:—

'Nec tamen est clamor, sed parvæ murmura uocis;
qualia de pelagi, si quis procul audiat, undis esse solent: qualemve sonum, quum Iupiter atras increpuit nubes, extrema tonitrua reddunt.'

1044. Beten, beat. But the other reading byten (bite) seems better. Cf. Troil. iii. 737, and the common saying—'It won't bite you.'

1048. Cf. Dante, Purg. iii. 67-69. So also Inf. xxxi. 83.

1063. Lyves body, a person alive; lyves is properly an adverb.
 1066. Seynte; see note to l. 573. Seynte Clare, Saint Clara, usually Saint Clare, whose day is Aug. 12. She was an abbess, a disciple of St. Francis, and died A.D. 1253.

HOUSE OF FAME: BOOK III.

1091-1109. Imitated from Dante, Parad. i. 13-27. Compare ll. 1106, 1107, with Cary's translation—

'If thou to me of thine impart so much, . . .
 Thou shalt behold me of thy favour'd tree
 Come to the foot, and crown myself with leaves.'

And compare l. 1109 with—'Entra nel petto mio.'

1098. This shews that Chaucer occasionally, and intentionally, gives a syllable too little to the verse. In fact, he does so just below, in l. 1106; where Thou forms the first foot of the verse, instead of So thou, or And thou. This failure of the first syllable is common throughout the poem.

1109. Entreth is the imperative plural; see note to A. B. C. 17.

1116. 'Fama tenet, summaque domum sibi legit in arce'; Ovid, Met. xii. 43. Cf. Dante, Purg. iii. 46-48; also Ovid, Met. ii. 1-5.

1131. 'And swoor hir ooth by Seint Thomas of Kent'; C. T. 3291. It alludes to the celebrated shrine of Beket at Canterbury.

1136. Half, side; al the half, all the side of the hill which he was ascending, which we find was the south side (l. 1152).

1152. This suggests that Chaucer, in his travels, had observed a snow-clad mountain; the snow lies much lower on the north side than on the south side; see ll. 1160, 1163, 1164.

1159. What hit made, what caused it, what was the cause of it. 1167-80. This passage somewhat resembles one in Dante, Par. i. 4-12.

1177. Accent So, and slightly accent the; gret-e is dissyllabic. The line is not very pleasing.

1183. Gyle, Giles; St. Ægidius. His day is Sept. 1; see note to Can. Yem. Tale, 1185, where the phrase by seint Gyle recurs.

1189. Babewinnes is certainly meant; it is the pl. of babewin (O. Fr. babuin, Low Lat. babewynus, F. babouin), now spelt baboon. It was particularly used of a grotesque figure employed in architectural decoration, as in Early Eng. Allit. Poems, ed. Morris, B. 1411, where the pl. form is spelt baboynes, and in Lydgate, Chron. Troy, II. xi; both passages are given in Murray's Dict., s.v. Baboon. 'Babewyn, or babewen, detippus, ipos, figmentum, chimera'; Prompt. Parv. 'Babwyne, beest, baboyñ'; Palsgrave. In Shak. Mach. iv. 1. 37—'Coole it with a báboones blood'—the accent on the a is preserved. The other spellings are inferior or false.

1192. Falle, pres. pl., fall; (or perhaps fallen, the past participle).

1194. Habitacles, niches; such as those which hold images of saints on the buttresses and pinnacles of our cathedrals. They are described as being al withoute, all on the outside.

1196. Ful the castel, the castle (being) full, on all sides. This line is parenthetical.

1197. Understand Somme, some, as nom. to stoden. 'In which stood . . (some) of every kind of minstrels.' So in l. 1239. As to minstrels, &c., see my note to Sir Topas (B. 2035).

1203. Orpheus, the celebrated minstrel, whose story is in Ovid, Met. x. 1-85; xi. 1-66. Chaucer again mentions him in C. T. 9590; and in Troil. iv. 791.

1205. Orion; so in all the copies; put for Arion. His story is in Ovid, Fasti, ii. 79-118.

Spelt Arione in Gower, Conf. Amant. (end of prologue), ed. Pauli, i. 39. We might read Arion here; see l. 1005.

1206. Chiron; called Chiro in Gower, C. A. ii. 67 (bk. iv). Chiron, the centaur, was the tutor of Achilles; and Achilles, being the grandson of Æacus, was called Æacides; Ovid, Met. xii. 82; Fasti, v. 390. Hence Eacides is here in the genitive case; and Eacides Chiron means 'Achilles' Chiron,' i. e. Chiron, tutor of Achilles. In fact, the phrase is copied from Ovid's Æacide Chiron, Art of Love, i. 17. Another name for Chiron is Phillyrides; Ovid, Art of Love, i. 11; or Philyrides; Verg. Georg. iii. 550; cf. Ovid, Fasti, v. 391. In a similar way, Chaucer calls the paladin Oliver, friend of Charles the Great, by the name of Charles Olyuer; Monkes Tale, B. 3577.

1208. Bret, Briton, one of the British. This form is quite correct, being the A.S. Bret, a Briton (see A.S. Chronicle, an. 491), commonly used in the pl. Brettas. This correct spelling occurs in MS. B. only; MS. P. turns it into Bretur, Th. and Cx. read Briton, whilst MS. F. turns Bret into gret, by altering the first letter. The forms gret and Bretur are clearly corruptions, whilst Briton spoils the scansion.

Glascurion; the same as Glasgerion, concerning whom see the Ballad in the Percy Folio MS., ed. Hales and Furnivall, i. 246. Of this 'a traditional version, under the name of Glenkindie, a various form of Glasgerion, is given in Jamieson's Popular Songs and Ballads, and in Alex. Laing's Thistle of Scotland (1823).' G. Douglas associates 'Glaskeriane' with Orpheus in his Palice of Honour, bk. i (ed. Small, i. 21); this poem is a palpable imitation of Chaucer's House of Fame. The name is Celtic, as the epithet Bret implies. Cf. Irish and Welsh glas, pale.

1213. 'Or as art imitates nature.' Imitated from Le Rom. de la Rose, where Art asks Nature to teach her; l. 16233 is—

'E la contrefait comme singes.'

1218. There is a similar list of musical instruments in Le Rom. de la Rose, 21285-21308:—

'Puis chalemiaus, et chalemele
Et tabor, et fléute, et timbre . . .
Puis prent sa muse, et se travaille
As estives de Cornoaille.'

And in Le Remède de Fortune, by G. de Machault, 1849, p. 87, is a similar long list:—

'Cornemuses, flaios, chevettes,
Dousainnes, cimbales, clochettes,
Timbre, la flahute brehaigne,
Et le grant cornet d'Alemaigne,
Flaiot de saus, fistule, pipe' ; &c.

And a few lines below there is mention of the muse de blez (see note to l. 1224). Warton, Hist. E. Poet., ed. Hazlitt, iii. 177, quotes a similar passage from Lydgate's poem entitled Reason and Sensualite, ending with—

'There were trumpes, and trumpettes,
Lowde shallys [shalmys?] and doucettes.'

Cornemuse is a bagpipe; shalmye is a shawm, which was a wind-instrument, being derived from Lat. calamus, a reed; Chaucer classes both instruments under pipe. Willert (on the House of Fame, p. 36) suggests (and, I think, correctly) that doucet and rede are both adjectival. Thus doucet would refer to pipe; cf. 'Doucet, dulcet, pretty and sweet, or, a little sweet'; Cotgrave. Rede would also refer to pipe, and would mean 'made with a reed.' A reed-instrument is one 'in which the sound was produced by the vibration of a reed, as in the clarinet or hautboys'; note in Bell's Chaucer. There is no instrument properly called a doucet in Old French, but only dousainne (see above) and doucine (Godefroy).

1222. Brede, roast meat; A. S. bræde, glossed by 'assura, vel assatura' in Ælfric's Glossary, ed. Wülcker, col. 127, l. 17. Cf. G. Braten. Not elsewhere in Chaucer, but found in other authors.

'To meit was greithed beef and motoun,
Bredes, briddes, and venysoun.'

Kyng Alisaunder, ed. Weber, 5248.

In the allit. Morte Arthure, it occurs no less than five times. Also in Havelok, l. 98, where the interpretation 'bread' is wrong. Also in Altenglischer Dichtungen, ed. Böddeker, p. 146, l. 47—'Cud as Cradoc in court that carf the brede,' i. e. carved the roast meat; but the glossary does not explain it. The scribe of MS. F. turns brede into bride, regardless of the rime.

1224. Alluding to the simple pipes fashioned by rustics. The glossary to Machault's Works (1849) has: 'Muse de blez, chalumeau fait avec des brins de paille.' The O. F. estive, in the quotation in the note to l. 1218, has a like sense. Godefroy has: 'estive, espèce de flûte, de flageolet ou pipeau rustique, qui venait, ce semble, de Cornouaille.' Cf. the term corne-pipe, in the Complaint of Scotland, ed. Murray, p. 65, l. 22.

1227, 1228. Nothing is known as to Atiteris (or Cytherus); nor as to Pseustis (or Proserus). The forms are doubtless corrupt; famous musicians or poets seem to have been intended. I shall venture, however, to record my guess, that Atiteris represents Tyrtaeus, and that Pseustis is meant for Thespis. Both are mentioned by Horace (Ars Poet. 276, 402); and Thespis was a native of Attica, whose plays were acted at Athens.

1229. This is a curious example of how names are corrupted. Marcia is Dante's Marsia, mentioned in the very passage which Chaucer partly imitates in ll. 1091-1109 above. Dante addresses Apollo in the words—

'Entra nel petto mio, e spira tue
Si come quando Marsia traesti
Della vagina delle membra sue.'

As Chaucer had here nothing to guide him to the gender of Marsia, he guessed the name to be feminine, from its termination; and Dante actually has Marzia (Inf. iv. 128), with reference to Marcia, wife of Cato. But Dante's Marsia represents the accus. case of Marsyas, or else the Lat. nom.

Marsya, which also occurs. Ovid. Met. vi. 400, has: 'Marsya nomen habet,' and tells the story. Apollo defeated the satyr Marsyas in a trial of musical skill, and afterwards flayed him alive; so that he 'lost his skin.'

1231. Envyen (accent on y), vie with, challenge (at a sport). So strong is the accent on the y, that the word has been reduced in E. to the clipped form 'vie'; see Vie in my Etym. Dict. It represents Lat. inuitare, to challenge; and has nothing to do with E. envy. Florio's Ital. Dict. has: 'Inuito, a vie at play, a vie at any game; also an inuiting.'

1234. 'Pipers of every Dutch (German) tongue.'

1236. Reyes, round dances, dances in a ring. The term is Dutch. Hexham's Du. Dict. (1658), has: 'een Rey, or een Reye, a Daunce, or a round Daunce'; and 'reyen, to Daunce, or to lead a Daunce.' Cf. G. Reihen, a dance, Reihentanz, a circular dance; M. H. G. reie, reige; which does not seem to be connected, as might be thought, with G. Reihe, a row; see Kluge and Weigand. Perhaps the Du. word was borrowed from O. F. rei, roi, order, whence also the syllable -ray in E. ar-ray; and the G. word may have been borrowed from the Dutch. 'I can daunce the raye'; Barclay's First Egloge, sig. A ii. ed. 1570; quoted in Dyce's Skelton, ii. 194.

1239. Understand Somme, some; see note to l. 1197. The expression bloody soun recurs in Kn. Tale, 1653, in connection with trumpe and clarioun. Our author explains his meaning here; ll. 1241-2.

1243. Missenus, Misenus, son of Æolus, trumpeter to Hector, and subsequently to Æneas; Verg. Æn. iii. 239; vi. 162-170.

1245. Joab and Theodomas are again mentioned together in a like passage in the Merch. Tale (C. T. 9593). 'Joab blew a trumpet'; 2 Sam. ii. 28; xviii. 16; xx. 22. Theodomas is said by Chaucer (Merch. Tale) to have blown a trumpet 'At Thebes, when the cite was in doute.' He was therefore a trumpeter mentioned in some legendary history of Thebes. With this hint, it is easy to identify him with Thiodamas, mentioned in books viii. and x. of the Thebaid of Statius. He succeeded Amphiarus as augur, and furiously excited the besiegers to attack Thebes. His invocation was succeeded by a great sound of trumpets (Theb. viii. 343), to which Chaucer here refers. But Statius does not expressly say that Thiodamas blew a trumpet himself.

1248. Cataloigne and Aragon, Catalonia and Arragon, in Spain, immediately to the S. of the Pyrenees. Warton remarks:

'The martial musicians of English tournaments, so celebrated in story, were a more natural and obvious allusion for an English poet'; Hist. E. P. ii. 331. The remark is, I think, entirely out of place. Chaucer is purposely taking a wide range; and, after mentioning even the pipers of the Dutch tongue, as well as Joab of Judæa and Thiodamas of Thebes, is quite consistent in mentioning the musicians of Spain.

1257. Repeated, at greater length, in C. T., Group B, ll. 19-28; see my edition of the Prioresses Tale, p. 2.

1259. Jogelours, jugglers. See Squi. Tale, 219.

1260. Tregetours; see C. T. 11453, on which Tyrwhitt has a long note. A jogelour was one who amused people, either by playing, singing, dancing, or tricks requiring sleight of hand; a tregetour was one who brought about elaborate illusions, by the help of machinery or mechanical contrivance. Thus Chaucer tells us (in the Frank. Tale, as above) that tregetoures even caused to appear, in a dining-hall, a barge floating in water, or what seemed like a lion, or a vine with grapes upon it, or a castle built of lime and stone; which vanished at their pleasure. Sir John Maundeville, in his Travels, ch. 22, declares that the 'enchanters' of the Grand Khan could turn day into night, or cause visions of damsels dancing or carrying cups of gold, or of knights justing; 'and many other things thei don; be craft of hire Enchaumentes; that it is marveyle for to see.' See note to l. 1277 below. Gawain Douglas imitates this passage in his Palice of Honour; see his Works, ed. Small, i. 65.

1261. Phitonesses, pythoneses. The witch of Endor is called a phitonesse in the Freres Tale, C. T. 7092; and in Gower, Conf. Amant. bk. iv, ed. Pauli, ii. 66; and in Barbour's Bruce, ed. Skeat, iv. 753. The Vulgate version has mulier bythonem habens, 1 Sam. xxviii. 7 (cf. Acts xvi. 16); but also the very word pythonissam in 1 Chron. x. 13, where the witch of Endor is again referred to. Ducange notices phitonissa as another spelling of pythonissa.

1266. Cf. Chaucer's Prologue, 417-420. There is a parallel passage in Dante, Inf. xx. 116-123, where the word imago occurs in the sense of 'waxen image.' This of course refers to the practice of sticking needles into a waxen image, with the supposed effect of injuring the person represented. See Ovid, Heroid. vi. 91, and Ben Jonson's Masque of Queens (3rd Charm). But this is only a particular case of a much more general principle. Images of men or animals (or even of the things representing the zodiacal signs) could be made of various substances, according to the effect intended ; and by proper treatment were supposed to cause good or evil to the patient, as required. Much could be done, it was supposed, by choosing the right time for making them, or for subjecting them to celestial influences. To know the right time, it was necessary to observe the ascendent (see note to l. 1268). See much jargon on this subject in Cornelius Agrippa, De Occulta Philosophia, lib. ii. capp. 35-47.

1268. The ascendent is that point of the zodiacal circle which is seen to be just ascending above the horizon at a given moment. Chaucer defines it in his Treatise on the Astrolabe, and adds that astrologers, in calculating horoscopes, were in the habit of giving it a wider meaning ; they further reckoned in 5 degrees of the zodiac above the horizon, and 25 degrees below the ascending point, so as to make the whole ascendent occupy 30 degrees, which was the length of a 'sign.' In calculating nativities, great importance was attached to this ascendent, the astrological concomitants of which determined the horoscope. The phrase to be 'in the ascendant' is still in use. Thus in certeyn ascendentes is equivalent to 'in certain positions of the heavens, at a given time,' such as the time of one's birth, or the time for making an image (see last note).

1271. Medea, the famous wife of Jason, who restored her father Æson to youth by her magical art ; Ovid, Met. vii. 162. Gower tells the whole story, C. A. bk. v. ed. Pauli, ii. 259.

1272. Circes, Circe, the enchantress ; Homer's Odyssey, bk. x ; Ovid, Met. xiv. Ovid frequently has the form Circes, in the gen. case ; Met. xiv. 10, 69, 71, 247, 294.

Calipsa, Calypso, the nymph who detained Ulysses in an island, Odyssey, bk. i ; Ovid, ex Ponto, iv. 10. 13.

1273. Hermes is mentioned in the Can. Yeom. Tale, C. T., Group G, 1434, where the reference is to Hermes Trismegistus, fabled to have been the founder of alchemy, though none of the works ascribed to him are really his. He is here called Hermes Ballenus, for no apparent reason ; unless Hermes and Ballenus are two different persons. The name Balenus occurs, in company with the names of Medea and Circe, in the following passage of the Rom. de la Rose, l. 14599 :—

'Que ja riens d'enchantement croie,
Ne sorcerie, ne charroie,
Ne Balenus, ne sa science,
Ne magique, ne nigromance, . . .
Onques ne pot tenir Medée

Jason por nul enchantement,
 N'onc Circe ne tint ensemment
 Ulixes qu'il ne s'enfoïst,' &c.

(Charroie is the dance of witches on their sabbath). Some suggest that Balenus stands for Helenus (Æn. iii. 295, 329).

1274. Lymote, according to Warton, is Limotheus; but he omits to tell us where he found such a name; and the suggestion seems no better than his mistake of supposing Calipsa (l. 1272) to mean the muse Calliope! Considering that he is mentioned in company with Simon Magus, or Simon the magician (Acts viii. 9), the suggestion of Prof. Hales seems probable, viz. that Lymote means Elymas the sorcerer (Acts xiii. 8). The change from Elymas to Lymote is not impossible.

1277. Colle tregetour, Colle the jugg'er; see l. 1260. Colle is here a proper name, and distinct from the prefix col- in col-fox, Non. Pr. Tale, 394. Colle is the name of a dog; Non. Pr. Tale, 563. Colyn and Colle are names of grooms; Polit. Songs, p. 237. Tyrwhitt quotes a passage from The Testament of Love, bk. ii:—'Buserus [Busiris] slew his gestes, and he was slayne of Hercules his gest. Hugest betraished many menne, and of Collo was he betraied'; ed. 1561, fol. 301, col. 2. With regard to tregetour, see the account of the performances of Eastern jugglers in Yule's edition of Marco Polo; vol. i. p. 342, and note 9 to Bk. i. c. 61. Col. Yule cites the O.F. forms tregiteor and entregetour; also Ital. tragettatore, a juggler, and Prov. trasjitar, trajitar, to juggle. Bartsch, in his Chrestomathie Française, has examples of trasgeter, to mould, form, tresgeteis, a work of mechanical art; and, in his Chrestomathie Provençale, col. 82, has the lines—

'Non saps balar ni tras-gitar
 a guiza de juglar gascon';

i. e. thou know'st not how to dance, nor how to juggle, after the manner of a Gascon juggler. A comparison of the forms leaves no doubt as to the etymology. The Prov. trasgitar answers to a Low Lat. form trans-iectare = tra-iectare, frequentative of Lat. trans-icere, tra-icere, to throw across, transfer, cause to pass. Thus, the orig. sense of tregetour was one who causes rapid changes, by help of some mechanical contrivance. The F. trajecter, to ferry, transport, in Cotgrave, is the same word as the Prov. trasgitar, in a different (but allied) sense.

1292. 'As is the usual way with reports.'

1295. Accent Which and so.

1297. 'And yet it was wrought by hap-hazard quite as often as by heed.'

1300. To longe, too long; not 'to dwell long.' The barbarous practice of inserting an adverb between to and an infinitive, as in 'to ungrammatically talk,' is of later date. Cf. l. 1354.

1302. Elide the former Ne; read N'of.

1303. Read—Ne óf th'hacking' in másoneries; i. e. nor about the cutting out in the masonry, as, for example, into corbets, full of carved work; according to MS. P. But, on the whole, it is better to follow the alternative reading in MS. B., viz. 'how they hatte in masoneries,' i. e. how they were named in masonry-work, as, for example, corbets full of carved work. Hatte, were named; from A. S. hátan.

1304. Corbettes, corbels. Florio's Ital. Dict. has: 'Corbella, Corbetta, a little basket'; shewing the equivalence of the forms. The E. corbel is the same word as O. F. corbel (F. corbeau), which is the masc. form corresponding to Ital. corbella; all from the Lat. corbis. The spelling with z (= ts) in MSS. F. and B. shews that the form is really corbettes, not corbelles. Spenser has the simple form corb; F. Q. iv. 10. 6:—

'It was a bridge ybuilt in goodly wise

With curious corbes and pendants graven faire.'

'A Corbel, Corbet, or Corbill in masonrie, is a utting out like a bragget [bracket] as carpenters call it, or shouldering-peece in timber-work'; Minsheu's Dict. ed. 1627. Tyrwhitt wrongly explains corbettes by 'niches for statues'; probably because he followed the reading in MS. B—full of ymageries. But 'imageries' are not statues or images, but only specimens of carved work. Scan the line—As córbettés and ímagéries.

1309. 'A bounty! a bounty! hold up (your hands) well (to catch it).' Sir W. Scott explains largesse as 'the cry with which heralds and pursuivants were wont to acknowledge the bounty received from the knights'; note to Marmion, canto i. st. 11. The word is still in use amongst gleaners in East Anglia; see my note to P. Plowman, C. viii. 109.

1316, 1317. Kinges, i. e. kings-at-arms; losinges, lozenges (with g as j).

1326. Cote-armure, surcoat; see Gloss. to Knight's Tale, ed. Morris.

1330. Ben aboute, used like the old phrase go about.

1346. Wikke, poor, much alloyed.

1352. Lapidaire, 'a treatise on precious stones, so entitled; probably a French translation of the Latin poem of Marbodius De Gemmis, which is frequently cited by the name of Lapidarius; Fabricius, Bibl. Med. Æt., in v. Marbodius'; Tyrwhitt's Glossary. The Lapidarium of Abbot Marbodius (Marbœuf), composed about 1070-80, is chiefly taken from Pliny and Solinus. A translation in English verse is given in King's Antique Gems. See note to l. 1363 below. There is some account of several precious stones in Philip de Thau's Bestiary, printed in Wright's Popular Treatises on Science; at p. 127 he refers to the Lapidaire. Vincent of Beauvais refers to it repeatedly, in book viii. of his Speculum Naturale. There is a note about this in Warton, Hist. E. P. ed. 1871, ii. 324.

1360. Dees, daïs; see Morris's note to Prol. 370.

1361. The reading Sit would mean 'sitteth' or 'sits'; the reading Sat would mean 'sat.' Both are wrong; the construction is sitte I saugh = I saugh sitte, I saw sit; so that sitte is the infin. mood.

1363. Carbuncle. Vincent of Beauvais, Spec. Nat. bk. viii. c. 51, has: 'Carbunculus, qui et Græcè anthrax dicitur, vulgariter rubith.' An account of the Carbunculus is given in King's Natural History of Precious Stones and Gems. He remarks that the ruby 'must also be included among the numerous species of the carbunculus described by Pliny, although he gives the first rank to the Carbunculi amethystizontes, our Almandines or Garnets of Siam.' See also his Antique Gems, where he translates sect. 23 of the Lapidarium of Marbodius thus:—

'The Carbuncle eclipses by its blaze
All shining gems, and casts its fiery rays
Like to the burning coal; whence comes its name,
Among the Greeks as Anthrax known to fame.
Not e'en by darkness querched, its vigour tires;
Still at the gazer's eye it darts its fires;
A numerous race; within the Lybian ground
Twelve kinds by mining Troglydytes are found.'

1376. Sterres sevene, the seven planets.

1380. Tolde, counted; observe this sense.

1383. Bestes foure, four beasts; Rev. iv. 6. Cf. Dante, Purg. xxix. 92.

1386. Thynne remarks that oundy, i. e. wavy, is a term in heraldry; cf. E. ab-ound, red-ound, surr-ound (for sur-ound); all from Lat. unda.

1390. 'And tongues, as (there are) hairs on animals.' 'Her feet are furnished with partridge-wings to denote swiftness, as the partridge is remarkable for running with great swiftness with outstretched wings. This description is taken almost literally from the description of Fame in the Æneid [iv. 176-183], except the allusion to the Apocalypse and the partridge-wings'; note in Bell's Chaucer. But it is to be feared that Chaucer simply blundered, and mistook Vergil's pernicibus as having the sense of perdicibus; cf. 'pedibus celerem et pernicibus alis'; Aen. iv. 180.

1400. Caliope, Calliope the muse; her eight sisters are the other Muses. With ll. 1395-1405 cf. Dante, Par. xxiii. 97-111.

1411. Read—Bóth-e th'árnes. Armes, i. e. coats of arms.

1413. Alexander; see Monkes Tale, in my edition of Prioresses Tale, p. 51. Hercules; see the same, p. 35; the story of the shirt is on p. 36 (C. T., Group B, 3309-3324). In Le Roman de la Rose, l. 9238, it is called 'la venimeuse chemise.' Cf. Dante, Inf. xii. 68.

1431. Lede, lead, the metal of Saturn; yren, iron, the metal of Mars. See note to l. 820 of Can. Yeom. Tale (in my edition of the Man of Lawes Tale); and ll. 827, 828 of the same; also ll. 1446, 1448 below.

1433. Read—Th'Ebráyk Jósephús. In a note on Gower's Conf. Amantis, Warton remarks—'Josephus, on account of his subject, had long been placed almost on a level with the Bible. He is seated on the first pillar in Chaucer's House of Fame. His Jewish History, translated into Latin by Rufinus in the fourth century, had given rise to many old poems and romances; and his Maccabaics, or History of the seven Maccabees, martyred with their father Eleazar under the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, a separate work translated also by Rufinus, produced the Judas Maccabee of Belleperche in the year 1240, and at length enrolled the Maccabees among the most illustrious heroes of romance'—ed. Hazlitt, iii. 26.

1436. Iewerye, kingdom of the Jews; cf. Prior. Tale, B. 1679.

1437. Who the other seven are, we can but guess; the reference seems to be to Jewish historians. Perhaps we may include Moses, Joshua, Samuel, Isaiah, Daniel, Nehemiah; and, in any case, Ezra. The number seven was probably taken at random. With l. 1447 cf. Troil. ii. 630.

1450. Wheel, orbit. The orbit of Saturn is the largest of the (old) seven planets; see Kn. Tale, 1596. The reason why Josephus is placed upon Saturn's metal, is because history records so many unhappy casualties, such as Saturn's influence was supposed to cause. All this is fully explained in the Kn. Tale, 1597-1611.

1457. Yren, the metal of Mars; see note to l. 1431.

1459. This allusion to 'tiger's blood' is curious; but is fully accounted for by the account of the two tigers in bk. vii. of the Thebaid. A peace had nearly been made up between the Thebans and the other Greeks, when two tigers, sacred to Bacchus, broke loose, and killed three men. They are then wounded by Aconteus, whereupon 'They fly, and flying, draw upon the plain A bloody line'; according to Lewis's translation. They fall and die, but are avenged; and so the whole war was renewed. Lydgate reduces the two tigers to one; see his chapter 'Of a tame Tigre dwelling in Thebes'; in part 3 of his Sege of Thebes.

1460. Stace (as in Troil. bk. v, near the end, and Kn. Tale, 1436) is Publius Papinius Statius, who died A.D. 96, author of the Thebais and Achilleis (see l. 1463), the latter being left incomplete. Tholosan means Toulousan, or inhabitant of Tholouse; and he is here so called because by some (including Dante, whom Chaucer follows) he was incorrectly supposed to have been a native of Toulouse. He was born at Naples, A.D. 61. Dante calls him Tolosano in Purg. xxi. 89, on which Cary remarks:—'Dante, as many others have done, confounds Statius the poet, who was a Neapolitan, with a rhetorician of the same name, who was of Tolosa or Thoulouse. Thus Chaucer; and Boccaccio, as cited by Lombardi: "E Stazio di Tolosa ancora caro"; Amoros. Vis. cant. 5.'

1463. 'Cantai di Tebe, e poi del grande Achille'; Dante, Purg. xxi. 92.

1466. Omere, Homer; see ll. 1477-1480 below.

1467. In Chaucer's Troil. i. 146, is the line—'In Omere, or in Dares, or in Dyte.' Dares means Dares Phrygius; and Tytus is doubtless intended for the same person as Dyte, i. e. Dictys Cretensis. See the account in Warton, Hist. E. Poet., ed. Hazlitt, ii. 127, beginning:—'But the Trojan story was still kept alive in two Latin pieces, which passed under the names of Dares Phrygius and Dictys Cretensis,' &c.; and further in vol. iii. p. 81. The chief source of the romantic histories of Troy in the middle ages is the Roman de Troie by Benoit de Sainte-Maure, which appeared between 1175 and 1185, and has lately been edited by M. Joly. This was copied by Guido de Colonna (see note to l. 1469 below), who pretended, nevertheless, to follow Dares and Dictys.

1468. Lollius; evidently supposed by Chaucer to be a writer on the Trojan war. See Tyrwhitt's note on the words the boke of Troilus, as occurring at the end of the Persones Tale. Chaucer twice quotes Lollius in Troilus, viz. in bk. i. 394 and bk. v. 1652. At the beginning of sect. xiv of his Hist. of Eng. Poetry, Warton shews that there was a Lollius Urbicus among the Historici Latini profani of the third century; 'but this could not be Chaucer's Lollius; . . . none of his works remain.' The difficulty has never been cleared up; we know, however, that the Troilus is chiefly taken from Boccaccio's Fiiostrato, just as his Knight's Tale is chiefly taken from Boccaccio's Teseide. My idea of the matter is that, in the usual mode of appealing to old authorities, Chaucer refers us (not to Boccaccio, whom he does not mention, but) to the authorities whom he supposed Boccaccio must have followed. Accordingly, in his Troilus, he mentions Homer, Dares, Dictys, and Lollius, though he probably knew next to nothing of any one of these authors. Accordingly, the suggestion made by Dr. Latham (Athenæum, Oct. 3, 1868, p. 433) seems quite reasonable, viz. that he (or some one else) got the idea that Lollius wrote on the Trojan war by misunderstanding the lines of Horace, Epist. i. 2:—

'Troiani belli scriptorem, maxime Lolli,
Dum tu declamas Romæ, Præneste relegi.'

See Ten Brink, Studien, p. 87.

1469. Guido de Colonna, or Guido delle Colonne, or Guido de Columnis, finished his translation or version of Benoit de Sainte-Maure's Roman de Troie in the year 1287. His work is called Historia Troiana. The 'Geste Hystoriale' of the Destruction of Troy, edited by Panton and Donaldson for the Early English Text Society, is a translation of Guido's Historia into Middle English alliterative verse. See Warton, Hist. E. P., ed. Hazlitt, iii. 81.

1470. Gaufride, Geoffrey, viz. Geoffrey of Monmouth, who died A.D. 1154, and wrote a History of the Britons in Latin, full of extravagant but lively fictions, which was completed in 1147; see Morley's Hist. E. Writers, i. 496. He is rightly mentioned among the writers who 'bore up Troy,' because he makes the Britons the descendants of Æneas. See note below.

1477. Oon seyde, one (of them) said. Guido was one of those who said this; this appears from the Gest Hystoriale above mentioned, which was translated from Guido; see ll. 41-47, and 10312-10329 of Panton and Donaldson's edition. Guido asserts; for example, that Achilles slew Hector by treachery, and not, as Homer says, in fair fight; and Chaucer asserts the same, Troil. v. 1570. The fact is, that the Latin races declined to accept an account which did not sufficiently praise the Trojans, whom they regarded as their ancestors. Geoffrey of Monmouth ingeniously followed up this notion, by making the Trojans also the ancestors of the ancient Britons. Hence English writers followed on the same side; Lydgate, as well as Chaucer, exclaims against Homer. See Warton, ed. Hazlitt, iii. 82. But Dante exalts Homer above Horace, Ovid, and Lucan: Inf. iv. 88.

1482. 'Homer's iron is admirably represented as having been by Virgil covered over with tin'; note in Bell's Chaucer.

1487. Ovide, Ovid; from whom perhaps Chaucer borrows more than from any other Latin writer. He stands on a pillar of copper, the metal sacred to Venus. See note to l. 820 of Can. Yeom. Tale, in my edition of the Man of Lawes Tale.

1494. High the (as in F.) is an error for highthe, height; Cx. Th. have heyght.

1499. Lucan; alluding to Lucan's Pharsalia, which narrates the war between Cæsar and Pompey. See Man of Lawes Tale, 401; Monkes Tale, C. T., Group B, 3909 (and note), and a fourth mention of him near the end of Troilus. There is an English translation by Rowe.

1509. Claudius Claudianus, in the fourth century, wrote a poem De Raptu Proserpinæ, alluded to here and in the Merchant's Tale (C. T. 10106), and several other pieces.

1512. Imitated from Dante, Inf. ix. 44—'Della regina dell' eterno pianto.'

1519. Write, wrote; pt. t. pl. Highte, were named.

1521. Again from Dante, Inf. xvi. 1, which Cary translates:—

'Now came I where the water's din was heard, . . .
Resounding like the hum of swarming bees,
When forth together issued from a troop,' &c.

1527. Cf. Ovid, Met. xii. 53—'Atria turba tenent; ueniunt leue uulgu, euntque.'

1530. Alles kinnes is in the gen. sing., and Of governs condiciouns; thus the line is equivalent to—'Of conditions of every kind'; whereas modern English uses—'Of every kind of condition.' This peculiar idiom was formerly common; and precisely similar to it is the phrase noskinnes, for which see note to l. 1794. Observe that the phrase is oddly written alle skynnes in MS. F., by a misdivision of the words. So in Piers.

Plowman. A. ii. 175, we have the phrase for eny kunnes yiftus, for gifts of any kind, where one MS. has any skynes. In my note to P. Plowman, C. xi. 128, I give numerous examples, with references, of phrases such as none kynnes riche, many kynnes maneres, summes kunnes wise, what kyns schape, &c.

1550. 'Those that did pray her for her favour.'

1564. 'Because it does not please me.'

1570. I here alter Vpon peyne to Vp peyne, as the former will not scan, and the latter is the usual idiom. See up peyne in Kn. Tale, 849, 1685; Man of Lawes Tale, 795, 884. Cf. vp the toft, upon the toft, P. Plowman, B. i. 12; vp erthe, upon earth, id. B. ix. 99.

1571. Cf. Rom. Rose, 18206—'Car Eolus, li diex des vens.' From Vergil, Æn. i. 52; cf. Ovid, Met. xiv. 223, where Æolus is said to reign over the Tuscan sea. The connection of Æolus with Thrace is not obvious; cf. l. 1585. But it may have been suggested by Ovid's 'Threicio Borea'; Art. Am. ii. 431.

1596. Tok to, delivered to. Triton, Triton; imitated from Ovid, Met. i. 333, where Neptune calls Triton, and bids him sound his 'shell,' the sound of which resounded everywhere.

1618. Wite is badly spelt wete or wote in the MS. copies; but the very phrase wite ye what occurs in C. T., Group E, 2431, in my edition of the Prioresses Tale, p. 102.

1643. A pelet was a stone ball, such as used to be fired from the earliest kind of cannon, of which this is a very early mention. See my glossary to P. Plowman (Clar. Press).

1670. Lat gon, let go, lay aside.

1702. The word turned, which is dissyllabic, has evidently been substituted here in the printed editions and in MS. P. for the older and rare word clew, which does not occur elsewhere in Chaucer. The line means—'With that (therupon) I rubbed my head all round'; which is a rustic way of expressing perplexity. The verb clawen, to scratch, stroke, is not uncommon, but the usual pt. t. is clawed. We find, however, at least one other example of the strong form of the past tense in the Seven Sages, ed. Weber, l. 925—'He clew the bor on the rigge,' he stroked the boar on the back, and made him go to sleep; cf. 'thi maister the clawes,' i. e. your master strokes you, to flatter you, in l. 937 of the same. Chaucer has: 'to clawe [rub] him on his hele' [heel], Troil. iv. 728; 'he clawed him on the bak,' he stroked him on the back, to encourage him, Cook's Prol. 2 (where clew would serve equally well). See claw in Jamieson's Scot. Dict.

1708. 'They would not give a leek.' Cf. 'dere ynough a leke'; Can. Yeom. Tale, Group G, 795.

1740. 'Although no brooch or ring was ever sent us.'

1742-4. 'Nor was it once intended in their heart to make us even friendly cheer, but they might (i. e. were ready to) bring us to our bier'; i. e. so far from caring to please us, they would be satisfied to see us dead.

The M.E. temen, to produce, to bring, is the same word as mod. E. teem, to produce. To temen on bere is parallel to the old phrase to bringen on bere; cf. Gaw. Douglas, tr. of Æneid, bk. x. ch. 10, l. 138, (ed. Small, iii. 326), where brocht on beyr means 'brought to their grave.' See Bier in Murray's Dictionary.

1747. For wood, as (if) mad, 'like mad.' The same phrase recurs in Leg. Good Women, Phyllis, l. 27; cf. as it were wood, Kn. Tale, 2092.

1761. The name, the name of it, the credit of it.

1777. Masty (miswritten maisty in F., but masty in the rest) means fat, fattened up, and hence unwieldy, sluggish. Bell alters it to maisy, and Moxon's edition to nastie; both being wrong. Palsgrave has: 'Masty, fatte, as swyne be, gras.' The Promp. Parv. has: 'Mast-hog or swyne, [or] mastid swyne, Maialis'; and: 'Mastyn beestys, sagino, impinguo.' Way rightly explains masty as 'glutted with acorns or berries'; cf. 'Acorne, mast for swyne, gland,' in Palsgrave. See The Former Age, l. 37.

1779. Wher, whether, 'is it the case that?'

1782. As the word oughte is never followed by to with a following gerund, it is certain that to-hangen is all one word, the prefix to- being intensive. MSS. F. and B. omit to, but the rest have it, and the syllable is wanted. I know of no other example of to-hangen, to hang thoroughly, but this is of little moment. The prefix to- was freely added to all sorts of verbs expressing strong action; Stratmann gives more than a hundred examples.

1783. We must read sweynte, the form preserved in MS. B, where the final e is adjectival. The reading swynt is false, being an error for sweynte. The reading slepy is a mere gloss upon this rare word, but fairly expresses the meaning. Bell's Chaucer has swynt, which the editor supposes to be put for swinkt = swinked, pp. of swinken, to toil, as in Milton's 'swinkd hedger'; Comus, 293. He is, however, entirely wrong, for Milton's swink'd is quite a late form; in Chaucer's time the verb swinken was strong, and the pp. was swunken! Chaucer has queynt as the pp. of quenchen, Kn. Tale, 1463; and dreynt as the pp. of drenchen, Non. Prest. Tale, 262. Similarly sweynt is the pp. of swenchen, to cause to toil, to fatigue, tire out, the causal verb formed from the aforesaid strong intransitive verb swinken, to toil. For examples, see swenchen in Stratmann; I may instance: 'Euwer feond eou ne scal . . . swenchen,' your enemies shall not harass you, Old Eng. Homilies, ed. Morris, i. 13; and 'hi swencten swiçe heom-seolfe,' they sore afflicted themselves, id. 101. Moreover, sweynte is here treated as if it were dissyllabic, the e denoting the def. adjective. Hence, 'the sweynte cat' means the over-toiled or tired out cat; or, secondarily, a cat that will take no trouble, a slothful or sleepy cat, as the gloss says. Compare Gower, Conf. Amant. ed. Pauli, ii. 39, where the same cat is brought forward as an example of the deadly sin of Sloth:—

'For he [a knight] ne wol no travail take
To ride for his ladies sake,
But liveth al upon his wissches,
And—as a cat wolde ete fisshes
Withoute weting of his clees—
So wolde he do, but netheles
He failleth ofte of that he wolde.'

The 'adage' is referred to in Macbeth, i. 7. 45. It occurs in MS. Harl. 2321, fol. 146, printed in Reliq. Antiquæ, i. 207, in the form: 'The cat doth love the fishe, but she will not wett her foote.' In Heywood's Proverbs, 1562 (p. 28, ed. Spenser Soc.): 'The cat would eate fyshe, and would not wet her feete.' So also in Camden's Remains, 1614, p. 312. Hazlitt gives a rimed version:—

'Fain would the cat fish eat,
But she's loth to wet her feet.'

In Piers the Plowman's Crede, 405, is the allusion:—

'Thou woldest not weten thy fote, and woldest fich cacchen.'

In a medieval Latin verse, it appears as: 'Catus amat piscem, sed non vult tingere plantam'; see Proverbialia Dicteria . . . per A. Gartnerum, 1574, 8vo. Ray quotes the French: 'Le chat aime le poisson, mais il n'aime pas à mouiller la patte.' The German form is—'Die Katze hätt' der Fische gern; aber sie will die Füße nit nass machen'; N. and Q. 4 S. ix. 266.

1794. Noskinnes; miswritten no skynnes in MSS. F. and B.; Th. and Cx. no kyns. Nos-kinnes is short for noneskinnes, of no kind; noskinnes labour is 'work of no kind'; in mod. E. 'no kind of work.' It also occurs without the former s; as in no kyne catel, property of no kind, P. Plowm. C. xi. 250; none kynnes riche, rich men of no kind, id. B. xi. 185. Cf. also of foure kunne thinges, of things of four kinds, of four kinds of things, where one MS. has of foure skynnes thinges; P. Plowm. A. x. 2. And see note to l. 1530 above.

1796. Bele Isaude, Isaude (or Isoude, or Isolde) the fair; here a type of a high form of female beauty. See Parl. Foules, 290; and the note.

1798. 'She that grinds at a hand-mill'; a poor slave.

1810. Her (their) refers to the 'seventh company.' 'Such amusement they found in their hoods'; a phrase meaning 'so much did they laugh at them'; see Troil. ii. 1110. Cf. the phrase 'to put an ape in a man's hood,' i. e. to make him look like an ape, or look foolish; see note to C. T., Group B, 1630, in my edition of the Prioresses Tale.

1823. 'Then a company came running in.'

1824. Choppen, strike downwards. They began hitting people on the head, regardless of consequences. The same expression occurs in Richard the Redeless, iii. 230—'And ich man i-charchid to schoppe at his croune'; where i-charchid = i-charged, i. e. was charged, was commanded, and schoppe = choppe.

1840. Pale, a perpendicular stripe; chiefly used as an heraldic term. The object of the conspicuous stripe upon the hose was to draw men's attention to him; for the same reason, he wore a bell on his tippet, and, in fact, his dress resembled that of the professional fool. Paled or striped hose were sometimes worn by one in the height of the fashion.

'Buskins he wore of costliest cordwayne,
Pinckt upon gold, and paled part per part,
As then the guize was for each gentle swayne.'

Spenser, F. Q. vi. 2. 6.

I. e. his buskins were adorned with golden dots or eyelets, and regularly intersected with stripes arranged perpendicularly.

1844. Isidis, Isis; Isidis being a form of the genitive case. Chaucer doubtless refers to Herostratus, the wretch who set fire to the temple of Diana at Ephesus, in order to immortalise his name. Why Diana here appears as Isis, and Ephesus as Athens, I cannot explain. Perhaps it was due to a defect of memory; we are apt to forget how very largely medieval authors had to trust to their memories for names and facts. It is almost impossible for us moderns, with our facilities for reference, to imagine what were the difficulties of learned men in the olden time. Perhaps Chaucer was thinking of Ovid's line (ex Ponto, i. 1. 51)—'Uidi ego linigeræ numen uiolasse fatentem Isidis.'

'See, Erostratus the second

Fires again Diana's fane.'

Rejected Addresses; Drury's Dirge, st. 5.

1853. Thynne prints—'(Though it be naught) for shreudness'; but this is very forced. MS. B. and Caxton both omit noght, rightly. We should rather read but.

1857. 'And, in order to get (some) of the meed of fame.

1880. An allusion to the old proverb—'As I brew, so must I needs drink'; in Camden's Remains. Gower has it, Conf. Amant. bk. iii, ed. Pauli, ii. 334:—

'And who so wicked ale breweth,

Ful ofte he mot the werse drinke.'

1920. The description of 'the house of Dædalus' is in Ovid, Met. viii. 159; and the word labyrinthus, used with reference to it, is in Vergil, Æn. v. 588. Chaucer again refers to it in the Leg. of Good Women (Ariadne), 2010; and it is mentioned in his translation of Boethius, bk. iii. pr. 12; ed. Morris, p. 105. And see Gower, Conf. Amant. ed. Pauli, ii. 304.

1926. This somewhat resembles Dante, Inf. iii. 53, which Cary translates:—

'Which whirling ran about so rapidly

That it no pause obtain'd.'

1928. Oise, a river which flows into the Seine, from the north, not far below Paris. Chaucer says the sound might have been heard from there to Rome. From this vague statement, Warton would wish us to infer that the whole poem was founded on some foreign production now (and probably always) unknown. There is no need to draw any such conclusion. The English were fairly familiar with the north of France in days when a good deal of French soil belonged more or less to the king of England. The Oise, being a northern affluent of the Seine, must have been a well-known river. I think the allusion proves just nothing at all.

1933. This is an excellent and picturesque allusion, but in these days can no longer be appreciated. Compare Barbour's Bruce, xvii. 681:—

'The engynour than deliuerly

Gert bend the gyne in full gret hy,

And the stane smertly swappit out.

It flaw out, quhedirand, with a rout.'

1940. Though the authorities read hattes (Th. hutches), I alter this word to hottes without hesitation. We do not make hats with twigs or osiers. Chaucer says that some of the twigs were white, such as men use to make cages with, or panniers (i. e. baskets), or hottes, or dossers. Now Cotgrave explains F. Panier by 'a Pannier, or Dosser; also, a Pedlers Pack; also, a fashion of trunke made of wicker'; and he explains F. Hotte by 'a Scuttle, Dosser, Basket to carry on the back; the right hotte is wide at the top, and narrow at the bottom.' Dr. Murray kindly refers me to Cursor Mundi, l. 5524:—

'Apon þer neckes sal þai bere
Hott wit stan and wit mortar.'

He also tells me that in Caxton's Golden Legend (1483), fol. cix. col. 2, is the sentence—'And bare on his sholdres vij. hottis or baskettis fulle of erthe.' In a Glossary of North of England Words, printed as Gloss. B. 1, by the Eng. Dial. Society, I find: 'Hots, s. pl. a sort of panniers to carry turf or slate in'; and Halliwell gives it as a Cumberland word. Dickinson's Cumberland Glossary has: 'Muck-hots, panniers for conveying manure on horseback.' Brockett's Gloss. of Northern Words has: 'Hot, a sort of square basket, formerly used for taking manure into fields of steep ascent; the bottom opened by two wooden pins to let out the contents.' Thus the existence of the word in English is fully proved; and the fitness of it is evident.

1943. 'Al ful of chirking was that sory place'; Kn. Tale, 1146.

1946. Again from Ovid, Met. xii. 44-47.

1970. Perhaps eek should be omitted; we should then read—'Of estát-es ánd of régións.' Or read—'estáts.'

1975. Mis is here an adjective, meaning 'bad' or 'wrong'; cf.—'But to correcten that is mis I mente'; Can. Yeom. Tale, G. 999.

1980. 'Although the timber,' &c.

1982. 'As long as it pleases Chance, who is the mother of news, just as the sea (is mother) of wells and springs.'

1997. Paráventure; also spelt paraunter, shewing how rapidly the third syllable could be slurred over.

2000. Peter! by St. Peter; see note to l. 1034.

2009. I substitute the dissyllabic swich-e for the monosyllabic these, to preserve the melody.

2011. 'To drive away thy heaviness with.'

2017. MS. F. has frot, which has no meaning, but may be a misspelling of froit, which is another form of fruit. I propose to read Theffect, i. e. the result (which is clearly intended); otherwise we must read The fruit, which will also serve, if we remember that Chaucer uses fruit in the peculiar sense of 'upshot' or 'result.'

'And for it is no fruit but los of tyme'; Squi. Ta. 74.
'The fruyt of this matere is that I telle'; Man of Lawes Ta. 411.

In the present case, it would be used in a double sense; (1) of result, (2) of a fruit that withers and is ready to burst open. As to the spelling froit, we find froyte in the Petworth MS. in the latter of the above quotations, where other MSS. have fruyt or fruite. The swote (Cx. Th.) means 'the sweetness.'

2021. I suppress in after yaf, because it is not wanted for the sense, and spoils the metre.

2034-2040. Suggested by Dante, Inf. iii. 55-57, just as ll. 1924-6 above are by the two preceding lines in Dante; see note to l. 1926. Cary has:—

'and following came
Such a long train of spirits, I should ne'er
Have thought that death so many had despoil'd.'

2044. I substitute ech for euerych (in Caxton). The two MSS. (F. and B.) have merely Rounded in others ere, which is of course defective.

2048. I here follow B. (except that it wrongly omits lo).

2059. Wondermost; superl. of wonder, which is very common as an adjective.

2076. As the reading of the MSS. is obviously wrong (the word mouth being repeated three times), whilst the reading of the printed editions (Went every tydyng) cannot be right on account of the scansion, I put word for the first of the three mouth's. This gives the right sense, and probably Chaucer actually wrote it.

2089. Again from Ovid, Met. xii. 54, 55.

2101. See Kn. Tale, 273, 274.

2105. Beside, without; without asking his leave.

2119. Cf. Cant. Tales, 7277 (Group D, 1695)—'Twenty thousand freres on a route,' where Tyrwhitt prints A twenty. But the MSS. (at least the seven best ones) all omit the A. Just as the present line wants its first syllable, and is to be scanned—'Twenty thousand in a route'; so the line in the Cant. Tales wants its first syllable, and is to be scanned—Twenty thousand frères ón a roué. For having called attention to this fact, my name (misspelt) has been once mentioned in Lowell's My Study Windows, in his article on Chaucer. 'His (Chaucer's) ear would never have tolerated the verses of nine¹ syllables with a strong accent on the first, attributed to him by Mr. Skeate and Mr. Morris. Such verses seem to me simply impossible in the pentameter iambic as Chaucer wrote it.' Surely this is assumption, not proof. I have only to say that the examples are rather numerous, and nine-syllable lines are not impossible to a poet with a good ear; for there are twelve consecutive lines of this character in Tennyson's Vision of Sin. It may suffice to quote one of them:—

'Pánted hánd in hánd with fáces pále.'

I will merely add here, that similar lines abound in Lydgate's 'Sege of Thebes.'

2123. Cf. P. Plowman; B. prol. 46-52. Bretful, brim-ful, occurs in P. Pl. C. i. 42; also in Chaucer, Prol. 687; Kn. Tale, 1306.

2130. Lyes; F. lies, E. lees. 'Lie, f. the lees, dregs, grounds'; Cotgrave.

2140. Sooner or later, every sheaf in the barn has to come out to be thrashed.

2154. 'And stamp, as a man would stamp on a live eel, to try to secure it.' Already in Plautus, Pseudolus, 2. 4. 56, we have the proverb anguilla est, elabitur, he is an eel, he slips away from you; said of a sly or slippery fellow. In the Rom. de la Rose, 9941, we are told that it is as hard to be sure of a woman's constancy as it is to hold a live eel by the tail. 'To have an eel by the tail' was an old English proverb; see Eel in Nares' Glossary, ed. Halliwell and Wright.

2158. The poem ends here, in the middle of a sentence. It seems as if Chaucer did not quite know how to conclude, and put off finishing the poem till that more 'convenient season' which never comes. Practically, nothing is lost.

The copy printed by Caxton broke off still earlier, viz. at

l. 2094. In order to make a sort of ending to it, Caxton added twelve lines of his own, with his name—Caxton—at the side of the first of them ; and subjoined a note in prose ; as follows :—

And wyth the noyse of them [t]wo¹
 I Sodeynly awoke anon tho²
 And remembryd what I had seen
 And how hye and ferre I had been
 In my ghoost | and had grete wonder
 Of that the god of thonder
 Had lete me knowen | and began to wryte³
 Lyke as ye haue herd me endyte
 Wherfor to stūdye and rede alway⁴
 I purpose to doo day by day
 Thus in dremyng and in game
 Endeth thys lytyl book of Fame.

I fynde nomore of this werke to-fore sayd. For as fer as I can vnderstonde | This noble man Gefferey Chaucer fynysshed at the sayd conclusion of the metyng .of lesyng and sothsawe | where as yet they ben chekked and maye not departe | whyche werke as me semeth is craftyly made ;' &c. (The rest is in praise of Chaucer.)

But, although Caxton's copy ended at l. 2094, lines 2095-2158 appear in the two MSS., and are obviously genuine. Thynne also printed them, and must have found them in the MS. which he followed. After l. 2158, Thynne subjoins Caxton's ending, with an alteration in the first three lines, because they were not quite suitable to follow l. 2158, having been adapted by Caxton to follow l. 2094. Hence Thynne prints them as follows :—

And therwithal I abrayde
 Out of my slepe halfe a frayde
 Remembri[n]g wel what I had sene ; &c.

We thus see that it was never pretended that the lines succeeding l. 2158 were Chaucer's. They are admittedly Caxton's or Thynne's. If we had not been told this, we could easily have detected it by the immediate and obvious inferiority in the style. Caxton's second line will not scan at all comfortably ; neither will the third, nor the fourth ; and Thynne's lines are scarcely better.

¹ Mispriated wo ; but it refers to the word two in l. 2093.

² Imitated from Parl. of Foules, 693.

³ Cf. Book Duch. 1332.

⁴ From Parl. of Foules, 696.

X. THE FORMER AGE.

'THE former Age' is a title taken from l. 2 of the poem. In MS. Hh., at the end, are the words—'Finit Etas prima : Chaucers.'

Both MSS. are poor, and omit a whole line (l. 56), which has to be supplied by conjecture ; as we have no other authority. The spelling requires more emendation than usual.

The poem is partly a verse translation of Boethius, De Consolatione Philosophiæ, lib. ii. met. 5. We possess a prose translation by Chaucer of the entire work, edited by Dr. Morris in 1858. This therefore contains the same passage in prose ; and the prose translation is, of course, a much closer rendering of the original. Indeed there is nothing in the original which corresponds to the last four stanzas of the present poem, excepting a hint for l. 62.

The work of Boethius, in Latin, consists of five books. Each book contains several sections, written in prose and verse alternately. Hence we may find references to bk. ii. prose 5 (liber ii. prosa 5) ; bk. ii. metre 5 (liber ii. metrum 5) ; and the like. These divisions are very useful in finding one's place.

Anicius Manlius Torquatus Severinus Boetius (or Boethius) was a Roman senator, who was born about the year 470, and was put to death by Theodoric, A. D. 525. See the masterly account of him in Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, c. 39. 'While Boethius,' says Gibbon, 'oppressed with fetters, expected each moment the sentence or the stroke of death, he composed, in the tower of Pavia, the 'Consolation of Philosophy ;' a golden volume, not unworthy of the leisure of Plato or Tully, but which claims incomparable merit from the barbarism of the times and the situation of the author.' This great work was translated, before Chaucer, by King Alfred ; and, after Chaucer, at least eight times. Lowndes recommends a translation by the Rev. P. Ridpath, printed at London in 1785.

Chaucer was also indebted to Ovid, Metam. i. 89-112, for part of this description of the Golden Age ; of which see Dryden's fine translation. See also Le Roman de la Rose, ll. 8395-8492 ; and compare the Complaint of Scotland, ed. Murray, p. 144. For further remarks, see the Preface.

2. The former age ; Lat. prior etas.

3. Payed of, satisfied with ; Lat. contenta.

5. Forpampred, exceedingly pampered ; Lat. perdita.

6. Quern, a hand-mill for grinding corn. Melle, mill.

7. Mr. Sweet reads hawes, mast instead of mast, hawes. This sounds better, but is not necessary. Haw-es is dissyllabic. Pounage, mod. E. pannage, mast, or food given to swine in the woods; see the Glossary. Better spelt pannage or paunage (Manwood has paunage, as cited in Blount's Nomolexicon. Koch wrongly refers us to O. F. poïin, poïn, a sickle (Burguy), but mast and haws were never reaped. Cf. Dante, Purg. xxii. 148.

11. 'Which they rubbed in their hands, and ate of sparingly.' Gnodded is the pt. t. of gnodden or gnudden, to rub, examples of which are scarce. See Ancren Riwe, pp. 238, 260 (footnotes), and gnide in Halliwell's Dictionary. But the right reading is obviously gniden, the pt. t. pl. of the strong verb gniden, to rub, A.S. gnidan (Luke, vi. 1). This restores the melody of the line. The North. form gnade occurs in the O. E. Psalter, Ps. lxxxviii. 45. Mr. Sweet reads gnodde, but the pt. t. of gnodden was gnodded.

16. 'No one as yet ground spices in a mortar, to put into clarrè or galantine-sauce.' As to clarre, see Glos. to Knightes Tale; and the Babees Book, ed. Furnivall, p. 204, and Index.

In the Liber Cure Cocorum, ed. Morris, p. 30, is the following recipe for Galentyne :—

'Take crust of brede and grynde hit smalle,
Take powder of galingale, and temper with-alle;
Powder of gyngere and salt also;
Tempre hit with venegur er þou more do;
Drawþe hit þurughe a streynour þenne,
And messe hit forth before good menne.'

'Galentyne is a sauce for any kind of roast Fowl, made of Grated Bread, beaten Cinnamon and Ginger; Sugar, Claret-wine, and Vinegar, made as thick as Grewell;' Randell Holme, bk. iii. ch. iii. p. 82, col. 2 (quoted in Babees Book, ed. Furnivall, p. 216). Roquefort gives O. F. galatine, galantine, galentine, explained by 'gelée, daube, sauce, ragoût fort épicé; en bas Latin, galatina.' Beyond doubt, Chaucer found the word in the Roman de la Rose, l. 21823—'En friture et en galentine.' See Galantine in Littré. Cf. Rom. de la Rose, 8418 :—

'Et de l'iaue simple bevoient
Sans querre piment ne clare,' &c.

17. 'No dyer knew anything about madder, weld, or woad.' All three are plants used in dyeing. Madder is Rubia tinctoria, the roots of which yield a dye. I once fancied weld was an error for welled (i. e. flowed out); and Mr. Sweet explains welde by 'strong.' Both of these fancies are erroneous. Weld is the Reseda Luteola of Linnæus, and grows wild in waste places; I have seen it growing near Beachey Head. It is better known as Dyer's Rocket. In Johns' Flowers of the Field, we duly find—'Reseda Luteola, Dyer's Rocket, Yellow-weed, or Weld.' Also called Ash of Jerusalem, Dyer's Weed, &c.; see Eng. Plant names, by Britten and Holland. It appears in mod. G. as Wau (Du. wouw), older spelling Waude. Its antiquity as a Teut. word is vouched for by the derivatives in the Romance languages, such as Span. gualda, Port. gualde, F. gaude; see Gualda in Diez. Weld is a totally distinct word from woad, but most dictionaries confound them. Florio, most impartially, coins a new form by mixing the two words together (after the fashion adopted in Alice through the Looking-glass). He gives us Ital. gualdo, 'a weede to die yellow with, called would.' The true woad is the Isatis tinctoria, used for dyeing blue before indigo was known; the name is sometimes given to Genista tinctoria, but the dye from this is of a yellow colour. Pliny mentions the dye from madder (Nat. Hist. xix. 3); and says the British women used glastum, i. e. woad (xxii. 1).

18. Flees, fleece; Lat. uelleræ. Dr. Koch prints flex, with a reference to C. T. Prol. 676; but flex means flax.

27-29. Cf. Ovid, Metam. i. 138-140.

30. Ri-ver-es; three syllables. Mr. Sweet suggests putting after in place of first.

33. 'These tyrants did not gladly venture into battle to win a wilderness or a few bushes where poverty (alone) dwells—as Diogenes says—or where victuals are so scarce and poor that only mast or apples are found there; but, wherever there are money-bags,' &c. I do not quite follow this reference to Diogenes, though his praises of poverty are well known. Higden, in his Polychronicon, lib. iii. c. 20, gives several of the usual anecdotes about him, and remarks, with regard to him and Alexander—'tunc victus est Alexander quando invenit hominem cui nil potuit dare nec auferre.' Gower relates how Diogenes reproved Alexander for his lust of conquest; Conf. Anantis, ed. Pauli, i. 322.

41. This stanza seems more or less imitated from Le Rom. de la Rose, 8437:—

'Et quant par nuit dormir voloient,
En leu de coites [quills] apportoient

En lor casiaus monceaux de gerbes,
 De foilles, ou de mousse, ou d'erbes; . . .
 Sor tex couches cum ge devise,
 Sans rapine et sans convoitise,
 S'entr'acoloient et baisoient . . .
 Les simples gens assurées,
 De toutes cures escurées.'

47. 'Their hearts were all united, without the gall (of envy).'
 Curiously enough, Chaucer has here made an oversight. He ends the line with galles, riming with halles and walles;
 whereas the line should end with a word riming to shete.

49. Here again cf. Rom. de la Rose, 8483:—

'N'encor n'avoit fet roi ne prince
 Meffais qui l'autrui tolt et pince.
 Trestuit pareil estre soloient,
 Ne riens propre avoir ne voloient.'

55, 56. 'Humility and peace, (and) good faith (who is) the empress (of all), filled the earth full of ancient courtesy.' Line 56 I have supplied; Dr. Koch supplies the line—'Yit hadden in this worlde the maistris.' Either of these suggestions fills up the sense intended.

57. Jupiter is mentioned in Ovid's Metamorphoses immediately after the description of the golden, silver, brazen, and iron ages. At l. 568 of the same book begins the story of the love of Jupiter for Io.

59. Nembrot, Nimrod; so that his toures hye refers to the tower of Babel. In Gen. x, xi, the sole connection of Nimrod with Babel is in ch. x. 10—'And the beginning of his kingdom was Babel.' But the usual medieval account is that he built the tower. Thus, in the Cursor Mundi, l. 2223:—

'Nembrot than said on this wise, . . .
 "I rede we bigin a laboure,
 And do we wel and make a toure," &c.

So also in Sir D. Lyndsay, Buke of the Monarché, bk. ii.
 l. 1625.

62-64. These last lines are partly imitated from Boethius; lines 33-61 are independent of him.

XI. FORTUNE.

THIS poem consists of three Ballads and an Envoy. Each Ballad contains three stanzas of eight lines, with the rimes ababbcbc, and the rimes of the second and third stanzas are precisely the same as those of the first. Thus the rime a recurs six times, the rime b twelve times, and the rime c likewise six times. Moreover, each stanza ends with the same line, recurring as a refrain. Hence the metrical difficulties are very great, and afford a convincing proof of Chaucer's skill. The Envoy is of seven lines, rimed ababbab.

The three ballads are called, collectively, Balades de visage sanz peinture, a title which is correctly given in MS. I., with the unlucky exception that visage has been turned into vilage. This curious blunder occurs in all the MSS. and old editions, and evidently arose from mistaking a long s (f) for an l. Vilage, of course, makes no sense; and we are enabled to correct it by help of Chaucer's translation of Boethius, ed. Morris, bk. ii. pr. 1; l. 773. 'Ryzt swyche was she [Fortune] whan she flatered þe and desseiued þe wiþ vnleueful lykynge of false welefulness; þou hast now known and ataynt þe doutous or double visage of þilke blynde goddesse fortune. She þat zit couereþ hir and wympleþ hir to oþer folk, haþ shewed her euerydel to þe.' Or the Ballads may refer to the unmasking of false friends: 'Fortune hath departyd and vn-coueryd to the bothe the certeyn visages and ek the dowtos visages of thy felawes;' id. bk. ii. pr. 8; l. 1668. The whole poem is more or less founded on the descriptions of Fortune in Boethius; and we thus see that the visage meant is the face of Fortune, or else the face of a supposed friend, which is clearly revealed to the man of experience, in the day of adversity, without any covering or wimpling, and even without any painting or false colouring.

In MS. T. we are told that 'here filoweþe [followeth] a balade made by Chaucier of þe louer and of Dame Fortune.' In MS. A. we are told that 'here foloweþe nowe a comp'eynte of þe Pleintyff agenst fortune translated oute of Frenshe into Englysshe by þat famous Rethorissyen Geoffrey Chaucier.' This hint, that it is translated out of French, can scarcely be right, unless Shirley (whose note this is) means that it partially resembles passages in Le Roman de la Rose; for Chaucer's work seems to contain some reminiscences of that poem as well as of the treatise of Boethius, though of course Le Roman is indebted to Boethius also.

Le Pleintif is the complainant, the man who brings a charge against Fortune, or rather, who exclaims against her as false, and defies her power. The first Ballad, then, consists of this complaint and defiance.

The close connection between this poem and Boethius is shewn by the fact that (like the preceding poem called The Former Age) it occurs in an excellent MS. of Chaucer's translation of Boethius, viz. MS. I. (li. 3. 21, in the Cambridge University Library). I may also remark here, that there is a somewhat similar dialogue between Nobilitas and Fortuna in the Anticlaudianus of Alanus de Insulis, lib. viii. c. 2; see Anglo-Latin Satirists, ed. T. Wright, ii. 401.

In Morley's English Writers, ii. 283, is the following description. 'The argument of the first part [or Ballad] is: I have learnt by adversity to know who are my true friends; and he can defy Fortune who is master of himself. The argument of the next part [second Ballad], that Fortune speaks, is: Man makes his own wretchedness. What may come you know not; you were born under my rule of change; your anchor holds. Of the third part of the poem [third Ballad], in which the Poet and Fortune each speak, the sum of the argument is, that what blind men call fortune is the righteous will of God. Heaven is firm, this world is mutable. The piece closes with Fortune's call upon the Princes to relieve this man of his pain or pray his best friend "of his noblesse" that he may attain to some better estate.'

The real foundation of these three Ballads is (1) Boethius, bk. ii. proses 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, and met. 1; and (2) a long passage in Le Roman de la Rose, ll. 4853-4994 (Eng. version, 5406-5587). More particular references are given below.

1. The beginning somewhat resembles Boethius, bk. ii. met. 1:—'She, cruel Fortune, kasteth adoune kynges that somtyme weren ydred; and she, deceiuable, enhaunseth vp the humble chere of hym that is discomfited.' Cf. Rom. Rose (E. version), ll. 5482-6.

2. The latter part of this line is badly given in the MSS. The readings are: F. now pouerte and now riche honour (much too long); I. now poeere and now honour; A. T. nowe poure and nowe honour; H. now poore and now honour. But the reading poure, poer, pore, i. e. poor, hardly serves, as a sb. is required. Pouerte seems to be the right word, but this requires us to omit the former now. Pouerte can be pronounced pouert' ; accented on the second syllable, and with the final e elided. For this pronunciation, see Prol. to Man of Lawes Tale, Group B, l. 99, in my edition of Prioresses Tale, p. 4. Precisely because this pronunciation was not understood, the scribes did not know what to do. They inserted now before pouerte (which they thought was pouerte) ; and then, as the line was too long, cut it down to poure, poore, to the detriment of the sense. I would therefore rather read—As wele or wo, poverte and now honour.

7. In the Introduction to the Persones Tale, we find : 'wel may that man, that no good werk ne doth, singe thilke newe Frenshe song, Jay tout perdu mon temps et mon labour.' In like manner, in the present case, this line of 'a new French song' is governed by the verb singen in l. 6. The sense is —'the lack of Fortune's favour shall never (though I die) make me sing—"I have wholly lost my time and my labour."' In other words, 'I will not own myself defeated.'

9. With this stanza cf. Rom. de la Rose (E. version), 5554-5, 5675-81, 5582-5 :—

'For infortune makith anoon
To knowe thi frendis fro thy foon . . .
A wise man seide, as we may seen,
Is no man wrecched, but he it wene, . .
For he suffriþ in pacience . . .
Richesse riche ne makith nought
Hym that on tresour set his thought ;
For richesse stont in suffisance ;' &c.

13. No force of, it does not matter for ; i. e. 'thy rigour is of no consequence to him who has the mastery over himself.' From Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 4 (ed. Morris, l. 1114), which Chaucer translates : 'Than, if it so be þat þou art myzty ouer þi-self, þat is to seyn, by tranquillitee of þi soule, þan hast þou þing in þi power þat þou noldest neuer lesen, ne Fortune may nat by-nyme it þe.'

17. Socrates is mentioned in Boeth. bk. i. pr. 3, but ll. 17-20 are from Le Rom. de la Rose, ll. 5871-4 :—

'A Socrates seras semblables,
Qui tant fu fers et tant estables,
Qu'il n'ert liés en prospérités,
Ne tristes en auersités.'

20. Chere, look. Savour, pleasantness, attraction ; cf. Squi. Tale, 404. All the MSS. have this reading ; Caxton alters it to favour.

25. This Second Ballad gives us Fortune's response to the defiance of the complainant. It should be compared with Boethius, bk. 2, prose 2, where Philosophy says—'Certis, I wolde plete wiþ þee a fewe þinges, vsynge þe wordes of Fortune.' Also with Rom. Rose (E. version, 5470-5567).

28. 'Who possesseth thy (true) self (as being quite) beyond my control?' A fine sentiment. Out of, beyond, independent of.

29. Cf. 'thou hast had grace as he þat haþ vsed of foreyne goodes; þou hast no ryzt to pleyne þe;' Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 2; l. 850.

31. Cf. 'what eke, yif my mutabilitiee ȝiueþ þe ryztful cause of hope to han ȝit better þinges;' id. l. 895.

32. Thy beste frend; possibly John of Gaunt, who died in 1399; but see note to l. 73 below. There is a curious resemblance here to Le Rom. de la Rose, 8056-60:—

'Et sachies, compains, que sitost
Comme Fortune m'ot ça mis,
Je perdi trestous mes amis,
Fors ung, ce croi ge vraielement,
Qui m'est remès tant solement.'

34. Cf. 'for-why this ilke Fortune hath departyd and vn-coueryd to the bothe the certeyn vysages and ek the dowtos visages of thy felawes . . . thow hast fowndyn the moste presyos kynde of Rychesses, þat is to seyn, thy verray frendes;' id. bk. ii. pr. 8, l. 1668.

Cf. Rom. Rose (E. version), l. 5486, and ll. 5550-3. The French version has (ll. 4967, &c.):—

'Si lor fait par son mescheoir
Tretont si clerement veoir,
Que lor fait lor amis trover,
Et par experiment prover
Qu'il valent miex que nul avoir
Qu'il poissent où monde avoir.'

35. Vincent de Beauvais, Speculum Naturale, bk. 19, c. 62, headed De medicinis ex hyæna, cites the following from Hieronymus, contra Iouinianum:—'Hyænæ fel oculorum claritatem restituit,' the gall of a hyena restores the clearness of one's eyes. This exactly explains the allusion. Compare the extract from Boethius (ed. Morris, l. 773) already quoted above.

38. 'Still thine anchor holds.' From Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 4, l. 1050:—'whan þat þin ancrs cliue faste, þat neiþer wole suffre þe comfort of þis tyme present, ne þe hope of tyme comynge to passen ne to fallen.'

39. 'Where Liberality carries the key of my riches.'

43. On, referring to, or, that is binding on.

46. Fortune says:—'I tourne þe whirlingyng whele wip þe tournyng cercle;' Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 2, l. 871.

47. 'My teaching is better, in a higher degree, than your affliction is, in its degree, evil;' i. e. my teaching betters you more than your affliction makes you suffer.

49. In this third Ballad, the stanzas are distributed between the Complainant and Fortune, one being assigned to the former, and two to the latter. The former says:—'I condemn thy teaching; it is (mere) adversity.'

50. My frend, i. e. my true friend. In l. 51, thy frendes means 'the friends I owed to thee,' my false friends. From Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 8, l. 1667:—'this aspre and horrible Fortune hath discouryd to the the thowhtes of thy trewe frendes; . . . whan she departyd away fro the, she took away hyr frendes and lafte the thyne frendes.'

51. I thanke hit thee, I owe thanks to thee for it. But very likely hit has been inserted to fill up, and the right reading is, probably, I thank-e thee; as Koch suggests.

52. On presse, in a throng, in company, all together.

53. 'Their niggardliness, in keeping their riches to themselves, foreshews that thou wilt attack their stronghold; just as an unnatural appetite precedes illness.'

56. Cf. Rom. de la Rose, 19179:—

'Ceste ruile est si généraus,
Qu'el ne puet defaillir vers aus.'

57. Here Fortune replies. This stanza is nearly made up of extracts from Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 2, ll. 845-869, transposed and rearranged. For the sake of comparison, I give the nearest equivalents, transposing them to suit the order here adopted.

'þat makeþ þe now inpatient azeins me. . . I norysshed þe wip my rychesse. . . Now it lykeþ me to wip-drawe myne hande . . . shal I þan only be defended to vse my ryzt? . . . þe see haþ eke hys ryzt to be somtyme calme . . . and somtyme to be horrible wip waves. . . Certis it is leueful to þe heuene to make clere dayes. . . þe erþe haþ eke leue . . . to confounde hem [the flowers] somtyme wip raynes . . . shal it [men's covetousness] bynde me to be stedfast?'

Compare also the defence of Fortune by Pandarus, in Troilus, bk. i. 841-854.

65. Above this stanza (ll. 65-72) all the MSS. insert a new heading, such as 'Le pleintif,' or 'Le pleintif encountre Fortune,' or 'The pleyntyff ageinst Fortune.' But they are all wrong, for it is quite certain that this stanza belongs to Fortune. Otherwise, it makes no sense. Secondly, we know this by the original (in Boethius). And thirdly, Fortune cannot well have the 'envoy' unless she has the stanza preceding it. Dr. Morris, in his edition, rightly omits the heading; and so in Bell's edition.

66. Compare:—'For purueaunce is þilke deuyne resoun þat is establissed in þe souereyne prince of þinges; þe whiche purueaunce disponiþ alle þinges;' Boeth. bk. iv. pr. 6; l. 3868.

68. Ye blinde bestes, addressed to men; evidently by Fortune, not by the Pleintif. Compare the words forth, beste, in Truth, p. 194, l. 18.

71. Here we have formal proof that the speaker is Fortune; for this is copied from Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 3, l. 984—'napeles þe laste day of a mannis lijf is a manere deef to fortune.' Hence thy refers to man, and myn refers to Fortune; and the sense is—'Thy last day (O man) is the end of my interest (in thee);' or 'dealings (with thee).' The word interesse, though scarce, is right. It is used in Spenser, F. Q. vii. 6. 33:—

'That not the worth of any living wight
May challenge ought in Heaven's interesse.'

And in Todd's Johnson:—'I thought, says his majesty [K. Charles I.] I might happily have satisfied all interesses;' Lord Halifax's Miscell. p. 144. The sb. also occurs as Ital. interesse; thus Florio's Ital. Dict. (1598) has:—'Interesse, Interesso, the interest or profite of money for lone. Also, what toucheth or concerneth a mans state or reputation.' And Minsheu's Spanish Dict. (1623) has:—'Interes, or Interesse, interest, profite, auaille.' The E. vb. to interest was once common, and occurs in K. Lear, i. 1. 87 (unless Dr. Schmidt is right in condemning the reading of that line).

73. Princes. Who these princes were, it is hard to say; according to l. 76, there were three of them. If the reference is to the Dukes of Lancaster, York, and Gloucester, then the 'beste frend' must be the king himself. Cf. l. 33.

75, 76. 'And I (Fortune) will requite you for your trouble (undertaken) at my request, whether there be three of you, or two of you (that heed my words).' Line 76 occurs in MS. I, only, yet it is difficult to reject it, as it is not a likely sort of line to be thrust in, unless this were done, in revision, by the author himself. Moreover, we should expect the Envoy to form a stanza with the usual seven lines, so common in Chaucer.

77. 'And, unless it pleases you to relieve him of his pain (yourselves), pray his best friend, for the honour of his nobility, that he may attain to some better estate.'

The assigning of this petition to Fortune is a happy expedient. The poet thus escapes making a direct appeal in his own person.

XII. TRUTH.

THE Titles are : Gg. Balade de bone conseyl ; Lansd. 699, La bon Conseil de le Auttour ; Caxton, The good counceyl of Chawcer ; Harl. Moral balade of Chaucyre. Shirley calls it—Balade that Chaucier made on his deeth-bedde ; a note that has been frequently repeated, and is probably no better than a bad guess.

1. Koch considers that the source of the poem is a passage in Boethius, lib. iii. met. 11, at the beginning, but the resemblance is very slight. It contains no more than a mere hint for it. However, part of st. 3 is certainly from the same, bk. i. pr. 5, as will appear ; see note to l. 17.

The former passage in Boethius is thus translated by Chaucer : 'Who-so that sekith soth by a deep thought and coveyteth nat to ben deseuyed by no mys-weyes, lat hym rolen and trenden [revolve] with-inne hymself the lyht of his inward syhte. And lat hym gadere ayein, enclynnge in-to a compas, the longe moeuynge of hys thowhtes ; and lat hym techen his corage that he hath enclosed and hyd in his tresors al that he compaseth or sekith fro with-oute.' See also bk. ii. pr. 5 of the same, which seems to me more like the present poem than is the above passage.

2. Koch reads thing for good, as in some MSS. He explains the line :—'Devote thyself entirely to one thing, even if it is not very important in itself (instead of hunting after a phantom).' This I cannot accept ; it certainly means nothing of the kind. Mr. Sweet has the reading : Suffise thin owene thing, &c., which is the reading of one MS. only, but it gives the right idea. The line would then mean : 'let your own property, though small, suffice for your wants.' I think we are bound to follow the MSS. generally ; of these, two have Suffice unto thi thing ; five have Suffice unto thy good ; one has Suffice unto thi lyuynge (where lyuynge is a gloss upon good) ; and F. has the capital reading

Suffice the thy good. It seems best to follow the majority, especially as they allow suffice to be followed by a vowel, thus eliding the final e. The sense is simply: 'Be content with thy property, though it be small;' and the next line gives the reason why—'for hoarding only causes hatred, and ambition creates insecurity; the crowd is full of envy, and wealth blinds one in every respect.' Suffice unto thi good is much the same as the proverb—'cut your coat according to your cloth.' Chaucer elsewhere has worldly suffisance for 'wealth;' Cler. Tale, 759. Of course this use of suffice unto (be content with) is peculiar; but I do not see why it is not legitimate. The use of Savour in l. 5 below is at least as extraordinary.

Cf. Chaucer's tr. of Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 5, l. 1231:—'And if thou wilt fulfillen thi nede after that it suffiseth to nature, than is it no nede that thou seke after the superfluite of fortune.'

3. Cf. 'for auarice maketh alwey mokceres [oarders] to ben hated;' Boeth. ii. pr. 5, l. 1182.

5. Savour, taste with relish, have an appetite for. 'Have a relish for no more than it may behove you (to taste).'

6. Most MSS. read Werk or Do; only two have Reule, which Mr. Sweet adopts. Any one of these three readings makes sense. 'Thou who canst advise others, work well thyself,' or 'act well thyself,' or 'rule thyself.' To quote from Hamlet, i. 3. 47:—

'Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And reckes not his own rede.'

It is like the Jewish proverb—'Physician, heal thyself.'

7. Trouthe shal delivere, truth shall give deliverance. 'The truth shall make you free,' Lat. 'ueritas liberabit uos;' John viii. 32. This is a general truth, and there is no need for the insertion of thee after shal, as in the inferior MSS., in consequence of the gradual loss of the final e in trouthe, which in Chaucer is properly dissyllabic. The scribes who turned trouthe into trouthe thee forgot that this makes up trou-thè thee.

8. Tempest thee noght, do not violently trouble or harass thyself, do not be in a state of agitation. Agitation will not redress everything that is crooked. So also:—'Tempest nat the thus with al the fortune;' Boeth. bk. ii. pr. 4, l. 1060. Chaucer (as Koch says) obtained this curious verb from the third line of section F

(l. 63 of the whole poem) of the French poem from which he translated his A B C. This section begins:—

‘Fuiant m'en viens a ta tente
Moy mucier pour la tormente
Qui ou monde me tempeste ;’

i. e. I come fleeing to thy tent, to hide myself from the storm which harasses me in the world.

9. ‘Trusting to the vicissitudes of fortune.’ There are several references to the wheel of Fortune in Boethius. Thus in bk. ii. pr. 2 (ed. Morris, l. 871) of Chaucer’s translation:—‘I tourne the whirling whele with the tournyng cercle.’

10. ‘Much repose consists in abstinence from fussiness.’

11. ‘To spurn against an awl,’ i. e. against a prick, is the English equivalent of the Gk. phrase which our bibles render by ‘to kick against the pricks,’ Acts ix. 5. Wycif renders it by ‘to kike ayens the pricke.’

In MS. Cotton, Otho A. xviii, we find the reading a nall, the n being transferred from an to the sb. Tusser has nall for ‘awl’ in his Husbandry, § 17, st. 4, l. 3. This MS., by the way, has been burnt, but a copy of it (too much corrected) is given in Todd’s Illustrations of Chaucer, p. 131.

12. An allusion to the fable in Æsop about the earthen and brazen pots being dashed together. An earthen pot would have still less chance of escape if dashed against a wall. In MS. T., the word crocke is glossed by ‘water-potte.’

13. ‘Thou that subduest the deeds of another, subdue thyself.’

15. Cf. ‘it behoueth the to suffren with euene wille in patience al that is don . . . in this worlde ;’ Boeth. bk. ii. pr. 1 ; l. 799.

16. Axeth, requires ; i. e. will surely cause.

17. When Boethius complains of being exiled, Philosophy directs him to a heavenly home. ‘Yif thou remembre of what contre thou art born, it nis not gouerned by emperoures . . . but o lorde and o king, and that is god ;’ bk. i. pr. 5 ; l. 561. This is copied (as being taken from ‘Boece’) in Le Roman de la Rose, l. 5049 (Eng. version, l. 5660).

18. The word beste probably refers to the passage in Boethius where wicked men are likened to various animals, as when the extortioner is a wolf, a noisy abusive man is a hound, a treacherous man is a fox, &c. ; bk. iv. pr. 3. The story of Ulysses and Circe follows ; bk. iv. met. 3.

19. ‘Recognise heaven as thy true country.’ Lok up, gaze upwards to heaven. Cf. the expression ‘thi contre’ at the end of

bk. iv. pr. 1 of his translation of Boethius. There is also a special reference here to Boeth. bk. v. met. 5, where it is said that quadrupeds look down, but man is upright; 'this figure amonesteth the, that axest the heuene with thi ryghte visage.'

Thank god of al, thank God for all things. In like manner, in the Lamentation of Mary Magdalen, st. 53, we find: 'I thanke God of al, if I nowe dye.' Mätzner (Gram. ii. 2. 307) quotes from the Towneley Mysteries, p. 128:—'Mekyll thanke of youre good wille;' and again (Gram. ii. 1. 238) from King Alisaunder, l. 7576:—'And thankid him of his socour.' Henrysoun, in his Abbay Walk, l. 8, has:—'Obey, and thank thy God of al;' but he is probably copying this very passage. Cf. also—'of help I him praye;' Lydgate, London Lyckpeny, st. 6; 'beseech you of your pardon;' Oth. iii. 3, 212. In Lydgate's Minor Poems, ed. Halliwell, p. 225, is a poem in which every stanza ends with 'thonk God of alle.'

20. Hold the hye wey, keep to the high road. Instead of Hold the hye wey, some MSS. have Weyve thy lust, i. e. put aside thy desire, give up thine own will.

22. This last stanza forms an Envoy. It exists in one copy only (MS. Addit. 10340); but there is no reason at all for considering it spurious. Vache, cow; with reference to the 'beast in the stall' in l. 18. This animal was probably chosen as being less offensive than those mentioned by Boethius, viz. the wolf, hound, fox, lion, hart, ass, and sow. Possibly, also, there is a reference to the story of Nebuchadnezzar, as related by Chaucer in the Monkes Tale; Group B, 3361.

XIII. GENTILESSE.

FOR remarks upon Scogan's quotation of this Ballad in full, see the Preface.

The titles are: Harl. Moral balade of Chaucier, T. Balade by Chaucier.

Caxton's text is unusually good, and is often superior to that in the existing MSS.

The general idea of the poem is that Christ was the true pattern of 'gentleness' or gentility, i. e. of noble behaviour. Cf. Dekker's noble line, in which he speaks of Christ as 'The first true gentleman that ever breathed.'

But the finest poetical essay upon this subject is that by Chaucer himself, in the Wife of Bath's Tale; C. T. 6691-6758; which see.

In the tale of Melibeus we read: 'And certes, he shulde not be called a Gentleman, that after God and good conscience, alle thinges left, ne doth his diligence and besinesse to kepen his good name. And Cassiodore sayth, that it is a signe of a gentil herte, whan a man loveth and desireth to have a good name.'

Another passage on this subject occurs in the Eng. version of the Romance of the Rose, ll. 2188-2202, which, curiously enough, is not in Méon's edition of the French poem (in which l. 2184 of the E. version is immediately succeeded by l. 2203 of the same). Again, in Le Roman de la Rose, ll. 6603-6616, there is a definition of Gentillesce; but this passage is not in the Eng. version.

The original passage, to which both Chaucer and Jean de Meun were indebted, is one in Boethius, bk. iii. pr. 6; which Chaucer thus translates:—'For if the name of gentillesse be referred to renoun and clernesse of linage, than is gentil name but a foreine thing, þat is to sein, to hem that g'lorifien hem of hir linage. For it semeth that gentillesse be a maner preysynge that cometh of decert of auncestres . . . yif thou ne haue no gentillesse of thi-self—that is to sein, pris that cometh of thi deserte—foreine gentillesse ne maketh the nat gentil.' And again, just below, in metre 6:—'On alone is fadir of thinges . . . thanne comen alle mortal folk of noble seed; whi noysen ye or bosten of youre eldris?' But we must not overlook a long passage near the end of Le Roman de la Rose, ll. 18807-19096, which Chaucer certainly also consulted. I quote some of these lines below.

1. With this first stanza compare R. Rose, 18881:—

'Quiconques tent à gentillece
D'orguel se gart et de parece;
Aille as armes, ou à l'estuide,
Et de vilenie se vuide;
Humble cuer ait, cortois et gent
En tretous leus, vers toute gent.'

Two MSS., both written out by Shirley, and MS. Harl. 7333, all read:—'The first fader, and foundour (or fynder) of gentylesse.' This is wrong, and probably due to the dropping of the final e in the definite adjective firste. We must keep the phrase firste stok, because it is expressly repeated in l. 8.

The first line means—'With regard to, or As to the first stock (or source), who was the father of gentillesse.' The substantives stok and fader have no verb to them, but are mentioned as being the subject of the sentence.

3. The former his refers to fader, but the latter to man.

4. Sewe, follow. In a Ballad by King James the First of Scotland, printed at p. 54 of my edition of the Kingis Quair, the first five lines are a fairly close imitation of the opening lines of the present poem, and prove that King James followed a MS. which had the reading sew. His poem begins:—

‘Sen throu vertew encessis dignite,
And vertew flour and rut [root] is of noblay,
Of ony weill or quhat estat thou be,
His steppis sew, and dreid thee non effray:
Exil al vice, and folow trewth alway.’

Observe how his first, third, and fourth lines answer to Chaucer's fifth, second, and fourth lines respectively.

7. Al were he, albeit he may wear; i.e. although he may be a bishop, king, or emperor.

8. This firste stok, i.e. Christ. In l. 12, his heir means mankind in general.

Compare Le Rom. de la Rose, 18819:—

‘Noblece vient de bon corage,
Car gentillece de lignage
N'est pas gentillece qui vaille,
Por quoi bonté de cuer i faille,
Por quoi doit estre en li parans [apparent]
La proece de ses parens
Qui la gentillece conquistrent
Par les travaux que grans i mistrent.
Et quant du siecle trespasserent,
Toutes lor vertus emporterent,
Et lessierent as hoirs l'avoir;
Que plus ne porent d'aus avoir.
L'avoir ont, plus riens n'i a lor,
Ne gentillece, ne valor,
Se tant ne font que gentil soient
Par sens ou par vertu qu'il aient.’

15. Vyc-e is dissyllabic; hence two MSS. turn it into Vices, and one even has Vicesse!

With this stanza compare part of the French quotation above, and compare Rom. Rose, 19064, &c.:—

‘Mes il sunt mauvais, vilain nastre,
Et d'autrui noblece se vantent;
Il ne dient pas voir, ains mentent,
Et le non [name] de gentillece emblent,
Quant lor bons parens ne resembent;’ &c.

16. In MS. A. is this side-note, in a later hand :—

‘ Nam genus et proanos et quæ non fecimus ipsi
Vix ea nostra voco.’

20. This is a difficult line to obtain from the MSS. It is necessary to keep heir in the singular, because of he in l. 21. In MS. A., make clearly stands for makeþe, i. e. maketh, as in nearly all the MSS. This gives us—That maketh his heir him that wol him queme. The change from his heir him to the more natural order him his heir is such a gain to the metre that it is worth while to make it.

XIV. LAK OF STEDFASTNESSE.

IN MS. Harl. 7333, is the following note, probably correct :—
‘ This balade made Geffrey Chauciers the Laureall Poete of Albion, and sent it to his souerain lorde kyng Rycharde the secounde, thane being in his Castell of Windesore.’ In MS. T. is the heading :—‘ Baladé Royal made by oure laureal poete of Albyon in hees laste yeeres ;’ and above l. 22 is :—‘ Lenvoye to Kyng Richard.’ In MS. F. it is simply headed ‘ Balade.’ For another allusion to king Richard at Windsor, see note to Lenvoy to Scogan, l. 43.

The general idea is taken from Boethius, bk. ii. met. 8, which Chaucer thus translates :—‘ That the world with stable feith varieth acordable chaungynges, that the contraryos qualite of elementz holden among hem-self aliaunce perdurable, . . . Al this acordaunce of thinges is bownden with loue, that gouerneth erthe and see, and hath also commaundementz to the heuenes ; and yif this loue slakede the brydelis, alle thinges that now louen hem to-gederes wolden maken a batayle contynuely, and stryuen to fordoon the fasoun of this worlde, the which they now leden in acordable feith by fayre moeuynges . . . O weleful weere mankynde, yif thilke loue that gouerneth heuene gouernede yowre corages.’

4. Word and deed ; or read Word and werk, as in Harl. 7333 and T.

5. Lyk, alike ; or read oon, one, as in Harl. and T. Up so down is the old phrase, and common. Modern English has ‘ improved ’ it into upside down, where side has to mean ‘ top.’

10. Unable, not able, wanting in ability or strength.

21. Here the Bannatyne MS. inserts a spurious fourth stanza. It runs thus:—

‘Falsheid, that sowld bene abhominable,
Now is regeing, but reformatioun,
Quha now gifis lergly ar maist dissavable,
For vycis ar the grund of sustentatioun;
All wit is turnit to cavillatioun,
Lawtie expellit, and all gentilnes,
That all is loist for laik of steidfastnes.’

This is very poor stuff.

24, 25. Suffre . . . don, suffer (to be) done; correct as being an old idiom. See my note to the Clerkes Tale, l. 1098.

28. For wed, two MSS. have drive; a reading which one is glad to reject.

XV. BALADE AGAINST WOMEN UNCONSTANT.

5. In a place, in one place. In Murray's Dictionary, the following is quoted from Caxton's print of Geoffroi de la Tour, leaf 4, back:—‘They satte att dyner in a hall and the quene in another.’

7. From Machault, ed. Tarbé, p. 56 (see Preface):—‘Qu'en lieu de bleu, Damè, vous vestez vert;’ on which M. Tarbé has the following note.—‘Bleu. Couleur exprimant la sincérité, la pureté, la constance; le vert, au contraire, exprimait les nouvelles amours, le changement, l'infidélité; au lieu de bleu se vêtir de vert, c'était avouer que l'on changeait d'ami.’ Blue was the colour of constancy, and green of inconstancy; see Notes to Anelida, l. 330; and my note to the Squire's Tale, l. 644.

In a poem called Le Remède de Fortune, Machault explains that pers, i. e. blue, means loyalty; red, ardent love; black, grief; white, joy; green, fickleness; yellow, falsehood.

8. Cf. James i. 23, 24.

9. It, i. e. the transient image; relative to the word thing, which is implied in no-thing in l. 8.

10. Read far'th, ber'th; as usual in Chaucer. So turn'th in l. 12.

12. Cf. ‘chaunging as a vane;’ Clerkes Tale, 996.

13. Sene, evident; A. S. ge-séne, ge-sýne, adj., evident, quite distinct from the pp. of the verb, which appears in Chaucer as seyn or yseyn. Other examples of the use of this adjective occur in ysene, C. T. Prol. 592; C. T. 11308 (Frank. Tale); sene, Compl. of Pite, 112; Roundels, 10.

15. Brotelnesse, fickleness. Cf. 'On brotel ground they bilde, and brotelnesse They finden, when they wenen sikernesne,' with precisely the same rime, Merch. Tale, 35.

16. Dalyda, Delilah. It is Dalida in the Monkes Tale, Group B, 3253; but see Book of the Duchesse, 738.

Creseide, the heroine of Chaucer's Troilus.

Candace, not put for Canace; see note to Parl. of Foules, 288. It is rather the queen Candace who tricked Alexander; see Wars of Alexander, ed. Skeat, p. 264.

18. Tache, defect; cf. P. Plowman, B. ix. 146. This is the word which best expresses the sense of touch (which Schmidt explains by trait) in the famous passage—'One touch of nature makes the whole world kin;' Shak. Troil. iii. 3. 175. I do not assert that touch is an error for tache, though even that is likely; but I say that the context shews that it is used in just the sense of tache. The same context also entirely condemns the forced sense of the passage, as commonly misapplied. It is somewhat curious that touchwood is corrupted from a different tache, which had the sense of dried fuel or tinder.

19. According to the modern proverb—'She has two strings to her bow.'

20. Al light for somer; this phrase begins l. 15 of the Canon's Yeoman's Prologue, Group G, 568; and the phrase wot what I mene occurs again in C. T., Group B, 93. This allusion to the wearing of light summer garments seems here to imply wantonness or fickleness. Canacee in the Squi. Tale was arrayed lightly (ll. 389, 390); but she was taking a walk in her own park, attended by her ladies. Skelton has: 'he wente so all for somer lyghte;' Bowge of Courte, 355; and again, in Philip Sparowe, 719, he tells us that Pandarus won nothing by his help of Troilus but 'lyght-for-somer grene.' It would seem that green was a favorite colour for summer garments.

XVI. LENVOY TO SCOGAN.

THERE are but three MSS., all much alike. For remarks upon Scogan, see the Preface. MSS. F. and P. have the heading 'Lenvoy de Chaucer a Scogan;' Gg. has:—'Litera directa de Scogon per G. C.'

1, 2. These first two lines are quite Dantesque. Cf. Purg. i. 46, 76; Inf. iii. 8.—'Son le leggi . . . cosi rotte;' 'gli editti eterni . . . guasti;' 'io eterno duro.'

3. The 'seven bright gods' are the seven planets. The allusion is to some great floods of rain that had fallen. Chaucer says it is because the heavenly influences are no longer controlled; the seven planets are allowed to weep upon the earth. The year was probably 1393, with respect to which we find in Stowe's Annales, ed. 1605, p. 495:—'In September, lightnings and thunders, in many places of England did much hurt, but esp[eci]ally in Cambridge-shire the same brent houses and corne near to Tolleworke, and in the Towne it brent terribly. Such abundance of water fell in October, that at Bury in Suffolke the church was full of water, and at Newmarket it bare downe walles of houses, so that men and women hardly escaped drowning.' Note the mention of Michaelmas in l. 19, shewing that the poem was written towards the close of the year.

7. Errour; among the senses given by Cotgrave for F. erreur we find 'ignorance, false opinion.' Owing to his ignorance, Chaucer is almost dead for fear; i. e. he wants to know the reason for it all.

9. Fifte cercle, fifth circle or sphere of the planets, reckoning from without; see note to Mars, l. 29. This fifth sphere is that of Venus.

14. This deluge of pestilence, this late pestilential flood. There were several great pestilences in the fourteenth century, notably in 1348-9, 1361-2, 1369, and 1375-6. Chaucer seems to imply that the bad weather may cause another plague of this character.

15. Goddess, goddess, Venus; here spoken of as the goddess of love.

16. Rakelnesse, rashness. The MSS. have rekelnesse, reklesnesse, rechelesnesse; the first is nearly right. Rakelnesse is Chaucer's word, Cant. Tales, 17232; five lines above, Phœbus blames his rakel hond, because he had slain his wife.

17. Forbode is; rather a forced rime to goddess.

21. Erst, before. I accept Chaucer's clear evidence that his friend Scogan (probably Henry Scogan) was not the same person as the John (or Thomas) Scogan to whom various silly jests were afterwards attributed.

22. To record, by way of record. Record, as Koch remarks, is here a sb., riming with lord; not the gerund record-e.

27. Of our figure, of our (portly) shape; see l. 31.

28. Him, i. e. Cupid. The Pepys MS. has hem, them, i. e. the arrows. Koch reads hem, and remarks that it makes the best sense. But it comes to much the same thing. Cf. Parl.

of Foules, 217, where some of Cupid's arrows are said to slay, and some to wound. It was the spear of Achilles that could both wound and cure; see Squi. Tale, 240, and the note. Perhaps, in some cases, the arrow of Cupid may be supposed to cure likewise; but it is simpler to ascribe the cure to Cupid himself. Observe the use of he in ll. 24 and 26, and of his in ll. 25 and 26.

29. I drede of, I fear for thy misfortune.

30. Wreche, vengeance; distinct from wreccche.

31. 'Gray-headed and round of shape;' i.e. like ourselves. Cf. what Chaucer says of his own shape; C. T. Group B, 1890. See my edition of the Prioress's Tale, p. 17.

35. 'See, the old gray-haired man is pleased to rime and amuse himself.' For ryme (as in the 3 MSS.), ed. 1561 (fol. 336, back) has renne. This would mean, 'See, the old gray horse is pleased to run about and play.' And possibly this is right; for the O. F. grisel properly means a gray horse, as shewn in Godefroy's O. F. Dict.

36. Mexcuse, for me excuse, excuse myself. Cf. mawreke, Complaint to Pite, 11.

43. For stremes, Gg. has wellis; but the whole expression stremes heed is equivalent to well, and we have which streme in l. 45 (Koch).

In the MSS., the words stremes heed are explained by Windsore (Windsor), and ende of whiche streme in l. 45 by Greenwich (Greenwich); explanations which are probably correct. Thus the stream is the Thames; Chaucer was living, in a solitary way, at Greenwich, whilst Scogan was with the court at Windsor, much nearer to the source of favour.

47. Tullius. Perhaps, says Koch, there is an allusion to Cicero's Epist. vi ad Cæcinam.

XVII. LENVOY A BUKTON.

1. Bukton. Most old editions have the queer reading:—'My mayster. &c. whan of Christ our kyng.' Tyrwhitt was the first to correct this, and added:—'It has always been printed at the end of the Book of the Duchesse, with an &c. in the first line instead of the name of Bukton; and in Mr. Urry's edition the following most unaccountable note is prefixed to it—"This seems an Envoy to the Duke of Lancaster after his loss of Blanch." From the reference to the Wife of Bathe, l. 29, I should suppose this to have been one of our author's later compositions, and I find that there was a Peter de Buketon, the King's Escheator for the County of York, in 1397 (Pat. 20 R. II. p. 2, m. 3, ap. Rymer) to whom this poem, from the familiar style of it, is much more likely to have been addressed than to the Duke of Lancaster.' Julian Notary's edition is the only one that retains Bukton's name.

My maister Bukton is in the vocative case.

2. 'What is truth?' See John xviii. 38.

5. Highte, promised; by confusion with heet (A.S. heht).

8. Eft, again, a second time. This seems to assert that Chaucer was at this time a widower. Cf. C. T. 9103.

9. 'Mariage est maus liens,' marriage is an evil tie; Rom. de la Rose, 8871. And again, with respect to marriage—'Quel forsenerie [witlessness] te maine A cest torment, a ceste paine?' R. Rose, 8783; with much more to the same effect. Cf. Cant. Tales, Marchantes Prologue (throughout).

18. Cf. I Cor. vii. 9, 28.

23. 'That it would be more pleasant for you to be taken prisoner in Friesland.' This seems to point to a period when such a mishap was not uncommon. In fact, some Englishmen were present in an expedition against Friesland which took place in the autumn of 1396. See the whole account in Froissart, Chron. bk. iv. cc. 77, 78. He tells us that the Frieslanders would not ransom the prisoners taken by their enemies; consequently, they could not exchange prisoners, and at last they put their prisoners to death. Thus the peculiar peril of being taken prisoner in Friesland is fully explained.

25. Proverbes, set of proverbs. Koch remarks—'Proverbes is rather curious, referring to a singular, but seems to be right, as proverbe would lose its last syllable, standing before a vowel.' Perhaps we should read or proverbe.

27. This answers to the modern proverb—'Let well alone.'

28. I.e. learn to know when you are well off. 'Half a loaf is better than no bread.' 'Better sit still than rise and fall' (Heywood). 'Better some of a pudding than none of pie' (Ray). In the Fairfax MS., the following rimed proverb is quoted at the end of the poem:—

'Better is to suffre, and fortune abyde,
Than¹ hastely to clymbe, and sodeynly to slyde.'

The same occurs (says Hazlitt) at the end of Caxton's edition of ¹ The MS. has And for Than (wrongly).

Lydgate's Stans Puer ad Mensam; but does not belong to that poem.

29. The reference is to the Wife of Bathes Prologue, which curiously enough, is again referred to by Chaucer in the Marchauntes Tale, C. T. 9559. This reference shews that the present poem was written quite late in life, as the whole tone of it shews; and the same remark applies to the Marchauntes Tale also. We may suspect that Chaucer was rather proud of his Prologue to the Wife of Bathes Tale. Unquestionably, he took a great deal of pains about it.

XVIII. COMPLEYNT OF VENUS.

THIS poem has frequently been printed as if it formed a part of The Complaynt of Mars; but it is a separate poem, and belongs to a later period.

The Complaynt of Mars is an original poem; but the present poem is a translation, being translated, as we are told, with considerable fidelity from a French poem by one Graunson (l. 82). Unfortunately, the original is not now known; perhaps it may one day be recovered. [See Additional Note.]

It consists of three Ballads and an Envoy, and bears a strong resemblance, in metrical form, to the poem on Fortune, each Ballad having three stanzas of eight lines each, with a refrain. It differs from 'Fortune' only in the arrangement of the rimes, which occur in the order ababbccb, instead of (as in Fortune) in the order ababbcbc. One rime (in -aunce) occurs in the second Ballad as well as in the first; but this is quite an accidental detail, of no importance. It must be remembered that the metre was not chosen by Chaucer, but by Graunson. The Envoy, which alone is original, consists of ten lines, rimed aabaabbaab. This arrangement is very unusual. See further in the note to l. 82.

In the MSS. T. and A. we have notes of some importance, written by Shirley. T. has:—'The Complaynt of Venus. And filowing begynnethe a balade translated out of frenshe in-to englissh by Chaucier, Geffrey; the frenshe made sir Otes de Grauntsome, knight Savosyen.' A. has:—'Here begynnethe a balade made by that worthy Knight of Savoye in frenshe, calde sir Otes Graunson; translated by Chauciers.' At the end of the copy in T. is:—'Hit is sayde that Graunsome made this last balade for Venus, resembled to my lady of york; aunswering the complaynt of Mars.' [But it is now known that there is no foundation for such a supposition, as Graunson's poem really consists of three separate ballads, which Chaucer connected.]

1. We must suppose Venus to be the speaker. Hence the subject of the first Ballad is the worthiness of the lover of Venus, in another word, of Mars; indeed, in Julian Notary's edition, the poem is headed 'The Compleint of Venus for Mars.' But Mars may be taken as a general type of true knighthood.

I have written the general subject of each Ballad at the head of each, merely for convenience. The subjects are:—(1) The Lover's worthiness; (2) Disquietude caused by Jealousy; (3) Satisfaction in Constancy. We thus have three movements, expressive of Admiration, Passing Doubt, and Reassurance.

Venus here expresses, when in a pensive mood, the comfort she finds in the feeling that her lover is worthy; for every one praises his excellence.

9. This portrait of a worthy knight should be placed side by side with that of a worthy lady, viz. Constance. See Man of Law's Tale, 162-8.

11. Wold, willed. The later E. would is dead, as a past participle, and only survives as a past tense. It is scarce even in Middle English, but occurs in P. Plowman, B. xv. 258—'if God hadde wolde [better wold] hym-selue.'

22. Aventure, luck; in this case, good luck.

23. Here is certainly a false rime; Chaucer nowhere else rimes -oure with -ure. But the conditions under which the poem was written were quite exceptional (see note to l. 79); so that this is no proof that the poem is spurious. There is a false rime in Sir Topas, Group B, l. 2092 (see my note).

25. In this second Ballad or Movement, an element of disturbance is introduced; jealous suspicions arise, but are put aside. Like the third Ballad, it is addressed to Love, which occurs, in the vocative case, in ll. 25, 49, and 57.

Venus says it is but suitable that lovers should have to pay dearly for 'the noble thing,' i. e. for the valuable treasure of having a worthy lover. They pay for it by various feelings and expressions of disquietude.

26. Men, one; the impersonal pronoun; quite as applicable to a woman as to a man. Cf. F. on.

31. The French text shews that we must certainly read Pleyne, not Pleye; and it makes better sense. This correction is due to Mr. Paget Toynbee; see his Specimens of Old French, p. 492.

37. The final e in lov-e is sounded, being preserved from elision by the cæsura. The sense is—'so dearly is love purchased in (return for) what he gives; he often gives inordinately, but bestows more sorrow than pleasure.'

46. Nouncerteyn, uncertainty. A parallel formation to noun-power, impotence, which occurs in Chaucer's tr. of Boethius, bk. iii. pr. 5, l. 2074.

49. In this third Ballad, Venus says she is glad to continue in her love, and contemns jealousy. She is thankful for her good fortune, and will never repent her choice.

50. Lace, snare, entanglement. Chaucer speaks of the lace of love, and the lace of Venus; Kn. Tale, 959, 1093.

52. To lete of, to leave off, desist.

56. All the MSS. read never; yet I believe it should be nat (not).

62. 'Let the jealous (i. e. Jealousy) put it to the test, (and so prove) that I will never, for any woe, change my mind.'

69. Wey, highroad. Wente, footpath.

70. The reading ye, for I, is out of the question; for herte is addressed as thou. So in l. 66, we must needs read thee, not you.

73. Princess. As the MSS. vary between Princesse and Princes, it is difficult to know whether the Envoy is addressed to a princess or to princes. It is true that Fortune seems to be addressed to three princes collectively, but this is unusual, and due to the peculiar form of that Envoy, which is supposed to be spoken by Fortune, not by the author. Moreover, the MSS. of Fortune have only the readings Princes and Princis; none of them has Princesse.

The present case seems different. Chaucer would naturally address his Envoy, in the usual manner, to a single person. The use of your and ye is merely the complimentary way of addressing a person of rank. The singular number seems implied by the use of the word benignitee; 'receive this complaint, addressed to your benignity in accordance with my small skill.' Your benignity seems to be used here much as we say your grace, your highness, your majesty. The plural would (if this be so) be your benignitees. There is no hint at all of the plural number.

But if the right reading be princess, this goes far to prove that Shirley's statement, viz. that Graunson wrote this poem for 'my lady of York,' should rather have been made with respect to Chaucer himself. Princesses are always somewhat scarce, but 'my lady of York' had the best of claims to the title, as she was daughter to no less a person than Pedro, king of Spain. She died in 1394 (Dugdale's Baronage, ii. 154; Stowe's Annales, 1605, p. 496); and this Envoy may have been written in 1393.

76. Eld, old age. See a similar allusion in Lenvoy to Scogan, 35, 38.

79. Penaunce, great trouble. The great trouble was caused, not by Chaucer's having any difficulty in finding rimes (witness his other Ballads), but in having to find rimes and translate word by word at the same time. Had he been writing an original poem, he would have enjoyed it; but it is quite another matter when it has to be done on a given pattern, and with a limited choice of words. This is the simple explanation of the whole matter.

Chaucer's translation of the ABC goes far to prove this; for, in every stanza, he begins by translating rather closely, but ends by deviating widely from the original in many instances, merely because he wanted to find rimes to words which he had already selected.

Moreover, the difficulty was much increased by the great number of lines ending with the same rime. There are but 8 different endings in the 72 lines of the poem, viz. 6 lines ending in -ure, -able, -yse, and -ay, and 12 in -aunce, -esse, -ing, and -ente. In the Envoy, Chaucer purposely limits himself to 2 endings, viz. -ee and -aunce, as a proof of his skill.

81. Curiositee, i.e. intricacy of metre.

82. Graunson. He is here called the flower of the poets of France. He was, accordingly, not an Englishman. According to Shirley, he was a knight of Savoy. This exactly agrees with the fact that Sir Oto de Graunson received an annuity of £126 13s. 4d. from Richard II, in November, 1393, for services rendered; see the mention of him in the Patent Rolls, 17 Rich. II, p. 1, no. 339, sixth skin; printed in Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 123. It is there expressly said that his sovereign seigneur was the Count of Savoy, but he had taken an oath of allegiance to the king of England. The same Graunson received a payment from Richard in 1372, and at other times.

Perhaps Graunson wrote the Complaint of Venus long after Chaucer's Complaint of Mars, from which it differs in tone so widely, and Chaucer Englished it, by request, soon afterwards.

XIX. THE COMPLEINT TO HIS EMPTY PURSE.

THE date of the Envoy to this Poem can be determined almost to a day. Henry IV was received as king by the parliament, Sept. 30, 1399. Chaucer received his answer, in the shape of an additional grant of forty marks yearly, on Oct. 3 of the same year. Consequently, the date of the Envoy is Sept. 30 or Oct. 1 or 2 in that year. It is obvious that the poem itself had been written beforehand; see note to l. 17. We may date it 1399. As far as we know, it is Chaucer's last work.

A somewhat similar complaint was addressed to the French king John II by G. de Machault in 1351-6; but it is in short rimed lines; see his works, ed. Tarbé, p. 78. But the real model which Chaucer had in view was, in my opinion, the Ballade by Eustache Deschamps, written in 1381, and printed in Tarbé's edition, at p. 55.

This Ballade is of a similar character, having three stanzas of eight lines each, with a somewhat similar refrain, viz.—'Mais de paier n'y sçay voie ne tour,' i.e. but how to pay I know therein nō way nor method. It was written on a similar occasion, viz. after the death of Charles V of France, and the accession of Charles VI, who had promised Deschamps a pension, but had not paid it. Hence the opening lines:—

'Dieux absoille le bon Roy trespassé!
Et Dieux consulte celui qui est en vie!
Il me donna rente le temps passé
A mon vivant; laquelle je n'ay mie.'

The Envoy has but six lines, though the stanzas have eight; similarly, Chaucer's Envoy has but five lines (rimed aabba), though the stanzas have seven. Chaucer's Envoy is in a very unusual metre, which was copied by the author of the Cuckoo and the Nightingale.

The Title, in MS. F. is—'The Complaynt of Chaucer to his Purse.' In Caxton's print, it is—'The compleint of Chaucer vnto his empty purse.' In MS. P.—'La Compleint de Chaucer a sa Bourse voidé.' MS. Harl. has—'A supplicacion to Kyng Richard by chaucier.' The last of these, written by Shirley, is curious. If not a mere mistake, it seems to imply that the Complaint was first prepared before king Richard was deposed, though, by means of the Envoy, it was addressed to his successor. However, this copy of Shirley's gives the Envoy; so it may have been a mere mistake. Line 23 is decisive ; see note below.

4. Koch remarks, that the Additional MS. 22139, which alone has That, is here superior to the rest ; and he may be right. Still, the reading For is quite intelligible.

8. This day. This hints at impatience ; the poet did not contemplate having long to wait. But we must take it in connection with l. 17 ; see note to that line.

10. Colour ; with reference to golden coins. So also in the Doctours Tale (C. T. 11971) the golden colour of Virginia's hair is expressed by—

‘And Phebus dyed hath her tresses grete
Lyk to the stremes of his burned hete.’

11. Four MSS., as well as the printed copies, read That of yelownesse, &c. ; and this may very well be right. If so, the accentuation is : ‘That of yél . ownésse . háddë . néver . pére.’ MS. Harl. 2251 has That of yowre Ielownesse, but the yowre is merely copied in from l. 10.

12. Stere, rudder ; see Man of Lawes Tale, 448, 833.

17. Out of this toun. This seems to mean—‘help me to retire from London to some cheaper place.’ At any rate, toun seems to refer to some large town, where prices were high. From the tone of this line, and that of l. 8, I should conclude that the poem was written on some occasion of special temporary difficulty, irrespectively of general poverty ; and that the Envoy was hastily added afterwards, without revision of the poem itself.

19. ‘That is, I am as bare of money as the tonsure of a friar is of hair ;’ Bell.

22. Brutes Albion, the Albion of Brutus. Albion is the old name for England or Britain in the histories which follow Geoffrey of Monmouth and profess to give the ancient history of Britain before the coming of the Romans. See Layamon's Brut, l. 1243 ; Higden's Polychronicon, bk. i. c. 39 ; Fabyan's Chronicle, ed. Ellis, pp. 1, 2, 7. According to the same accounts, Albion was first reigned over by Brutus, in English spelling Brute, a descendant of Æneas of Troy, who arrived in Albion (says Fabyan) in the eighteenth year of Eli, judge of Israel. Layamon's poem is a translation from a poem by Wace, entitled Brut ; and Wace borrowed from Geoffrey of Monmouth. The Welsh word brut simply means ‘a chronicle ;’ and it is not unlikely that the name Brutus was evolved from it.

23. This line makes it certain that the king meant is Henry IV; and indeed, the title conquerour in l. 21 proves the same thing sufficiently. 'In Henry IV's proclamation to the people of England he founds his title on conquest, hereditary right, and election; and from this inconsistent and absurd document Chaucer no doubt took his cue;' Bell.

XX. PROVERBS.

THE titles in the MSS. are: Ad. Prouerbe; F. Proverbe of Chaucer; Ha. Prouerbe of Chaucers.

Each proverb takes the form of a question or objection, in two lines, followed by an answer in two lines more.

There is a fair copy of them (but not well spelt) in the black-letter edition of 1561, fol. cccxl. They there appear without the addition of fourteen unconnected lines (not by Chaucer) which have been recklessly appended to them in modern editions. The title in ed. 1561 is—'A Prouerbe agaynst couitise and negligence.'

For the metre, compare the Envoy to a Ballad by Deschamps, ed. Tarbé, pp. 23, 24.

7. At the head of a Ballad by Deschamps, ed. Tarbé, i. 132, is the French proverb—'Qui trop embrasse, mal étreint.' Cotgrave, s. v. embrasser, has: 'Trop embrasser, et peu estraigner, to meddle with more business then he can wield; to have too many irons in the fire; to lose all by coveting all.'

But the most interesting point is the use of this proverb by Chaucer elsewhere, viz. in the Tale of Melibeus, Group B, l. 2405—'For the prouerbe seith, he that to mucche embraceth, distreyneth litel.' See the context.

It is also quoted by Lydgate, in his description of the Merchant in the Dance of Machabre.

XXI. A COMPLAINT TO HIS LADY.

I HAVE already said, at p. 213 (footnote), that I only know of two MS. copies; the better is that in MS. Harl. 78, in Shirley's hand-writing, where it is written as a continuation of the Complaint to Pity. It was printed by Dr. Furnivall in his Odd-texts of Chaucer's Poems, Part I., p. ii., and the lines are numbered in continuation of those in the Complaint to Pity. In Chaucer's Works, ed. 1561, it is printed as a separate poem, with the heading—‘These verses next folowing were compiled by Geffray Chauser, and in the writen copies foloweth at the ende of the complainte of petee.’ This implies that Stowe had seen more than one MS. containing these lines.

However, the poem has nothing to do with the Complaint of Pity; for which reason the lines are here numbered separately, and the title ‘A Complaint to his Lady’ is supplied, for want of a better.

The poem is so badly spelt in Shirley’s MS. as quite to obscure its diction, which is that of the fourteenth century. I have therefore re-spelt it throughout, so as to shew the right pronunciation.

The printed copy resembles Shirley’s MS. so closely, that both seem to have been derived from a common source. But there is a strange and unaccountable variation in l. 100. The MS. here has—‘For I am sette on yowe in suche manere;’ whilst ed. 1561 has—‘For I am set so hy vpon your whele.’ The latter reading does not suit the right order of the rimes.

The poem evidently consists of several fragments, all upon the same subject, of hopeless, but true love.

It should be compared with the Complaint of Pity, the first forty lines of the Book of the Duchess, the Parliament of Foules (ll. 416–441), and the Complaint of Anelida. Indeed, the last of these is more or less founded upon it, and some of the expressions (including one complete line) occur there again.

1. MS. nightes. This will not scan, nor does it make good sense. Read night; cf. l. 8, and Book of the Duchess, l. 22.

3. Cf. Compl. Pite, 81—‘Allas! what herte may hit longe endure?’

7. Desespeired, full of despair. This, and not dispaired (as in ed. 1561), is the right form. Cf. desesperaunce, in Troil. ii. 530, 1307 (ed. Morris).

8, 9. Cf. Anelida, 333, 334.

14, 15. I repeat this line, because we require a rime to fulfille, l. 17; whilst at the same time l. 14 evidently ends a stanza.

16. I omit that, and insert EEK, in order to make sense.

17. I supply he, meaning Love. Love is masculine in l. 42, precisely as in the Parl. of Foules, l. 5.

19. I alter and yit to yit from, to make sense; the verb to arace absolutely requires from or fro; see Clerkes Tale, 1103, and particularly l. 18 of sect. xv. (p. 200), where we find the very phrase ‘fro your herte arace.’

24. I supply this line from Compl. Mars. 189, to rime with l. 22.

If Fragments II and III were ever joined together, we must suppose that at least five lines have been lost, as I have already shewn in the note to Dr. Furnivall's Trial Forewords, p. 96.

Thus, after l. 23, ending in asterte, we should require lines ending in -ye, -erse, -ye, -erse, and -ede respectively, to fill the gap. However, I have kept fragments II and III apart, and it is then sufficient to supply three lines. Lines 25 and 26 are from the Compl. of Pite, 22, 17, and from Anelida, 307.

32. I suspect some corruption; the MS. has The wyse eknytte, and ed. 1561 has The Wise, eknit. As it stands, it means—'Her surname moreover is the Fair Ruthless one, (or) the Wise one, united with Good Fortune.' Fair Ruthless is a translation of the French phrase La Belle Dame sans Merci, which occurs as the title of a poem once attributed to Chaucer. The Wise one, &c., means that she is wise and fortunate, and will not impair her good fortune by bestowing any thought upon her lover. Shirley often writes e for initial y.

35. Almost identical with Anelida, 222—'More then myself, an hundred thousand sythe.'

36. Obviously corrupt; neither sound nor sense is right. Read:—'Than al this worldes richest (or riche) creature.' Creature may mean 'created thing.'

39. Cf. Kn. Tale, l. 380—'Wel hath Fortune y-turned thee the dys.'

41. My swete fo. So in Anelida, l. 272; and cf. l. 64 below.

42, 43. Cf. Parl. of Foules, ll. 439, 440.

44. Ed. 1561 also reads In. Moreover, it omits ek in l. 45, which I supply.

47-49. This remarkable statement re-appears twice elsewhere; see Parl. Foules, 90, 91; and Compl. of Pite, ll. 99-104.

50. Repeated in Anelida, 237.

51, 52. Cf. Anelida, 181, 182; Compl. Pite, 110; Parl. Foules, 7.

55. Cf. Anelida, 214—'That turned is to quaking al my daunce.'

56. Here a line is missing, as again at l. 59. This appears from the form of the stanza, in which the rimes are arranged in the order aabaabcd d c.

63. Cf. the use of y-whet in Anelida, 212.

64, 65. Cf. Anelida, 272—'My swete fo, why do ye so for shame?'

73. For leest, ed. 1561 has best!

79. The MS. has—'What so I wist that were to youre hyennesse'; where youre hyennesse is absurdly repeated from l 76. Ed. 1561 has the same error. It is obvious that the right final word is distresse, to be preceded by yow or your; of which I prefer yow.

83. The MS. ends the line with wille fulfille. As wille is dissyllabic, this is impossible, and the repetition of -il-le is distressing. I therefore substitute the monosyllabic wil.

86. Shal, i.e. shall be. Cf. shal=shall (do so), in Gloss. to Prioresses Tale. See also p. 221, ll. 78, 87; and note on p. 404, l. 87.

88. Leveth wel, believe me wholly. Ed. 1561 wrongly has loueth.

98. I read nil, as being simpler. The MS. has ne wil, which would be read—'That I n' wil ay'; which comes to much the same thing.

100. Set, fixed, bound. Ed. 1561 has—'For I am set so hy vpon your whele,' which disturbs the rimes.

102. MS. beon euer als truwe; ed. 1561 has—bene euer as trewe.

103. MS. 'As any man can er may on lyue;'; ed. 1561 has—'As any man can or maye on liue. It is clear that some final word (almost certainly here) has been dropped, because the scribe thought the line ought to rime with fyve above. After this, man was inserted to fill up. Here rimes with manere in the Miller's Prologue, and elsewhere. Moreover, Chaucer employs here at the end of a line more than thirty times; cf. Kn. Tale, 402, 812, 853, 961, &c.

107, 108. Cf. Anelida, 247, 248.

123. Cf. Anelida, 216. Ed. 1561 subjoins the word Explicit.

XXII. AN AMOROUS COMPLEINT.

There are two other MS. copies of this poem, viz. in MSS. F. and B. See remarks upon these in the Preface, at p. lxxxii.

1. In Troil. iv. 516, the parallel line is:—'Of me, that am the wofulleste wight'; where wofullest-e has four syllables. Chaucer constantly employs sorwe or sorw so as to occupy the time of a monosyllable; hence the right reading in this case is sorwfullest-e, with final -e. See also Troil. ii. 450—'So as she was the ferfulleste wight.'

3. Recoverer, recovery, cure; answering to O. F. recovrier, sb. succour, aid, cure, recovery; see examples in La Langue et la Littérature Française, by Bartsch and Horning, 1887. Gower uses recoverir in a like sense; ed. Pauli, i. 265. In Specimens of English, ed. Morris and Skeat, pt. ii., p. 156, l. 394, recouerer may likewise mean 'succour'; and the whole line may mean, 'they each of them cried for succour (to be obtained) from the Creator.'

6. Cf. p. 215, l. 53:—'So litel rewthe hath she upon my peyne.'

7. Cf. p. 214, l. 33:—'That, for I love her, sleeth me giltelees.'

12. Despitous, hateful. The word is common in Chaucer; see Prol. 516, Kn. Ta. 738, C. T. 6343, Troil. ii. 435, v. 199. Trevisa translates ignominiosa seruitute by 'in a dispitous bondage'; Higden's Polychron. v. 87. The sense is—'You have banished me to that hateful island whence no man may escape alive.' The allusion is to the isle of Naxos, here used as a synonym for a state of hopeless despair. It was the island in which Ariadne was left, when deserted by Theseus; and Chaucer alludes to it at least thrice in a similar way; see C. T. Group B. 68, Ho. of Fame, 416, Legend of Good Women, 2163. Another reading is—'Ye han me cast in thilke spitous yle'; see p. lxxxii.

13. Perhaps we should drop ne, as in MSS. F. and B. (see p. lxxxii.), and read lyv-e as a dissyllable. This is certainly better.

14. This have I, such is my reward. For, because. Perhaps we should drop best, as in F. and B. (see p. lxxxii.), and read lov-e as a dissyllable.

16. Another reading is—'If that it were a thing possible to do'; see p. lxxxii. In that case, we must read possibl', with the accent on i.

17. Cf. p. 216, l. 94:—'For ye be oon the worthiest on-lyve.'

19. Cf. p. 216, l. 93:—'I am so litel worthy.'

24, 25. Perhaps (see p. lxxxii.) we should read—

I may wel singe, 'in sory tyme I spende
My lyf'; that song is my confusioun.

Cf. XI. 7, and the note (p. 376).

28. Perhaps corrupt; it seems to mean—'All these things caused me, in that (very state of despair), to love you dearly.'

31. The insertion of to is justified by the parallel line—'And I my deeth to yow wol al forgive'; XXI. 119 (p. 217).

36, 37. Perhaps read—'And sithen I am of my sorwe the cause, And sithen I have this'; &c. See p. lxxxii.

43. Perhaps read—'So that, algates, she is verray rote.'

45. Cf. C. T. 11287:—'For with o word ye may me sleen or save.'

52. As to my dome, in my judgment; as in V. 480, and in Troil. iv. 387.

54. Cf. 'whyl the world may dure'; V. 616.

55. Bihynde, in the rear, far away; cf. XXI. 5.

57. The idea is the same as in the Compl. of Mars, ll. 264-270.

62. See l. 10 above.

64. For ye read yet; see p. lxxxii.

65. For mekly read meke; see p. lxxxii.

70, 71. Cf. C. T. 11625—'And lothest wer of al this world displese.'

72. Compare the description of Dorigen, C. T. 11255-66. We have similar expressions in Troil. iii. 1501:—'As wisly verray God my soule save'; and in Legend of Good Women, 1802:—'As wisly Iupiter my soule save.' And see XXIII. 4.

75. For shulde, perhaps a better reading is shul; see p. lxxxii.

76. For unto, perhaps a better reading is on; see p. lxxxii. Chaucer has both pleyne unto and pleyne on; see C. T., Cler. Tale (Group E), 97; and Pard. Tale (Group C), 512.

77. Cf. Troil. iii. 1183, and v. 1344:—'Forgive it me, myn owne swete herte.'

79. Cf. Troil. iii. 141—'And I to ben your very humble trewe.'

81. 'Sun of the bright and clear star'; i. e. source of light to the planet Venus. The 'star' can hardly be other than this bright planet, which was supposed to be auspicious to lovers. Cf. Troil. v. 638:—'O sterre, of which I lost have al the light.' Observe that MSS. F. and B. read over for of; this will not scan, but it suggests the sense intended.

82. Oon, one and the same, ever constant; as in III. 649. Cf. also Troil. iii. 143:—'And ever to desiren freshly newe To serven.' Another reading is—'Alwey in oon.' This refers to sonne, i. e. to the constancy and endurance of the sun as the source of light.

83. So in Troil. iii. 1512:—'For I am thyn, by God and by my trouthe'; and in Troil. iii. 120.

85. See Parl. of Foules, 309, 310, whence I supply the word ther. These lines in the Parl. of Foules may have been borrowed from the present passage, i. e. if the 'Amorous Compleint' is the older poem of the two, as is probable. In any case, the connection is obvious. Cf. also Parl. Foules, 386.

87. Cf. Parl. Foules, 419:—'Whos I am al, and ever wol her serve.' The correction of was (Harl.) to whos is confirmed by MSS. F. and B.; see p. lxxxii.

Shal, shall be; as in Troil. iii. 103; cf. Kn. Tale, 286, and note to l. 86, on p. 401.

91. Cf. Kn. Tale, 285, 286; Parl. Foules, 419, 420. All three passages are much alike.

XXIII. A BALADE OF COMPLEYNT.

1. Cf. Troil. iii. 104:—'And thogh I dar ne can unto yow pleyne.'

4. See note to XXII. 72, and l. 8 below.

13, 14. Cf. XXI. 111, 112 (p. 217).

16. Dyt-e, ditty (dissyllabic); see IX. 622. It here rimes with despyte and plyte. The two latter rime together in Troil. iii. 1037, though in the Cant. Tales the usual forms are despyt and plyt-e respectively.

20. Hertes lady; see XXI. 60 (p. 215).

GLOSSARIAL INDEX.

The following are the principal contractions used:—

A.S. = Anglo-Saxon.

F. = French.

Icel. = Icelandic.

Lat. = Latin.

M.E. = Middle English.

O.F. = Old French.

Also the following:—v. = verb in the infinitive mood; pr. s. (and pt. s.) mean the third person singular of the present (and past) tense, except when 1 or 2 (first person or second person) is prefixed; pr. pl. (and pt. pl.) mean, likewise, the third person plural of the present (and past) tense; imp. s. = second person singular of the imperative mood; and imp. pl. = second person plural of the same. Other contractions, such as s. = substantive, and pp. = past participle, will be readily understood.

Further information as to the etymologies of the words is given in Mayhew and Skeat's Middle-English Dictionary, and in Skeat's Concise Etymological Dictionary.

The references are to the number of the piece and to the line. Thus '3. 213' means Poem No. 3 (Bock of the Duchesse), line 213.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE SECOND EDITION.

INTRODUCTORY NOTICE.

SINCE the publication of my former edition of the Minor Poems of Chaucer in 1888, several corrections and improvements, both in the Text and Notes, have been made by myself or suggested by others. In particular, my edition of the Complete Works of Chaucer in 1894 naturally led to the reconsideration of several passages. I therefore take the present opportunity of supplying some additional remarks having reference to all parts of the book, viz. the Introduction, the Text, the Notes, and the Glossarial Index.

It is fitting to give precedence to the two Poems which have an excellent claim to be added to the Text, viz. the Balade to Rosemounde and the Balade on Womanly Noblesse. I also append, for illustration, two remarkably good examples of Complaints, obviously written by the same author, and probably at the same time; they are not attributed to Chaucer in the MS. in which they occur, but they are excellent of their kind, and, for my own part, I believe them to be his; especially as they occur immediately after his Complaint to Pitè, and are in a similar strain.

XXIV. TO ROSEMOUNDE. A BALADE.

[This poem was discovered by me in the Bodleian Library on the 2nd of April, 1891. It is written on a fly-leaf at the end of MS. Rawlinson Poet. 163, which also contains a copy of Chaucer's Troilus. At the end of the 'Troilus' is the colophon: 'Here endith the book of Troylus and of Cresseyde.' This colophon is preceded by 'Tregentyll,' and followed by 'Chaucer.' On the next leaf (no. 114) is the Balade, without any title, at the foot of which is 'Tregentil'—'Chaucer,' the two names being written at a considerable distance apart. I believe 'Tregentil' to represent the name of the scribe. In any case, 'Chaucer' represents the name of the author. It is a happy specimen of his humour.]

MADAME, ye ben of al beautè shryne
 As fer as cerclèd is the mappemounde;
 For as the cristal glorious ye shyne,
 And lyke ruby ben your chekes rounde.
 Therwith ye ben so mery and so jocounde, 5
 That at a revel whan that I see you daunce,
 It is an oynement unto my wounde,
 Thogh ye to me ne do no daliaunce.
 For thogh I wepe of teres ful a tyne,
 Yet may that wo myn herte nat confounde; 10
 Your seemly voys that ye so smal out-twyne
 Maketh my thought in joye and blis habounde.
 So curteisly I go, with lovè bounde,
 That to my-self I sey, in my penaunce,
 Suffyseth me to love you, Rosemounde, 15
 Thogh ye to me ne do no daliaunce.

XXVI. COMPLAINT TO MY MORTAL FOE.

[This Complaint follows Chaucer's Complaint to Pite in MS. Harl. 7578, fol. 15. There is no title but 'Balade'; but the poem is rather a Complaint. I take the title from l. 26; cf. Compl. to his Lady, 41, 64.]

AL hoolly youres, withouten otheres part!
 Wherfore? y-wis, that I ne can ne may
 My service chaungen; thus of al suche art
 The lerninge I desyre for ever and ay.
 And evermore, whyl that I livë may, 5
 In trouthe I wol your servaunt stille abyde,
 Although my wo encresë day by day,
 Til that to me be come the dethes tyde.

Saint Valentyne! to you I rénovele
 My woful lyf, as I can, compleyninge; 10
 But, as me thinketh, to you a quarele
 Right greet I have, whan I, rememberinge
 Bitwene how kinde, ayeins the yeres springe,
 Upon your day, doth ech foul chese his make;
 And you list not in swich comfórt me bringe, 15
 That to her grace my lady shulde me take.

Wherfor unto you, Cupide, I beseche,
 Furth with Venús, noble lusty goddessse,
 Sith ye may best my sorowe lesse and eche;
 And I, your man, oppressed with distresse, 20

From MS. Harl. 7578, fol. 15. Rejected spellings of the MS. are here given.

1. holly; others parte.	2. I wisse.	3. By (error for My); arte.	4. desire.
5. while; leue.	6. trought (sic); youre; abide.	7. be (read by).	12. grete; whanne; remem- bringe.
13. howe kende.	14. Vppon youre; doith eche foule.	15. lyste; suche comforte.

Can not crye 'help!' but to your gentilnesse :
 So voucheth sauf, sith I, your man, wol dye,
 My ladies herte in pitè folde and presse,
 That of my peyne I finde remedye.

To your conning, my hertes right princesse, 25
 My mortal fo, which I best love and serve,
 I recomaunde my boistous lewednesse.
 And, for I can not altherbest deserve
 Your grace, I preye, as he that wol nat swerve,
 That I may fare the better for my trouthe ; 30
 Sith I am youres, til deth my herte kerve,
 On me, your man, now mercy have and routhe.

21. cry helpe; vnto (read to); gentelnesse. 22. safe. 24.

 26. foo. 27. leudenesse. 29. prey. 30. trouth. 31. herte
 wol kerue (omit wol; see XXVII. 39). 32. routh.

XXVII. COMPLAINT TO MY LODE-STERRE.

[This Complaint follows the preceding in the MS. It is simply headed 'Balade,' but is really a Complaint. I take the title from l. 12; cf. Troilus, V. 232, 638, 1392.]

OF gretter cause may no wight him compleyne
 Than I; for Love hath set me in swich caas
 That lasse joye and more encrees of peyne
 Ne hath no man; wherfore I crye 'allas!'
 A thousand tyme, whan I have tyme and space. 5
 For she, that is my verray sorowes grounde,
 Wol with her grace no wyse my sorowes sounde.

And that, shulde be my sorowes hertes leche,
 Is me ayeins, and maketh me swich werre,
 That shortly, [in] al maner thought and speche, 10
 Whether it be that I be nigh or ferre,
 I misse the grace of you, my lode-sterre,
 Which causeth me on you thus for to crye;
 And al it is for lakke of remedye.

My' soverain joye thus is my mortal fo; 15
 She that shulde causen al my lustinesse
 List in no wyse of my sorowes saye 'ho,'
 But let me thus darraine, in hevinesse,
 With woful thoughtes and my grete distresse,
 The which she mighte right wel, every tyde, 20
 If that her liste, out of my herte gyde.

From MS. Harl. 7578, fol. 15, back. I give rejected spellings of the
 MS. 2. y (for I); hath me sette in swiche. 3. encrese. 5.
 whenne. 6. sheo; werry (read verray). 7. Wolle; wise. 9.

 21. oute; guyde.

But it is so, that her list, in no wyse,
 Have pitee on my woful besenese;
 And I ne can do no maner servyse
 That may me torne out of my hevinesse; 25
 So woldë god, that she now wolde impresse
 Right in her herte my trouthe and eek good wille;
 And let me not, for lakke of mercy, spille!

Now wele I woot why thus I smerte sore;
 For couthe I wele, as othere folkes, feyne, 30
 Than neded me to live in peyne no more,
 But, whan I were fro you, unteye my reyne,
 And, for the tyme, drawe in another cheyne.
 But woldë god that al swich were y-knowe
 And duly punisshed of hye and lowe. 35

Swich lyf defye I, bothe in thought and word,
 For yet me were wel lever for to sterve
 Than in my herte for to make an hord
 Of any falshood; for, til deth to-kerve
 My herte and body, shal I never swerve 40
 From you, that best may be my fynal cure,
 But, at your liste, abyde myn aventure;

And preye to you, noble seint Valentyne,
 My ladies herte that ye wolde embrace,
 And make her pitee to me more enclyne 45
 That I may stonden in her noble grace
 In hasty tyme, whyl I have lyves space:
 For yit wiste I never noon, of my lyve,
 So litel hony in so fayre hyve!

22. liste; wise. 24. kanne; maner servise. 25. be (read me);

 (but see note below). 40. neuere. 46. here. 47. whiles. 48.
 yitte; neuere none; lyfe. 49. hiue.

NOTES TO THE PRECEDING POEMS.

XXIV. TO ROSEMOUNDE.

This graceful Balade is a happy specimen of Chaucer's skill in riming. The metre is precisely that of 'Fortune,' resembling that of the Monkes Tale with the addition of a refrain; only the same rimes are used throughout. The formula is ababbcbc.

2. 'As far as the map of the world extends.' Mappemounde is the F. mappemonde, Lat. mappa mundi. It also occurs in Gower, Conf. Amant. iii. 102.

9. tyne, a large tub; O.F. tine. A similar phrase occurs in the Chevalier du Cigne, as given in Bartsch, Chrest. Française, 350. 23: 'Le jour i ot plore de larmes pleine tine.' Cotgrave has:—'Tine, a Stand, open Tub, or Soe, most in use during the time of vintage, and holding about three or four pailfuls, and commonly borne by a Stang, between two.' We picture to ourselves the brawny porters, staggering beneath the stang, on which is slung the 'tine' containing the four or five pailfuls of the poet's tears.

10. The poet, in all his despair, is sustained and refreshed by regarding the lady's beauty.

11. seemly, excellent, pleasing; the MS. has semy, by error.

smal, fine in tone, delicate; perhaps treble. A good example occurs in the Flower and the Leaf, 180:—

'With voices sweet entuned, and so smalle,
That it me thoughte the swetest melodye,' &c.

Cf. 'his vois gentil and smal'; Cant. Tales, A 3360; and 'A vois he hath as smal as hath a goot'; A 688. The reading fynall (for finall) arose from mistaking the long s (f) for f, and the m for in.

out-twyne, twist out, force out; an unusual word.

17. 'Never was pike so involved in galantine-sauce as I am completely involved in love.'

This is a humorous allusion to a manner of serving up pikes which is well illustrated in the Fifteenth-Century Cookery-books, ed. Austin, p. 101, where a recipe for 'pike in Galentyne' directs that the cook should 'cast the sauce under him and above him, that he be al y-hidde in the sauce'. At p. 108 of the same, we are told that the way to make 'sauce galentyne' is to steep crusts of brown bread in vinegar, adding powdered cinnamon till it is brown; after which the vinegar is to be strained twice or thrice through a strainer, and some pepper and salt are to be added. Thus 'sauce galentine' was a seasoned pickle. See further in the note to X. 16, at p. 371.

20. 'True Tristram the second.' For Tristram, see note to V. 290, p. 296. Tristram was a famous example of truth or constancy, as his love was inspired by having drunk a magic love-potion, from the effects of which he never recovered. The MS. has Tristam; the spelling Tristan occurs in Old French.

21. refreyd, cooled down; lit. 'refrigerated'. This rare word occurs twice in Troilus; ii. 1343, and v. 507; also in the Cant. Tales, I. 341. Dr. Murray tells me that no writer but Chaucer is known to have used this form of the word, though Caxton has refroid, from Continental French; whereas refreyd is of Anglo-French origin.

afounde, sink, be submerged. See O.F. afonder, to plunge under water, also to sink, in Godefroy; and affonder in Cotgrave. Chaucer found this rare word in Le Roman de la Rose, 19914. See Afounder in New E. Dictionary.

XXV. WOMANLY NOBLESSE.

TITLE. I take the title from l. 25; cf. Troil. i. 287. The metre exhibits the nine-line stanza, as in Anelida, 211-9; but the same rimes occur in all three stanzas. The six-line Envoy is unique. There are 19 lines ending in -aunce, 12 in -esse, and 2 in -ede. The first 21 lines of the Complaint of Venus exhibit 6 rimes in -aunce, and 12 in -esse.

1. Note how lines 1 and 2 are re-echoed in ll. 32, 33. For a precisely similar effect, see Anelida, 211, 350.

8. ful chose, fully chosen; parallel to ful drive in C. T., F 1230.

13. A line lost. Dr. Furnivall proposed to read—'Taketh me, lady, in your obeisaunce', which I adopt; cf. II. 84.

14. souvenaunce, remembrance; not found elsewhere in Chaucer.

16. humblely is trisyllabic; see Leg. Good Women, 156; Troil. ii. 1719, v. 1354.

20. lo adds emphasis to swich; cf. lo, this, Troil. v. 54; lo, which, Troil. iv. 1231.

22. allegeaunce, alleviation. The pp. allegged, allayed, occurs in Boeth. bk. iv. pr. 4. 12.

26. outraunce, extreme violence, great hurt; see Godefroy.

27. unbuxumnesse, unsubmitiveness; cf. buxumnesse in the Glossary.

XXVI. TO MY MORTAL FOE.

1. Cf. XXII. 87 (p. 221); Troil. v. 1318, i. 960.

3. 'Love hath me taught no more of his art,' &c.; XXI. 42-3 (p. 214).

9. Cf. IV. 13, 14; XXVII. 43; V. 386-9; XXII. 85-6.

14. 'Whan every foul [ther] chesen shal his make'; XXII. 86. Cf. V. 310.

19. eche, augment; 'hir sorwes eche', Troil. i. 705; and see the Glossary.

27. 'And to your trouthe ay I me recomaunde'; Troil. v. 1414. 'He gan him recomaunde unto hir grace'; Troil. ii. 1070; cf. Troil. iv. 1693. 'I am a boistous man'; C. T., H 211.

29-31. Cf. XXVII. 39, 40.

XXVII. TO MY LODE-STERRE.

This Complaint is closely allied to the preceding. Compare XXVI. 26 with XXVII. 15; XXVI. 9 with XXVII. 43; and XXVI. 29-31 with XXVII. 39, 40.

5. Cf. 'whyl I have tyme and space'; C. T., A 35.

7. sounde, heal; see the Glossary.

8. Cf. 'my lyes leche', III. 920; 'my soules leche', I. 134. Perhaps read hertes sorwes leche; cf. Troil. ii. 1066.

10. Cf. 'as in his speche'; Troil. ii. 1069.

18. let, (she) lets, allows. darraine, do battle, maintain my cause; hence with in l. 19 means 'against'. This intransitive use of darraine is rare, but 'battle' may be understood; and to darraine bataille meant 'to maintain in vindication of a claim'. See Deraign in the New E. Dictionary. And cf. Cant. Tales, A 1631, 2097.

20. every tyde, at every time, at all times.

26. impresse; cf. Troil. ii. 1371.

28. spille; 'Why will ye suffre than that thus I spille?' XXI. 121.

32. reyn, bridle; for this image cf. VII. 184.

33. Cf. 'in thy cheyne', C. T., F 1356; 'in my cheyne', VII. 284; 'in his cheyne', VI. 16.

39. MS. deth the kerue. As e and o are constantly confused, the prefix to (written apart from kerue, as usual) may have looked like te, and may easily have been altered to the (= thee). But we have forkerveth in the Manciples Tale, H 340; and cf. the parallel passage above, in XXVI. 29-31.

47. Here spac-e rimes with embrace, whereas in l. 5 it rimes with allas. This is not more irregular than the riming of embrace with compas in XX. 7. Cf. plac-e in C. Tales, B 1910, with its variant plas in the same, B 1971.

Besides the above, I may mention my edition of Chaucer in six volumes (Oxford, 1894). The introduction to vol. vi, in particular, gives much information regarding Chaucer's dialect, grammar, and metre.

Introd. p. xi, l. 2. In Anglia, xiii. 186, Dr. Köppel opines that this line is parenthetical, and explains it thus—'He wrote also, many a day since (Dante doth so express himself in English)—the piteous story of Ceyx and Alcion'. I am unable to see any sense in this; but others perhaps may be more fortunate. I would rather explain it thus—'He wrote also, many a day since, Dante in English—(so he expresses himself)—the piteous story' &c. By so I understand 'like Dante'. It is really of no consequence; for, as I show on p. xii, Lydgate knew the House of Fame well enough; and he knew it to be Chaucer's, for Chaucer claimed it himself.

P. xvii. Thynne reprinted (in 1532) all the genuine minor poems that had previously been printed by Caxton and Julian Notary, and added the Complaint to Pity, Book of the Duchesse, and Lak of Stedfastnesse.

The dates of the first four editions are 1532, 1542, about 1550, and 1561. Occasionally, the booksellers try to sell the edition of 1550 (being undated) as a second edition, pretending that it was printed before 1542. A very slight collation of the texts proves that this is false. Thus, in 1542, the Plowman's Tale follows the Parson's Tale; but in later editions it precedes it. It is absurd to suppose that it first preceded it, then followed it, and then preceded it again! In fact, the first edition gives the most correct text, and the later ones grow gradually worse, by the insertion of fresh errors.

See, as regards this and other points concerning the bibliography of Chaucer, Notes and Queries, 6th Series, VIII. 381; IX. 138, 141, 361, 422, 462; X. 3, 64, 422.

Thynne's first edition (1532) contains the pieces numbered 1-27, and 31-40, on pp. xix-xxi; in the same order. Nos. 28-30 (all by Lydgate) were added by Stowe in 1561, merely to fill up a blank half-column! He also supplied no. 41, from MS. Trin. Coll. R. 3. 19, to fill up a small blank space.

P. xix; no. 11. The words 'made by Ihon lidgate' are not in the earliest editions, but were added by Stowe. However, the ascription is quite correct.

P. xx; no. 36. Thynne has the same absurd error; he prints 'vyllage.' Caxton has 'vilage'; see p. xvi.

P. xxv. It is no longer possible to doubt the genuineness of Fragment A (lines 1-1705) of the Romaunt of the Rose. It is quoted verbally in Lydgate's Complaint of the Black Knight, written about 1401. On the other hand, Fragment B (lines 1706-5810) contains Northumbrian forms (in rime), and treats the final -e in a way which Chaucer nowhere adopts.

As to no. 6, note that Lydgate praises a lady named Margaret; see Temple of Glas, ed. Schick, p. 64, l. 395.

P. xxvii; no. 26. The MSS. shew that this piece, printed without any break in all the editions, really consists of two totally different and independent poems, both by Lydgate. The Ballade in commendation of our Ladie consists of 19 stanzas only. The remaining 16 stanzas are addressed to an earthly mistress, beginning—

'I have none English conuenient and digne
Myne hartes heale, lady, thee with to honour.'

It is at the end of the third stanza of the latter poem that he quotes the first line of Merciless Beauty.

P. xxviii; no. 31. The MS. copy of the Cuckoo and Nightingale, marked Ff. 1. 6 in the Cambridge Univ. Library, has the colophon: 'Explicit Clanvowe.' We may safely conclude that 'Clanvowe' was the author's name; a scribe's name frequently has 'quod' before it, but not 'explicit.'

Moreover, there can be little doubt as to his identity. Sir John Clanvowe, who must have been known (by name at least) to Hoccleve, as appears from the mention of their names in the same document (quoted in Hoccleve's Poems, ed. Furnivall, p. x) died before April, 1390. But Sir Thomas Clanvowe seems to have been a well-known person at court. He was one of twenty-five knights who accompanied John Beaufort (son of John of Gaunt) to Barbary in 1390 (Wylie, Hist. of Hen. IV, iii. 261). He was of a Herefordshire family, from Wigmore (Inquisitiones post Mortem), and was a friend of 'prince Hal.' This accounts, in the most natural manner, for the dedication of the poem to 'the quene at Wodestok.' The queen was Joanna of Navarre, married to Henry IV on Feb. 7, 1403; who held the manor and park of Woodstock as a part of her dower (Wylie, Hist. Hen. IV, ii. 284). We may safely date the poem between 1403 and 1410, when the Lollards (of whom Clanvowe was one) fell into disgrace. It is one of the earliest and best of the poems that imitate Chaucer's versification.

P. xxix; no. 38. This little poem has been carefully edited by Schick; see his edition of the Temp'le of Glas, p. 68. He thinks, as I do, that it is certainly Lydgate's; and indeed, Lydgate was very fond of anything that could take the form of a sort of catalogue. It is founded on the medieval list of the Duodecim Abusiones, or Twelve Abuses; which are as follows.

Rex sine sapientia.	Episcopus sine doctrina.
Dominus sine consilio.	Mulier sine castitate.
Miles sine probitate.	Iudex sine iusticia.
Diues sine elemosina.	Populus sine lege.
Senex sine religione.	Seruus sine timore.
Pauper superbus.	Adolescens sine obediencia.

P. xxxi; l. 3. This poem, apparently on The Fall of Man, is really a portion of Lydgate's Court of Sapience; see Schick's edition of the Temple of Glas, p. clx. (footnote).

P. xxxi; l. 8. By 'queen Iane' is meant, of course, Joan of Navarre, who married Henry IV in 1403.

P. xxxii; l. 12. We must remember that Lydgate actually speaks of Chaucer by the name of Galfride, in his Troy-boke, at least twice; bk. ii. c. 15, bk. iii. c. 25; nevertheless, Schick contends that I am wrong as to this point, and that the 'craft of Galfride' means the art of poetry, as expounded by Geoffrey de Vinsauf. I now think that he is right, but this only provides one more argument against the genuineness of the Court of Love; for it is inconceivable that the author of the Nonnes Preestes Tale should acknowledge the superior merit of a versifier whom he has so severely satirised. Besides, it clearly belongs to the sixteenth century, and the names Philogenet and Philobone, which occur in it, savour of the time of the 'revival of learning.' Chaucer, indeed, uses the name Philostrate in the Knights Tale (A 1428), but he merely copies it from Boccaccio; and it is amusing to find that Boccaccio himself did not understand it.

P. xxxii; no. 62. A second MS. of The Isle of Ladies is now in the British Museum (MS. Addit. 10303). Both MSS. are of the sixteenth century.

P. xxxii; no. 63. There was once a manuscript copy of this poem in the Marquis of Bath's Chaucer MS. at Longleat, written after 1450; but it has disappeared (Academy, Jan. 19, 1878).

P. xxxiii; l. 5. I have found the word henchman (but spelt henksman) as early as 1392; see Skeat, A Student's Pastime, p. 344.

P. xxxiii. Nos. 66, 67, and 68 first appeared, at the end of the Table of Contents, in the edition of 1542. These were taken from MS. Trin. Coll. Camb. R. 3. 13, a MS. which also contains the Canterbury Tales; and this no doubt suggested their insertion. See Todd's Illustrations of Chaucer, p. 120.

P. xxxiii; footnote. Plesure occurs once, in XXI. 126; but as it is not found at the end of a line, its pronunciation is left doubtful.

P. xxxv; no. 71. It was pointed out by Mr. M. Liddell (Athenæum, Dec. 28, 1895) that this stanza is really taken from the Prologue to John Walton's verse translation of Boethius, written in 1410. See Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry, sect. 20; ed. Hazlitt, iii. 39.

P. xxxvi (conclusion). The Romaunt of the Rose, as we now have it, is here included among the spurious pieces. The first fragment (which is admittedly genuine) extends to somewhat less than a fourth part of the whole.

P. xxxviii. MS. P. also contains a copy of no. XII. We may add to the list of MSS. the following:—

Phillipps 9053.—II. VII. XIX. XXI (of which it preserves the unique final stanza).

Phillipps 8299.—XII.

Phillipps 9030 (now MS. Addit. 34360 in the British Museum).—XXV.

Rawlinson Poet. 163; Bodleian Library.—XXIV.

Arch. Selden. B. 10; Bodleian Library.—XI. XII.

Hatton 73; Bodleian Library.—XII. XIV.

P. xxxix. Hence it follows that we may add the following to the MS. copies of the poems.

II. Also in Phillipps 9053.

VII. Also in the same.

XI. Also in Arch. Seld. B 10.

XII. Also in P.; Arch. Seld. B 10; Hatton 73; Phillipps 8299.

XIV. Also in Hatton 73.

XIX. Also in Phillipps 9053.

XXI. Also in the same; with an additional stanza and the ascription of the poem to Chaucer,

P. xli; l. 9. This curious poem is really Lydgate's Reason and Sensualite, which, according to Schick, is his finest production; see Temple of Glas, ed. Schick, p. cxlvii. I quote it (by its correct title) on p. 349 above.

P. xlv; l. 5. The Dreme of a Lover is certainly the same as the Temple of Glas; see Schick's edition of the latter, p. xxiii.

P. xlv; l. 10. Schick thinks that the passage here quoted refers to Lydgate's Temple of Glas, but he agrees with me in saying that we have Shirley's authority for attributing The Black Knight to Lydgate. And the internal evidence is decisively in the same direction.

P. xlvi; l. 5. The Fall of Man really forms a part of Lydgate's Court of Sapience (Schick, p. clx).

P. ~~xlvii~~; line 3 from bottom. Better spelt De Deguilleville, which should also be substituted in l. 3 of note 2.

P. lvi; l. 11. Add—We may roughly divide the better MSS. into two sets, thus: (a) C. Gl. L. Jo.; (b) F. B. Gg. See Koch, in Anglia, iv. b. 100.

The metre of this poem is worthy of notice. Chaucer, who introduced it from the French, uses it again in the Former Age, Lenvoy to Bukton, and the Monkes Tale; cp. p. 468. More complex examples of it, with repeated rimes, are seen in the Balade to Rosemounde, Fortune, and Venus. By adding to it an Alexandrine line, we obtain the Spenserian stanza.

P. lvii. Add (respecting no. II.)—The least valuable MSS. seem to be Ff., Ph., and Lt. The rest may be divided into three sets, viz. A, Ba, and Bb, the two last going back to a common source B. These are: (A)—Sh. Ha.; (Ba)—F. B.; (Bb)—Tn. Trin. See Koch, in Anglia, iv. b. 96. In this poem we have the earliest known example, in English, of the famous 7-line stanza, which Chaucer adopted from Machault.

P. lix. Add (respecting no. III.)—This poem is written in the common metre of four accents, borrowed from French, and already in use before Chaucer's time, as in the poem of Havelok. There are only two other examples in Chaucer, viz. the Hous of Fame and the Romaunt of the Rose (fragment A).

P. lix; no. IV. Add—The 'Mars' 9-line stanza, unique in Chaucer, was copied by G. Douglas (Palace of Honour, part 3), and by Sir D. Lyndesay (Prol. to Testament of Papyngo).

P. lxxvii; no. V. Prof. Ward follows Koch. In l. 17, I correct the text to 'referring back to.' Prof. Ward has: 'written on or about.' This is an oversight. Chaucer could not tell that the betrothal would last nearly a year, till the marriage had taken place. That is to say, it was written in 1382.

P. lxxviii. The stanza quoted on this page is not really from Lydgate's Ballade in Commendacion of our Ladie, which consists of only 19 stanzas; but is the third stanza of Lydgate's Ballade to his Soverain Lady (as I call it), which, in all the editions, is joined on to it without any break. See p. 478.

P. lxxix; l. 23. It is objected that the form Dalida occurs very early, viz. in the Septuagint version of the Old Testament; but this does not affect the argument, as the Septuagint was in Greek.

P. lxxx; no. VII. The principal MSS. may be thus grouped. A and B are two groups, of which the former may be subdivided into Aa and Ab. (Aa)—F. B. (Ab)—T. D. Lt. (B)—Harl. Cx. See Koch, in Anglia, iv. b. 102.

P. lxxxi. Lydgate seems to have been indebted to the Hous of Fame for the general idea of his poem called The Temple of Glas, and even for the title of it (see Ho. Fame, 120). See the admirable edition of this poem by Dr. J. Schick (Early Eng. Text Society).

P. lxxxv; no. XIII. Henry Scogan died in the 9th year of Henry IV, i. e. 1407-8 (Inquisitiones post Mortem, iii. 315). Hence the poem is probably earlier than 1407. A very likely date is about 1405, when the young princes were aged, respectively, 17, 16, 15, and 14.

P. lxxxvi; third quotation. In l. 3, ed. 1621 has 'lesse'; but it is obviously a printer's error for 'losse,' which is the reading in ed. 1532 and even in the third undated edition.

P. lxxxvii; no. XVIII. Add the following:—Much new light has lately been thrown upon this poem by Dr. A. Piaget, who contributed an article to Romania, tome xix, on 'Oton de Granson et ses Poésies,' in 1890. The author succeeded in discovering a large number of Granson's poems, including, to our great gain, the three Balades of which Chaucer's 'Compleynt of Venus' is a translation. I am thus enabled to give the original French below; pp. 484, 485.

He has also given us an interesting account of Granson himself, for which I must refer my readers to his article. It appears that Froissart mentions Granson at least four times (twice in bk. i. c. 303, A. D. 1372 ; once in c. 305 ; and once in c. 331, A. D. 1379), as fighting on the side of the English ; see Johnes' translation. He was in Savoy from 1389 to 1391 ; but, in the latter year, was accused of being concerned in the death of Amadeus VII, count of Savoy, in consequence of which he returned to England, and in 1393 his estates in Savoy were confiscated. It was on this occasion that Richard II assigned to him the pension above mentioned. With the hope of clearing himself from the serious charge laid against him, Granson fought a judicial duel, at Bourg-en-Bresse, on Aug. 7, 1397, in which, however, he was slain.

Now that we have the original before us, we can see clearly, as Dr. Piaget says, that Chaucer has certainly not translated the original Ballades verbally¹ throughout. He does so sometimes, as in ll. 27, 28, 30, 31, in which the closeness of the translation is marvellous ; but, usually, he paraphrases the original to a considerable extent. In the first Balade, he has even altered the general motive ; in the original, Granson sings the praises of his lady ; in Chaucer, it is a lady who praises the worthiness of her lover.

It also becomes probable that the title 'The Complaynt of Venus,' which seems to have been suggested by Shirley, is by no means a fitting one. It is not suitable for Venus, unless the 'Venus' be a mortal ; neither is it a continuous 'Complaynt,' being simply a linking together of three separate and distinct Balades.

It is clear to me that, when Chaucer added his Envoy, he made the difficulties of following the original closely and of preserving the original metre his excuse ; and that what really troubled him was the difficulty of adapting the French, especially Balade I., so as to be acceptable to the 'Princess' who enjoined him to translate these Balades. In particular, he evidently aimed at giving them a sort of connection, so that one should follow the other naturally ; which accounts for the changes in the first of them. It is significant, perhaps, that the allusion to 'youth' (F. jeunesse) in l. 70 is entirely dropped.

On the whole, I think we may still accept the theory that this poem was written at the request (practically, the command) of Isabel, duchess of York, the probable 'Venus' of the 'Compleynt of Mars.' Chaucer^s seems to have thrown the three Balades together, linking them so as to express a lady's constancy in love, and choosing such language as he deemed would be most acceptable to the princess. He then ingeniously, and not without some humour, protests that any apparent alterations are due to his own dulness and the difficulties of translating verbally, and of preserving the rimes.

¹ In l. 81, the copies have:—'To folowe word by word the curiosite,' but this makes the line too long by a whole foot. I much suspect that we ought merely to read in word.

In l. 31, the F. text shews us that we must read Pleyne, not Pleye (as in the MSS.). This was pointed out by Mr. Paget Toynbee.

I here give the three Balades by Graunson, in the original French.

I.

Il n'est confort que tant de biens me face,
Quant je ne puis a ma dame parler,
Comme d'avoir temps, loisir et espace
De longnement en sa valour penser,
Et [de] ses doulz fais femenins recorder
Dedens mon cuer. C'est ma vie, par m'ame,
Ne je ne truis nul homme qui me blasme,
Car' chacun a joye de li loer.

Il a en li bonté, beauté et grace,
Plus que nulz homs ne saroit deviser.
C'est grant eür quant en si pou de place
Dieux a voulu tous les biens assembler.
Honneur la vult sur toutes honorer.
Oncques ne vi si [douce et] plaisant dame
De toutes gens avoir si noble femme;
Car chacun a joye de li loer.

Ou qu'elle soit, bien fait et mal efface.
Moult bien li siet le rire et le jouer.
Son cuer esbat et les autres soulace
Si liement qu'on ne l'en doit blasmer.
De li veoir ne se puet nulz lasser.
Son regart vault tous les biens d'un royaum
Il semble bien qu'elle est tres noble femme,
Car chacun a joye de li loer.

II.

Certes, Amours, c'est chose convenable
Que voz grans biens [vous] faciez comparer :
Veillier ou lit et jeuner a la table,
Rire plourant et en plaignant chanter,

Baissier les yeux quant on doit regarder,
Souvent changier couleur et contenance,
Plaindre en dormant et songier a la dance
Tout a rebours de ce qu'on vult trouver.

Jalousie, c'est l'amer du deable ;
Elle vult tout veoir et escouter,
Ne nulz ne fait chose si raisonnable
Que tout a mal ne le vueille tourner.
Amours, ainsi fault voz dons acheter,
Et vous donnez souvent sanz ordonnance
Assez douleur et petit de plaisance,
Tout a rebours de ce qu'on vult trouver.

Pour un court temps le gieu est agreable ;
Mais trop par est encombreux a user,
Et, ja soit il a dames honorable,
A leurs amis est trop grief a porter.
Toudiz convient souffrir et endurer,
Sans nul certain languir en esperance,
Et recevoir mainte male meschance,
Tout a rebours de ce qu'on vult trouver.

III.

Amours, sachiez que pas ne le vueil dire
Pour moy getter hors des amoureux las ;
Car j'ay porté si long temps mon martire
Que mon vivant ne le guerpipay pas.
Il me souffist d'avoir tant de soulas
Que veoir puisse la [belle et] gracieuse ;
Combien qu'el est [en]vers moy dangereuse,
De li servir ne serai jamaiz las.

Certes, Amours, quant bien droit [je] remire
Les haulx estas, les moyens et les bas,
Vous m'avez fait de tous les bons eslire,
A mon avis, le meilleur, en tous cas.
Or aime, cuer, ainsy que tu pourras ;
Car ja n'aras paine si dolereuse,
Pour ma dame, que ne me soit joieuse ;
De li servir ne seray jamaiz las.

Cuer, il te doit assez plus que souffire
D'avoir choisy ce[lle] que choisi as.
Ne quiers [or] plus royaume ne empire,
Car si bonne jamaiz ne trouveras,
Ne si belle par mes yeux ne verras :
C'est jeunesse sachant et savoureuse.
Ja soit elle de m'amour desdaigneuse,
De li servir ne seray jamaiz las.

VARIOUS READINGS IN THE TEXT.

I. 8. Or read—Venquissshed me hath; read as Venquisssh-ëd m'hath. The elision of the e in me is occasionally found; see note to II. 11.

I. 86. If we keep the reading bothe have, read it as both'hav-ë. I altered it because have is so often a monosyllable.

I. 163. The repetition of his herte in ll. 163, 164 is suspicious, and a verb is wanted. And I am convinced that fighte is a scribal error for prighte, pricked, pierced; fighte means 'pitched.' I would read—'And [suffred] eek, that Longius him prighte.' Koch puts Dreygh for And, but it is hardly the right word; it means 'suffered' in the sense of the Scottish dree, and does not give the right shade of meaning. The use of eek suggests the repetition of the verb suffre.

I. 181. MS. Gg. supplies bright after lady; if we alter this to the vocative form bright-e, we mend the line without inserting bothe from Harl. 2251. Read—'Now lady brighte, sith thou canst and wilt.'

I. 183. Or read—'Bring us unto that', &c.

II. 16. Insert a before stoon; it occurs in MS. Lt. and in Thynne; cf. VII. 170. Read—'Deed as a stoon'.

II. 61. The reading y-falle is confirmed by Thynne, who, however, misspells it yfal.

III. 14. Koch would retain sorwful, but it requires too much contraction to make it acceptable; sory would do better.

It is almost hopeless to reconstruct the text of this poem; either the authorities are very bad, or the text was poor from the beginning, and the rules for scansion inconsistent.

III. 36. Or read—'I hold-ë hit be a siknesse.'

III. 76. The reading of Th. F. is 'Now for to speke of Alcyone his wyf', which is obviously too long. It is clear that Alcyone is a gloss upon his wyf, which has crept into the text. Read, with Ten Brink—'Now for to speke[n] of his wyf'.

III. 82. her thoghte, repeated from l. 81, is very poor. Read—'Hit was not wel [he dwelte] so'; i. e. it was not right that he should tarry so long.

III. 86. Perhaps read—'That hadde, alas! this noble wyf'. The MSS. have alas in l. 87, where it is not wanted (Koch).

- III. 105. 'Ne coude she' would read more smoothly.
- III. 130. Or read—'That madë her to slepe sone'.
- III. 131. As far as scansion goes, right can be got into the line; but the repetition of it in line 132 is then unpleasant.
- III. 136. Here again, Iuno can be read; but we had her just above, in l. 132; and she makes the line much smoother.
- III. 150. Or read—'Right as hit was wont to do'.
- III. 154. Keep ne before stente, if you will.
- III. 207. body would read better if followed by a vowel. I should like to read—'Bury my body, at whiche a tyde'; i. e. whenever you find it. This improves the sense even more than the metre.
- III. 348. Koch would read—'And I herd' going, up and doune'. This emphasis on I is very harsh; it were far better to omit And altogether. This would give—'I herdë going, up and doune'.
- III. 479. Or read—'Is deed, and is fro me a-noon'. So Lange.
- III. 517. Or read (with Lange)—'And grettë him, as I best coude'.
- III. 548. Or read—'But certes, [good] sir, if that ye'.
- III. 647. Retain—'Ful many oon háth she thus y-blent'.
- III. 681. Much better is—'My wille, whan my fers she caughte'; due to Koch.
- III. 751. Better (with Koch)—'That thou hoolly, with al thy wit'. I. e. omit shall, and construe Do as a subjunctive.
- III. 840. Koch would omit maner, but the loss of it reduces the emphasis. I believe that counseyl is a mere gloss for reed. Note the improvement—'No maner reed, but at her look'.
- III. 1020. For wolde not read molde (Koch).
- III. 1040. Koch proposes—'My worldes welfare and goddisse'. But goddisse is inadmissible in Chaucer; the reference to XVI. 15-17 is not to the point, as the syllable -es is there unaccented and the vowel obscure.
- III. 1060. Koch would omit al; I would rather omit the. Or read ál th', with the e of the almost suppressed.
- III. 1069. Read Antilogus; see note on this line at p. 491.
- III. 1141. Or read—'Or have ye oght [y-]doon amis'.
- III. 1193. I am clear that brast is here an elided form of braste, pt. t. subj., meaning 'would burst'.
- IV. 25, 26. F. has departyng, morwnyng, but the forms in -ingę are required; see my ed. of Chaucer, vol. vi. p. lxxviii.
- IV. 28. Omit hath, with several MSS. (Koch). Thynne retains hath, but it is hardly wanted.

IV. 103. Or read—'Ful hevy he was to', &c. (Koch). No MS. has it.

IV. 141. Or read—'Now helpe god', &c. (Koch). No MS. has it.

V. 197. Read 'acord', as in Gg.; F. and others have 'acorde'.

V. 502. shap is written for shape, the e being elided; so also own for owne in l. 506.

V. 637. Thynne omits to, which is in no way required.

VII. 15. Thynne has Polynnina, which is better.

VII. 53. F. B. Tn. insert and after kille, as in the text; which D. Lt. Harl. Cx. omit. Harl. yche othir for to kylle (a good reading, but unsupported). Read—'Of Thebes and Grecē, everich other to kille'.

VII. 214. Harl. Cx. in; rest to (before quaking). The reading in in l. 215 shews that we should prefer 'in quaking' in this line also.

VII. 229. So in F. B.; Tn. Harl. Cx. D. Now is he fals, alas! and causeles.

VII. 266. Koch would omit so, but it may stand. Scan—And wás | so bésy || There is no difficulty at all.

VII. 299. F. B. shal; rest sholde or shulde.

XIII. 20. Koch agrees with this, except that he reads can for wol; and perhaps it is better.

XVIII. 26. T. A. Tn. Th. thy; F. Ff. the. The former is certainly right, because the French text has 'voz grans biens'. Read—'That men ful dere bye thy noble thing.'

XVIII. 31. All the MSS. wrongly have 'Pley' or 'Pleye'. But we now know that 'Pleyne' is right; for the French text has Plaindre.

XVIII. 33. Another reading is—'Ialousye be hanged by a cable!' This answers better to the French—'Jalousie, c'est l'amer du deable'.

XXI. MS. Ph. is merely a copy of MS. Sh.; so it tells us nothing new. But it alone preserves the last stanza. And it has the important colophon—Explicit Pyte; dan Chaucer Lauteire (?). The last word is doubtful.

XXI. 32. Sh. eknytte; Ph. I-knyt (better).

XXI. 83. Sh. wille; Ph. wil (better).

XXII. For various readings, see p. lxxxiii.

XXII. 24, 25. For the best reading, see p. lxxxiv.

XXII. 29. MSS. F. B. actually supply in before dispayre; also that in l. 54; and hir in l. 62.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE NOTES.

I. A B C.

73. Or read K'clendèrs as a trisyllable.

86. If we keep bothe have, as in the MSS., read it as 'both' hav-ë.'

163. Read—'And [suffred] eek, that Longius him prighte.'
See above; p. 486.

176. Chaucer omits ll. 265-7 of the French; see p. lv.

181. See a better reading above; p. 486.

II. COMPLEYNT UNTO PITEE.

I believe that Hoccleve expressly refers to this poem. He says, in his De Regim. Principum, p. 32 (ed. Wright):—

'Pitee is beriede, I trowe, by my trouthe;
If she be dede, god have hir soule, I preye!'

15. Add—'The hearse was usually a four-square frame of timber, which was hung with black cloth, and garnished with flags and scutcheons and lights'; Strutt, Manners and Customs, iii. 159. See the whole passage, which describes the funeral of Henry VII.

110. See VII. 182, and the note.

III. THE BOOK OF THE DUCHESS.

1. But it is now held that Froissart's poem was composed before Chaucer's. If so, Chaucer is the imitator. Cf. l. 167, and the note on the same, p. 490.

14. Read sory; see above, p. 486.

49. Keep the reading of the MSS. Note that phísicièn is metrically trisyllabic, as if [ftzishèn]; for which see l. 571—'Ne hél-e mé may phísicièn.'

73. Here telles is a Northern form, which is very rare in Chaucer. It occurs again in Ho. Fame, 426, as a rime to elles. Cf. bringes, H. F. 1908.

167; p. 242, l. 2. But it is now held that Chaucer copied Froissart (cf. note on p. 489, to III. 1). Mr. H. Bradley says that Froissart wrote his poem in 1373, not later (as Sandras says); Academy, Feb. 9, 1895; p. 125.

192. However, brayde also occurs, Ho. Fame, 1678; by confusion with layde, sayde.

239. We might strike out to before pleye. Cf. 'me list ful evel pleye,' C. Tales, A 1127; 'me list not pleye,' Troil. v. 987. But 'Him liste not to pleye,' Rom. Rose, 344.

250. Cf. Our English Home, p. 106.

368. It is possible that, after all, Chaucer meant, by Octavien, the Emperor Augustus, and likened Edward III to him. It is certain that Deschamps uses Octovien of Augustus (Œuvres Complètes, ii. 5; Soc. des Anc. Textes Français):—

'Quant verray je le temps Octovien
Que toute paix fut au monde affermee.'

Augustus is called Octovian in Leg. Good Women, 624.

399, 400. As swēt-e is essentially dissyllabic, fete must be the same. Fete is dat. pl., answering to A.S. fōtum. This became, regularly, fote, but was changed to fete by association with the nom. and acc. fēt. Hence the final -e in fēt-e is correct for the dat. case; and under with a dative is common. Hence fete may be the right form in V. 213 (where it does not affect the scansion); and again in IX. 1050; and in C. T., B 1104. So, perhaps, in III. 199, where it may rime with hete (variant of hette, hatte); and again, in III. 502, where it may rime with sete (A.S. sāte), pt. t. subjunctive. It is a difficult matter.

438. Here ken is Kentish. I have shewn (Chaucer's Works, vi. xxiii) that Chaucer frequently uses the Kentish e where the A.S. form has y. See Knette and Knet in the Glossary; also Stente, Lest (impers. verb), Shette.

663. Jean de Meun doubtless followed John of Salisbury, but he mistook him; for the latter attributes to Attalus the invention, not of chess, but of playing at dice. See Lounsbury, Studies in Chaucer, ii. 363.

723. Eustache Deschamps (Œuvres Complètes, Soc. des Anc. Textes Français), ii. 226, has a Lay on the twelve estates of men; these are the King, Priest, Doctour, Knight, and also the Clerk, Labourer, Judge, Smith, Merchant, Taverner, Advocate, and Notary. I think it obvious that the last eight of these correspond to the eight pawns in Caxton, whilst the first four correspond to the superior pieces.

823. If we keep the reading of the MSS., we must accent the words thus—Than ány . óther . planéte . in héven. This may be right, because 'planéte' occurs again in l. 693, which see.

943. Canel-boon, collar-bone; lit. channel-bone, i.e. bone with a channel behind it. See Three Met. Romances (Camden Soc.), p. 19; Gloss. to Babees Book (ed. Furnivall); and the Percy Folio MS., i. 387. I put and for or; the sense requires a conjunction.

958. My proposed reading no maner lak is rendered much more likely if we compare these lines with their probable original.

'Son menton, sa gorge polie,
Son col plus blanc que noy negie,
Et de son gent corps la fasson,
En quel n'a point de meffasson.'

Machault, Confort d'Ami; ed. Tarbè, p. 99.

964. Cf. also C. T., D 333—'A man to light his candle at his lanterne.'

982. Scan: Th' soléyn . fenix . of A'ra . býë. Cf. 'Com la fenix souleine est au sejour En Arabie'; Gower, Balade 35. If this scansion is too difficult, omit the.

1028. Go hoodless. See the long account in the Knight de la Tour Landry, ed. Wright, p. 169; and the Squyer of Low Degree, 171-200.

1069. The form Antilegius is wrong, and we know that Antilogus is meant. For Antilogus is the form in Benoit (see note to l. 1070, p. 266), and Antilochus is the form in Guido; both of whom mean Archilochus. Lydgate has the spelling Anthylogus (Troy-boke, ed. 1555, fol. X 3).

1206. The note at p. 270 requires correction. It is now known that the E. dis-mal is derived from an Anglo-French phrase dis mal (=Lat. dies mali, plural), evil or unlucky days; whence came the M.E. phrase in the dismal, 'in the evil days,' or (more loosely) 'on an evil day.' (So here, in the dismal means 'on an unlucky day,' or 'in an evil time.') When the exact sense was lost, the suffix -al seemed to be adjectival, and the word dismal became at last an adjective. Dr. Chance notes that Chaucer very likely took dis mal to mean 'ten evils' (decem mali); see l. 1207.

Moreover, with-alle and dismalle should rather be with-al and dismal.

1288. M. Sandras (Étude sur Chaucer, p. 95) says this is from Machault's Jugement du Bon Roi de Behaigne :—

'De nos deux cuers estoit si juste paire
 Qu'onques ne fu l'un a l'autre contraire ;
 Tuit d'un accord, une pensee avoient.
 De volenté, de desir se sambloient.
 Un bien, un mal, une joie sentoient
 Conjointement.
 N'onques ne fu entre eux deux autrement.'

IV. THE COMPLAINT OF MARS.

2. Koch approves of the reading yon, but asks if it is known elsewhere in Chaucer. We find 'yon wenche,' C. T., A 4178.

207. The readings are :—Ju. T. Th. Deprauen ; Ar. Depeynen ; F. Tn. Departen. Read Depraven, not Departen.

239. Only F. Th. have to ; the rest have til. Hence read—
 'Til mony a fish is wood til that he be.'

246. F. Tn. Ar. stones of ; Ju. T. omit of. We should probably omit of, in which case inde becomes an adjective, signifying 'dark blue,' as in Rom. Rose (E. version), l. 67.

V. THE PARLEMENT OF FOULES.

In this poem, Chaucer was indebted, for some particulars, to Boccaccio's Amorosa Visione. See Köppel's article in Anglia, xiv. 233 ; and see notes below.

60. Köppel compares Rom. Rose, 17149 :—

'Qui tornoient en lor esperes,
 Si cum l'establi Diex li pieres.
 Là font entr'eus lor armonies
Qui sunt causes des melodies
 Et des diversités de tons,' &c.

90. From Boethius, lib. iii. prose 3 :—'quia uel aberat, quod abesse non uelles, uel aderat, quod abesse uoluisses.' See II. 99-104 ; XXI. 47-49.

99. But the real origin of this stanza (as shewn by Prof. Lounsbury) is to be found in Claudian, In Sextum Consulatum Honorii Augusti Praefatio, ll. 3-10 :—

'Venator defessa toro cum membra reponit,
 Mens tamen ad silvas et sua lustra redit.
 Iudicibus lites, aurigae somnia currus,
 Vanaque nocturnis meta cavetur equis.'

Furto gaudet amans ; permutat navita merces ;
 Et vigil elapsas quaerit anarus opes.
 Blandaue largitur frustra sitientibus aegris
 Irriguus gelido pocula fonte sopor.'

113. Compare Boccaccio, Amorosa Visione, ii. 1 :—

'O somma e graziosa intelligenza, . .
 Metti nel petto mio la tua potenza ;
 Non sofferir che fugga, O Citerea,
 A me l'ingegno all'opera presente,' &c.

120. Compare Boccaccio, Amorosa Visione, ii. 20 :—

'Cosi m'andava nel nuovo sentiero,
 Seguendo i passi della donna bella . . .
Ck'un muro antico nella mente mise, . . .
 Donna mi disse: vedi, qui la porta.'

127. Cf. Boccaccio, Am. Vis. iii. 13 :—

'Ed io allora a riguardar mi diedi
La scritta in alto che pareva d'oro, . . .
 Ricchezza, dignità, ogni tesoro,
 Gloria mondana copiosamente,
 Do a color che passan nel mio coro,' &c.

148. Cf. Rom. Rose, 1181 (Chaucer's translation) :—

'Right as an adamant, y-wis,
 Can drawn to him stilly
 The yren, that is leyd therby.'

171. 'For mery and wel bigoon was she' ; Rom. Rose, 580.

176. See also Seneca, Œdipus, 532 ; Lucan, Phars. iii. 440 ;
Claudian, De Raptu Pros. ii. 107.

179. From Claudian ; who has—'Apta fretis abies' ; and
 'tumulos tectura cupressus.'

182. From Claudian ;—'uenturi praescia laurus.'

186. 'And floures yelowe, whyte, and rede' ; Rom. Rose, 1433.
 203-4. Cf. Dante, Purgat. xxviii. 7-16 ; 97-100 ; 118-121.

214. Cupid had arrows of gold and lead ; Ovid, Met. i. 467-

471. The right reading is certainly 'And Wil, his doghter, tempred al the whyle.' It is pretty clear that Chaucer mistook Boccaccio's Voluttade (Pleasure) for Volôtade = Volontade (Will).

217-261. The parallel passage is in the Knights Tale,
 A 1925-32, but it requires close attention to discover this.
 Compare them thus : 218 = K. T. 1925 ; 219 = K. T. 1932 ; 225-
 227 = K. T. 1925-7 ; 232 = K. T. 1918, 1931 ; 246 = K. T. 1918 ;
 248 = K. T. 1922 ; 252 = K. T. 1928 ; 261 = K. T. 1926.

279. For lete, pres. tense, read leet, past tense.
292. As to Scylla, cf. Leg. Good Women, 1910, and my note. 299-301. Repeated (as to sense) from III. 821-6.
322. See note to l. 386, p. 304.
349. 'A kite is . . . a coward, and fearefull among great birds'; Batman on Bartholomè, lib. xii. c. 26.
353. Flyes, the right reading, occurs in one MS. only, and in Thynne. We know it to be right by comparing it with Ch. Boeth. bk. iii. met. 7—'these flyinge flyes that we clepen been'—and Cant. Tales, I 468—'thise flyes that men clepeth bees.' The other MSS. have foulis or bryddis!
356. 'Quhois angell fedderis as the pacok schone'; Dunbar, ed. Small, 174. 12 (The Twa Luves).
360. (note on p. 301, ll. 1-3); quoted from Bell's Chaucer.
363. I regret to say that 'the crowe with voice of care' is due to a misconception of Vergil's Georg. i. 388—'Nunc plena cornix pluuiam uocat improba uoce.' Precisely the same error occurs in Batman on Bartholomè, lib. xii. c. 9, where Vergil's line is explained by—'That is to understande, Nowe the Crowe calleth rayne with an elenge voyce.'
- 419, 420. Cf. XXII. 90, 91; on p. 221.
481. F. has short; but the pl. form shorte is in Gg.
599. Cf. 'similesque auibus sunt, quârum intuitum nox inluminat dies caecat'; Boethius, Cons. Phil. lib. iv. pr. 4.

VI. MERCILES BEAUTE.

I. I have shewn above (p. 478) that Lydgate's 'Ballade' is really two Ballades.

Note the rimes in this poem. The words sustene, kene, grene, quene, all have close long e, and rime with sene, with variable long e. Again, in part II, the words pleyne, cheyne, feyne, attheyne, peyne, all have diphthongal ey. In part III, lene, bene, mene, clene, mene, all have open long e, though perhaps mene is variable. Chaucer has regard to the quality of his vowels.

VII. ANELIDA AND ARCITE.

15. I prefer the form Polymnia, in Thynne (1532).

21. W. Greif (Die mittelalterlichen Bearbeitungen der Trojanersage, Marburg, 1886) thinks that Dictys got some of his information (especially as to Palamedes) from a lost work by Corinnus. See his Essay, pp. 242, 244. For Palamedes, see Lydgate's Troy-book, bk. v. c. 36.

91. Read trust, i. e. trusteth; the contracted form.

219. Cf. Leg. Good Women, ll. 1235, 1875.

237. Repeated from XXI. 50.

256-271; 317-332. These stanzas with reversed rimes were called virelayes. Chaucer says that he wrote several, but only these two examples are known to be his.

294. 'Weyve thou joye'; Ch. Boeth. bk. i. met. 7.

299. Observe the rimes: néde (A.S. nēod), béde (A.S. bēodan), méde (A.S. mēd), héde (A.S. hēdan) have long close e; from A.S. ēo, ē. The other words have open e, from A.S. ē.

315. From Rom. Rose, 9955-6; as pointed out by Köppel:—

'N'est donc bien privee tel beste
Qui de foir est toute preste.'

333. Borrowed from XXI. 1, 8, 9; but varied.

IX. HOUSE OF FAME.

See Koch's review of Willert, in Anglia, iv. 24 (appendix).

147. In, into, unto; see note to l. 366 (p. 330).

177. In l. 192 below, we find some, which seems to shew that Chaucer was aware of the identity of Iulus and Ascanius. Cf. Leg. Good Women, 941.

265. From Rom. Rose, 12343:—'Mès ja ne verrés d'aparence
Conclurre bonne consequence.'

359. The line 'Cras poterunt fieri turpia sicut heri' is the 10th of 14 Leonine (or riming) verses, printed at the end of Caxton's Troy-book, beginning—'Pergama flere volo, fato Danais data solo.' They are of quite late date.

399. We learn from Troil. i. 654, that Chaucer actually supposed 'Oënone' to have four syllables. So here; read—'And Paris to Oënone'; with 8 syllables.

503-4. My former ed. has bright, sight. But read brighte, sighte. Brighte is an adverb; and sight is from A.S. gesih̄ce.

511. I do not think that listeth is here the imp. plural.

516. The name Alcanor, in Vergil, does not help us.

534. Machault has much the same passage again, in his Confort d'Ami (ed. Tarbè, p. 97):—

'Maintes fois laist aler la foudre
Qui tout destruit et met en poudre.'

588. Cf. also Vergil, Aen. i. 28.

730. Really founded on a passage in Boethius, bk. iii. pr. 11, which is also imitated in Rom. Rose, 16963-9.

830. It were better to read Than, instead of That.

859. Cf. Cant. Tales, F 726.

917. At point devys, with great exactness; see Rom. Rose, 830, 1215.

1007. The note on pp. 345-6 shews, of course, that the right reading is not Athalantes, but Atlantes.

1075-6. See Dante, Purg. xxv. 88-96.

1114. The right reading is site, a word which occurs in Chaucer's Astrolabe, pt. ii. § 17.

1119. to clymbe hit, i. e. to climb the rock.

1222. The best illustrative quotation is the description of a feast in Allit. Poems, ed. Morris, B. 1402-1415. In l. 1405, we have mention of 'Burnes berande the bredes upon brode skeles,' i. e. men carrying the roast meats on broad dishes; whilst in ll. 1413-5, we are told that the feast was accompanied with the sound of nakers (kettle-drums), pipes, timbrels, tabours, cymbals, and bells. As to the rime of brede (G. Braten) with rede, a reed (A.S. hrēod), I have proved the remarkable fact that Chaucer allows a long close e (from A.S. ēo) to rime with an e derived from A.S. æ (as in bræde) provided that the A.S. æ answers to G. a, but not else (except very rarely); see Ch. Works, vol. vi. p. xxxix.

1223. G. Douglas has both horne and lilt in his tr. of Vergil, Aen. vii. 513-4; ed. Small, iii. 117.

1224-6. Imitated by Lydgate, Temple of Glas, ed. Schick, p. 64, ll. 417-422; and by Spenser, Shep. Kal. Feb. 35-40, F. Q. vi. 9. 5.

1227. Another baseless guess is that Atiteris means Tityrus. Willert imagines a reference to the so-called Ecloga Theoduli, a Latin poem of the seventh or eighth century, in which Alithia (Truth) and Pseustis (Falsehood) contend about heathendom and Christianity. This is not very conclusive; and, if it accounts for Pseustis, it does not account for Atiteris.

1273. Hermes (like Eacides in l. 1206) is an epithet; Hermes Ballenus = Belinuos, who adopted the teaching of Hermes; see The Academy, Apr. 27, 1889, p. 287.

1275. 'I saw there, and knew by name, those that, by means of such art, cause men to have fame.'

1317, 1318. Better spellings are losenges, freneges.

1329-35. Imitated from Rom. Rose, 6762-4:—

'Mais ne voil or de li plus dire;
Car qui tretout vodroit retraire,
Ung grant livre en convendroit faire.'

1342. From this point several hints are taken from Boccaccio's Amorosa Visione, which (iv. 9) introduces us to a hall resplendent with gold (Köppel).

1360. Compare Boccaccio, Amor. Vis. vi. 43, 48, 49 :—

'Tutti li soprastava veramente
Di ricche pietre coronata e d'oro.' . .

'Odi: che mai natura con sua arte
Forma non diede a si bella figura.' . .

'Donna pareva li leggiadra e pura'; &c.

1368. Cf. Boethius, in Chaucer's translation; bk. i. pr. 1. 8.

1386. Cf. ounded, Troil. iv. 736; and Rom. Rose, 21399:—

'Et voit ses biaux crins blondoians
Comme undes ensemble ondoians.'

1393. 'Di ricche pietre coronata e d'oro'; Am. Vis. vi. 49.

1483. 'Virgilio Mantovan infra costoro'; Am. Vis. v. 7.

1486. Cf. Am. Vis. v. 25 :—

'Eravi Ovidio, lo quale poetando
Iscrisse tanti versi per amore.'

1499. Cf. Am. Vis. v. 19 :—

'A' quai Lucan seguitava, ne' cui
Atti pareva ch'ancora la battaglia
Di Cesare narrasse, e di colui
Magno Pompeo chiamato.'

1674.

'Et que partout alast la trace
De leur valour, de leur bonté.'

Machault, ed. Tarbé, i. 43.

1747. Cf. 'for pure wood,' Rom. Rose, 276.

1759-62. Cf. Rom. de la Rose, 9887-90 :—

'Si se sunt maint vanté de maintes,
Par paroles fauces et faintes,
Dont les cors avoir ne pooient,
Lor non à grant tort diffamoient.'

1908. The use of bringes for bringest is so suspicious, that the passage is probably corrupt. Koch would read—

'Which than be, lo! thise tydinges,
That bringe thee hider, and these thinges
That thou wilt here.'

1940. The passage from Caxton occurs in the Life of Saint Silvester.

1970. Read—'Of estáts and éek.' The e in estat is light; cf. E. state.

2017. Read froit=fruit. The spelling froyte occurs in the Petworth MS., in Man of Lawes Tale, 411.

2115. Cf. Cant. Tales, A 2078; read wanie rather than wane.

X. THE FORMER AGE.

1. 'Decaearchus . . . refert sub Saturno, id est, in aureo saeculo, cum omnia humus funderet, nullum comedisse carnes; sed uniuersos uixisse frugibus et pomis, quae sponte terra gignebat'; Hieronymus contra Iouinianum, lib. ii.

4. by usage, ordinarily; without being tilled.

5. with outrage, beyond all measure.

11. not half y-nough, not half of the crop; some was wasted.

20. 'No one had yet learnt how to distinguish false coins from true ones.'

33. From Jerome against Jovinian, lib. ii. (cf. note to l. 1 just above): 'Diogenes tyrannos et subuersiones urbium, bellaque uel hostilia, uel ciuilia, non pro simplici uictu holerum promorumque, sed pro carnibus et epularum deliciis asserit excitari.'

XI. FORTUNE.

25. From Boethius, bk. ii. pr. 4. 79:—'nothing is wrecched but whan thou wenest it.'

XII. TRUTH.

2. The reading which I give—Suffyce unto thy good—seems to be right. For Gower (ed. Pauli, ii. 393) quotes from Seneca: 'Si res tue tibi non sufficient, fac ut rebus tuis sufficias,' which he translates thus:—

'But-if the good suffyce
Unto the lyking of the [thy?] wille,
Withdraw thy lust and hold thee stille,
And be to thy good suffisaunt.'

19. 'Os homini sublime dedit'; Ovid, Met. i. 85. For of in the sense of for (after thank) cf. C. T., B 1113. In Ratis Raving, ed. Lumby, p. 10, we have:—'Lyft wp thyne Ene [not orne], and thank thi god of al.'

XIII. GENTILESSE.

5. 'Dignitees apertienen . . . to vertu'; Boeth. iii. pr. 4. 25.

8. Cf. also Dante, Purg. vii. 121-3, to which Chaucer refers in his Wife of Bath's Tale (D 1128).

20. Koch prefers can to wol, and would read—'That maketh him his heir that can him queme.'

XVI. LENVOY TO SCOGAN.

14. See note to IV. 96, on p. 276.

17. goddes, i. e. goddess. The e is unemphatic, and dull in sound. Similarly, we find clerkes rimed with derk is; C. T., B 480.

XVII. LENVOY A BUKTON.

19. thy lyf, during thy life. Cf. C. T., D 154-160, to which Chaucer probably refers (among other things) in l. 29.

XVIII. COMPLEYNT OF VENUS.

P. 392. Additional Note. The three French Ballads, which give the original text of this piece, have been discovered, and are printed above, pp. 484, 485.

81. Perhaps read in word instead of word for word; the line is else too long.

XIX. THE COMPLEINT TO HIS EMPTY PURSE.

P. 396, l. 8. I. e. the Envoy is to be dated 1399; not the Poem.

The five-line stanza (of the Envoy) occurs in the Complete Works of Deschamps, i. 45.

XX. PROVERBS.

7. Read Embrac', for the rime; so we have gras for grace in Sir Thopas (B 2021); mis for misse in XXI. 47; sey for seye, III. 1090; say for saye, V. 270. The preservation of the final e in common verbs or verbs of French origin was rather an artificial affair.

XXI. COMPLEINT TO HIS LADY.

33. Cf. 'ye slee me giltelees'; C. T., F 1318.

41. 'Mais le vo'oir de si douce anemie'; Machault, ed. Tarbé, p. 60.

- 47-49. From Boethius ; see note to V. 90, on p. 492.
 56. Supply—'Yow rekketh never wher I flete or sinke';
 from Anelida, 182.
 59. Supply—'For on my wo yow deyneth not to thinke';
 from Anelida, 181.
 130. This resembles Cant. Tales, F 974 and A 2392.
 131. Drope, hope, rime in Troil. i. 939, and in Gower, C. A.,
 ii. 286.
 133. trouble, troubled ; as in Boeth. bk. i. met. 7.

XXII. AN AMOROUS COMPLEINT.

1. Cf. 'Bicomen is the sorowfulleste man' ; C. T., E 2098.
 79, 82. So trewe and freshly newe rime in III. 1227-8.

XXIII. A BALADE OF COMPLEYNT.

20. If we keep the reading here, the sense will be—'I beseech you to hear, my heart's lady' ; but it hardly suits the context so well as dere.

XXIV-XXVII.

- For the text of these Poems, see pp. 464-471 ; and for notes to the same, see pp. 472-5.
